MALLOW BULL SHOW AND SALE.

INCREASED ENTRIES.

From Our Agricultural Correspondent.
MALLOW, Tuesday.

Since it was started nine years ago a steady improvement has taken place in the quality of the stock exhibited at the annual bull show and sale held under the auspices of the Irish Dairy Shorthorn Breeders' Society (North and North-East Cork branches) at Mallow. To-day's fixture not only maintained that reputation, but showed an increase of 65 in the number of entries, which stood at 165. Most of the bulls were remarkable for their size, substance and good colour, being well above the average standard for licensing. In some of the larger classes Messrs. Timothy O'Sullivan and Nicholas Fitzgerald, who awarded the prizes, had a difficult task in placing the winners.

Messrs. D. Toomey and C. C. Maguire were the Inspectors from the Department of Agriculture, and the number of premiums awarded was sixteen. Exhibitors and the promoters of the show were frankly of opinion that the number of premiums should have been larger in view of the quality of the stock. On making inquiry I learned that, from a premium point of view, some otherwise excellent bulls "had too much daylight underneath." In other words, they were too long on the leg, and on that account were regarded as not likely to breed the thick, short-legged, thrifty animals which every farmer should aim at producing for the cross-Channel trade. They had for the most part, as stated, excellent coats of good colour, with plenty of size and substance, but they failed in respect of standing close to the ground.

The entries came from a wide area and some good prices were realised.

Messrs. John V. Burton and W. L. Walsh acted as hon. secretaries, while Mr. P. J. Halliden, secretary of the Society, was also active in carrying out the arrangements.

The day was fine and the attendance large.

THE PRIZE WINNERS.

There were 43 entries in the class for registered dairy bulls calved between 1st September, 1923, and 30th April, 1929, from exhibitors in North Cork whose valuation exceeds £40, and premier honour, as well as the gold medal for the best dairy bull, went to Mr. Joseph Barrett, Castlecor, Kanturk, for the lengthy good-coated roan, Dairy Man, by Bellman—Dairy Girl, a cow whose milk record at three years old was 609 gallons in 41 weeks. This bull was afterwards sold for 63 guineas, the top price of the day. Mr William O'Callaghan, Scarragh, Lombardstown, was second with Lovely Man, a well-balanced roan by Ashgrove Ruth's Heir and out of Lovely Lady II., a 1,033 gallon cow. In the ring she brought only 48 guineas. Mr. D. O'Connor, Copstown Abbey, Mallow, was third with Copstown Comrade, a good-barrelled roan by Roan Baron out of Grange. He was sold for 50 guineas. Mr. T. J. Burton, Mine Hill, Millstreet, was fourth with Minehill Hopeful II.; Mr. J. P. Hegarty, Millstreet, fifth with Liscahane Boy, and Mr. W. O'Callaghan sixth with Baron Cowslip.

Twenty-four made up the class for similar bulls from North Cork exhibitors whose valuation does not exceed £40, and first prize went to Mr. D. M. Lynch, Kippeagh, Millstreet, for Rover, a red February yearling by Farran Highflier—Doll. Mr. Denis Barrow, Scarra, Lombardstown, was second with Ballylad, a useful roan by Ashgrove Ruth's Heir. He was afterwards sold for 40 guineas. Mr. W. Kelleher, Curra, Kanturk, was third with Sonny Boy, a red with little white by Silver Banner and out of a thousand-gallon cow. Mr. M. J. Cronin, Knockbrack, Banteer, was fourth with Knockbrack Rover; Mr. M. O'Sullivan, Rathcoole, Banteer, fifth with Bolomore Monarch, and Mr. John O'Connell, Shandrum, Charleville, sixth with Glengariffe Rambler.

For dairy bulls, confined to members of certain cow-testing associations, and excluding winners in first two classes, Mr. D. Linehan, Boherbue, Banteer, was first with Rambler, by Coilcuill Charming Lad. Mr. J. P. Hegarty was second with Luscahane Boy and Mr. D. M. Lynch third with Rover.

There were 25 entries in the class for twelve to eighteen months old bulls from exhibitors in the North-East Cork area, and first prize, as well as the silver medal for the second-best bull in the showyard, went to Mr. S. Dwane, Kildorrery, for Mologga Cnap, a strong-ribbed light roan by Lehena Surprise and out of Street, a 959-gallon cow. He was sold for 60 guineas, the second highest figure of the day. Fifty guineas were paid for the second prize winner, Garrynoe, by Caragh Lord Deans, from Mr. J. L. Walsh, Fermoy. Third place was filled by Mr. M. O'Farrell, Castletownroche, with the red bull Rover, by Hero, while Mr. M. J. O'Connor, Castletownroche, was fourth with Knockbrack Monarch; Mr. James Quinlan, Mitchelstown, fifth with Ardglare Demos, and Mr. M. O'Farrell sixth with Billy.

There were only seven entries in the class for dairy bulls, twelve to eighteen months old, from exhibitors outside North and North-East Cork. Here Mr. C. Cronin, Meenachaney, Donoughmore, led with Patrick's Day, a level, deep-ribbed roan by Dove—Colleen Ruad. Mr. John Flynn, Kilnacarriga, Lismore, was second with a dark roan, also named Patrick's Day, and sired by Splendour's Champion. His herd companion, Splendour's Pride, was third.

Six turned out in the open class for dairy bulls under twelve months old, and Mr. Alex. Ellis, Woodview, Lismore, was first with Lismore Illustrious, a shapely red of great promise by Millhills Ramsden King. Mr. J. D. O'Connell, Mallow, was second with Drumdowna Champion, a red with plenty of milk in his pedigree. Mr. J. J. Corkery, Coomlegane, Millstreet, was third with Too Late, by Farran Highflier.

In a class of 35 yearling non-registered bulls Mr. John Walsh, Mitchelstown, was first with Red Banner, by Straffan Court Marshal. Mr. E. O'Connor, Buttevant, was second with Conqueror; Mr. John Ahern, Ballyhooly, third with Roan Boy, and Mr. D. Barry, Fermoy, fourth with Good Luck.

Six comprised the class for pure-bred shorthorn bulls, and first prize went to Mr. W. O'Callaghan, Scarragh, for Pomeroy Lord Warden, a red by Inverton Augusta out of Isabella Pomeroy. Mr. A. Ellis, Lismore, was second and third with Lismore Prince Victor and Lismore Sultan respectively.

As an encouragement to farmers to breed approved bulls from their registered dairy cows, fifteen level prizes of £3 each were awarded to non-prize winners in four classes.

THE SALES.

The sale was conducted by Messrs. O'Connor and Stokes, Kanturk, and a steady trade was experienced at fair prices. Premium bulls were most in request, especially those with good dairy pedigrees. As it happened, the champion and reserve champion bulls brought the best prices of the day.

THE CHURCH OF IRELAND.

A stained glass window in memory of Captain James MacGillycuddy Magill and Honoria Elizabeth, his wife, was dedicated on Monday last by the Bishop of Limerick in Knockane Church, Co. Kerry. The Service was read by Archdeacon Power, Rector of the parish, and an address was given by the Bishop. The memorial has been erected by the children of Captain and Mrs. Magill, several of whom were present, and greatly adorns the little church, in which for many years members of the family have been worshippers. Among those present were The MacGillycuddy of the Reeks, Dean and Mrs. Rowan, Mrs. Rowan-Hamilton and the Rev. J. R. and Mrs. Campion.

The memorial to the late Dean Hackett will be dedicated in St. Mary's Cathedral, Limerick, on St. Philip and St. James' Day, 1st May.

DUBLIN DISTRICT COURT.

MOTORISTS WHO BREAK LAW INNOCENTLY.

(BEFORE MR. CUSSEN.)

When a number of motorists came before him to answer summonses for having left their cars in unofficial parking places, thereby causing an obstruction, the Justice remarked that in many cases motorists were breaking the law as regards the parking of cars without knowing it.

Mr. Collins, solicitor (defending)—Especially in some parking places. A motorist often parks his car behind a line of cars, but finds himself outside the parking place.

Mr. Cussen—It is now quite impossible to know where these parking places are.

MOTORIST AND A GUARD'S EVIDENCE.

The allegation that a Guard's evidence was "a lie" was made by a defendant in a motoring prosecution.

Mr. Cussen (to the defendant)—When did you become a District Justice? Why should you characterise the evidence of the Guard as a lie? It is for me to decide that. We expect politeness in this court from all. Apologise to the Guard now.

The defendant—I will not.

Mr. Cussen then directed the Guard to take the defendant into custody for contempt of court.

Subsequently the defendant was brought into court on a charge of contempt of court, and was dealt with under the Probation of Offenders Act. He was fined 10s. for the motoring offence.

'BUS MENACE.

DRIVING THROUGH ELEVEN-FEET WIDE AVENUE.

John Clarke, driver of a "Patricia" 'bus, and Henry McKenny, driver of an "Adaline" 'bus, were prosecuted for driving their 'buses in Melbourne avenue, which is a narrow thoroughfare connecting Upper Drumcondra road with Ferguson road and Walsh road.

James P. McKenna, civil servant, said that he was cycling down Melbourne avenue and had to jump off the machine and drag it on to the footpath owing to the suddenness with which the defendants' 'buses came into the avenue.

Guard Lew said that he measured the road and found that it was only eleven feet in width. A school stood at the corner.

Replying to the Justice, the witness said that he considered it very dangerous for 'bus drivers to drive up the avenue.

The defendants admitted that they drove up the avenue, but said that they did not remember seeing the first witness.

Imposing a fine of 20s. on Clarke and 10s. on Kenny, Mr. Cussen said that he would suspend the licence of the next driver who drove up or down Melbourne avenue in future.

GAMING PROSECUTIONS.

"FIFTY-FIFTY" PROFIT ON AUTOMATIC MACHINES.

Albert Tipple, Sarsfield street, was fined £5 for counselling and procuring the services of William Clinton, Eccles street, in the commission of a breach of the Gaming Act (1854) by the use of automatic gaming machines. Clinton was fined 10s. for permitting his shop to be used for the purpose of gaming.

Clinton admitted that the machines were on his premises, but stated that they had since been removed. The money obtained by the machines was shared on a "fifty-fifty" basis.

"HOUSE" FOR CHARITY.

Peter Hedderman, Gloucester street, was fined 40s. for permitting a room at Ardee House, 38 Talbot street, of which he was the occupier, to be used for the game of "House." On a summons for managing the room Leo Elliott, who gave an address off Corporation street, was fined 10s.

Forty men and boys were found playing in the room. For the defence it was stated that part of the proceeds of the game was devoted to charity.

DRAPERY HOUSE ENTERED

CHARGES AGAINST A NEWS-VENDOR.

(BEFORE MR. COLLINS.)

John Kelly (22), newsvendor, living in Summerhill, was charged with conspiring with other persons unknown, and, in pursuit of the conspiracy, with breaking into the drapery establishment of Mr. Cannon, 134 Capel street last Saturday night, and stealing suits of clothes, shirts, boots and other articles to the value of about £15.

Entrance was effected, it was stated, by climbing from the roof of the house next door and breaking the glass in a skylight. When detectives went to the room occupied by Kelly and told him the charge he said that he knew nothing about it. When the room was searched three of the shirts were found in a bed. Kelly said that he had bought the shirts in Talbot street, but afterwards said that he bought them for three shillings from a boy in Summerhill whose name he did not know.

A remand was ordered.

FATAL 'BUS ACCIDENT.

James Murphy, a "Carmel" 'bus driver, was remanded until Thursday next on the charge of having caused the death of Annie House, aged nine years, of St. Enda's road, Terenure, by knocking her down on the previous evening while driving a 'bus towards the city.

It was stated that when arrested and charged Murphy made a statement to the effect that two girls ran across the road in front of his 'bus. The "dumb iron" struck one of them and knocked her down. The girl was removed to hospital in a private motor car. The 'bus pulled up in its own length after the occurrence.

LEAD STOLEN FROM HOUSES.

Frederick Verdon, Summerhill, and James Land, Rutland street, were remanded on a charge of breaking and entering two houses on the North Circular road and stealing therefrom lead to the value of £2 10s.

Detective Scallan said that Verdon, when arrested, made a statement, in the course of which he made certain admissions. Land admitted receiving the lead.

Both accused men were remanded until to-morrow.

GOAT THAT WENT ASTRAY.

Patrick Ryan, North Summer street, and James Land, Upper Rutland street, were remanded on a charge of stealing a goat valued at 30s., the property of Mrs. Mary Houlihan, Amiens street.

The owner said that she grazed the goat at the Sloblands, Fairview, and missed it at the end of last week.

ST. JOHN'S PARISH, SANDYMOUNT.

NEW RECTOR APPOINTED.

The trustees of St. John's Parish, Sandymount, Dublin, met yesterday afternoon, and appointed the Rev. Samuel Randal Sproule Colquhoun, B.A., Rector of Donaghpatrick, Co. Meath, to the Incumbency, which was rendered vacant by the resignation of the Rev. F. S. Le Fanu.

The trustees present were the Right Rev. Dr. Day, Bishop of Ossory; the Earl of Pembroke, Senator H. S. Guinness, Mr. Coote Cummings and Mr. Henry Vernon.

The new Incumbent is the son of a former Archdeacon of Derry. He was educated in Dublin University, where he graduated in 1906, and obtained the Divinity Testimonium in 1908. In that year he was ordained for the curacy of Kilmore, where he remained until 1911. He was Diocesan Curate of Derry and Raphoe from 1911 to 1917, when he was appointed Incumbent of Convoy, Diocese of Raphoe. In 1926 he was nominated to the Incumbency of Donaghpatrick, Diocese of Meath.

THE ARCHITECTURAL ASSOCIATION.

STUDENTS' FEES PRIVILEGE.

At the annual general meeting of the Architectural Association of Ireland, held at 8 Merrion square, Dublin, last night, Mr. W. H. Howard Cooke, the out-going President, drew attention to the privilege which the members of the Association had in respect of University tuition and studio fees, and said that it seemed fairly certain that unless all students attending under the arrangement came forward and paid their fees immediately the privilege, so far as the Architectural Association was concerned, would be withdrawn. On the whole, he thought that the Association's balance sheet was very satisfactory and that the financial position was sound.

The report of the Committee for the year stated that the membership of the Association was now 155, and that of the Treasurer showed a credit balance of £47 15s. 9d. Both reports were adopted.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—President, Mr. A. E. Jones; Vice-President, Mr. Manning D. Robertson; Committee, Miss K. M. Carroll, Messrs. E. D. Buckley, W. H. Cooke, F. B. Craig, J. A. Doyle, L. F. Giron, B. G. Joyce, H. J. Leask and H. V. Millar; Hon. Librarian, Mr. C. F. Higginbotham; Hon. Treasurer, Mr. D. M. Turner; Hon Secretaries, Messrs. D. M. O'Dwyer and C. J. Crowe.

The prizes were awarded to Mr. F. B. Meehan (Royal Institute prize) and Miss S. M. Tindall (A.A. prize).

MRS. BECHER, ROSSCARBERY.

The death took place on Wednesday last at The Precincts, Rosscarbery, Co. Cork, of Mrs. Z. Becher, widow of the Very Rev. Dean Becher. The sadness of the occasion was greatly increased by the absence of her only son, Captain R. I. R. Becher, the Scottish Cameronians, who was with his regiment in Egypt, and, though he is returning by aeroplane, unfortunately he was not able to be present at the last. To him is extended the deepest sympathy in his bereavement.

The funeral, which was large and representative, took place to St. Fagthna's graveyard on Saturday. The Burial Service in the Cathedral was read by the Right Rev. Dr. Dowse, Bishop of Cork, Cloyne and Ross, assisted by the Very Rev. C. A. Webster, D.D., Dean of Ross. During the Service her favourite hymn, "The Resurrection Morning," was sung. Mrs. J. J. Wilson presided at the organ.

WATERFORD HOUSE COLLAPSES.

WORKMEN'S ESCAPE.

Several workmen had narrow escapes when a house suddenly collapsed in Arundel square, Waterford, yesterday. Until recently it was a boarding-house, conducted by a Mrs. Doyle, but was vacated a few days ago, when workmen of Messrs. John Hearne and Sons, builders, started knocking down an adjoining house. The workmen were clearing the débris and a lorry full of red bricks had just moved out yesterday when the house suddenly collapsed with a deafening noise.

Paddy Burke, a labourer, just leaped clear as the building toppled into the street, and other workmen only escaped in the nick of time.

FAIRIES AND FAIRY TALES.

LORE OF THE AGES.

(By "D. H. W.")

ONE hundred and twenty-five years ago a shoemaker's son was born in Denmark, whose name was destined to be remembered when the names of kings and princes are forgotten. The anniversary of his birth has just been celebrated in his native land with the honour due to one who has brought much honour to Denmark. It is not only the Danes who remember him. His name has become a household word all over the world; for the shoemaker's son who was born in April, 1805, was no less a person than Hans Christian Andersen.

The great fairy stories of the world began over tribal fires. They were told by old women in chimney-corners on cold winter's evenings. Then they were told by poets, and by Crusaders returning from the East. When the Moors invaded Spain they brought fresh legends with them. It is odd to think that the four men who have done most to preserve fairy lore for the children of to-day were a shoemaker's son in Denmark, two old German librarians, and an old Frenchman who was Controller-General to Louis XIV.

Hans Andersen, the poet, was rejected at the theatre where he tried to get employment. He tried to become a singer and his voice failed, and it was not until kind friends brought him to the notice of the King of Denmark and had him educated at the public expense that he found his true vocation. Wilhelm and Jakob Grimm were librarians at Göttingen, and Jakob was private librarian to Jerome Bonaparte in the mushroom Kingdom of Westphalia, created by Napoleon. Nearly two hundred years earlier, Charles Perrault started life as a lawyer and ultimately became Controller-General to that most practical of monarchs, Louis XIV. Yet the two Grimms, Perrault and Hans Andersen are responsible for the loveliest fairy tales ever written.

PASSING OF SUPERSTITION.

In the last decade of the seventeenth century, when Perrault wrote his fairy tales, a new era had begun. Superstition, though still rife, was beginning to die out. The superstitious, terror-ridden Middle Ages, when every old woman was a witch and every black cat a demon, were over. The Renaissance had come, the New World had been discovered, the Reformation was a fait accompli. It is true that religious feuds had not yet died, that war, like a ravening beast, still stalked the length and breadth of Europe; but there were a thousand differences, a thousand innovations. It was only in the country that people believed in the old wives' tales now. The more enlightened, instead of believing in them, began to write about them. So some of the old stories—so old that their origin is lost—came to be written and preserved.

The belief in fairies dates back to very ancient times. When the Romans marched through Gaul, two thousand years ago, they found strange signs on the tree-trunks and heard strange stories in the villages. The Romans were a practical people, and they paid little attention. They marched on; they made their roads and built their bridges. Some of the roads and bridges still remain, but so do the strange legends. The fairies have outlived the Empire.

The Danes and the Norsemen came down from the North in their galleys and brought their sagas with them. They brought stories of trolls and elves, as well as of gods and goddesses. The Vikings are dead, and the Viking galleys have crumbled into dust or sunk beneath the sea, but the sagas remain. Mixed with the stories of gods, with the legend of Balder the Beautiful, of Woden and of Freya, are the stories of elves, of elf-kings and elf-princesses, of gnomes and kobolds and trolls. There is the story of the elf-bride that persists in the folk lore of so many countries. Sometimes it has one end and sometimes another. Sometimes the elf-maiden is allowed to stay with her earthly husband and children, but nearly always she has to return to Elfland at last.

IRELAND AND BRITTANY.

Ireland, with Brittany, has been one of the last strongholds of the little people. There are still old men in the country who assure you that they have seen fairies. Sometimes, indeed, the very land itself, a land of rainbow and mist, takes on the aspect of a fairy country, elusive, mystical, and the mountains are fairy mountains, wrapped in fairy mists. It is no wonder that the Irish fairies were tiny, exquisite creatures, scarcely more than a few inches high, so light and transparent that their weight would hardly break a dewdrop if they sat on it. Yet these lovely little creatures were mischievous enough. Woe betide the baby left alone and unattended, and woe betide the mother that left it there. More often than not she would return to find it gone or a changeling left in its place. The fairies were adepts at the stealing of babies.

During the Middle Ages, more than in any other age, people believed in a curious half-world that was neither heaven nor hell—a half-world so much a part of the earth itself that there was actual communication between spirit and mortal. There were fairies and witches. If people believed in black magic, it was only natural that they should believe in white magic, too. The witch-burnings in Geneva, as late as 1515, are ample proof that they believed in witchcraft.

EASTERN LORE.

The Crusaders went to the Holy Land and came back with strange tales of djinns. They, too, spread over Europe, to add to the mass of superstition that had already accumulated. Many of those bold knights who had faced Saracens undaunted were in mortal terror of the supernatural. In the evenings, when the stone corridors no longer rang with the tramp of mailed feet, and great fires blazed in the open fireplaces, weird stories were told by bards and minstrels. The fairy Melusine, building the castle of Lusignan for her mortal husband, was no creature of fantasy, but a reality. Melusine was doomed once a week to turn into a serpent, and it was long before her husband discovered her secret. Then, one fatal day, he arrived unexpectedly when the transformation was taking place, and their happiness was at an end. Melusine disappeared for ever, only to be seen by the people when any event of great moment was to happen to them. She was merely one of many. Gervase of Tilbury, writing in the thirteenth century, said that there was no doubt that men had loved and married fairy brides, whom he calls "fadas." It is the northern legend of the elf-maiden embellished with the decorative art of the age of chivalry.

The fairy princes and princesses were the fairies of the poets. The real fairies of the country people were the elves who stole the children, who laid a spell upon the butter and overturned the cream. Shakespeare's Puck is taken from Robin Goodfellow, most famous of these imps. Many a busy housewife put down the loss of butter or cream to the depredations of the ubiquitous Robin. There was little difference between the English and the Irish fairies—little difference between the German gnome, hiding away his golden treasure in the depths of the earth, and the Irish leprechaun. For many a long year after the belief in Melusine and Merlin had died the country people watched for Robin Goodfellow and trembled at the thought of changeling babies. For many a long day the northern peoples believed in the white elves of the air and the brown elves of the earth, while, even nearer home, men believed that cattle dying in the fields had been shot by elf-arrows.

PERRAULT AND THE GRIMMS.

The first fairy tales appear as folk-lore, told by word of mouth. About the end of the sixteenth century a book by an Italian named Streporola was translated into French. It is not particularly noteworthy, except for the fact that here we find for the first time a little story named "Le Chat Botté," which is our old friend, "Puss in Boots." Perrault who was born in 1628, was the father of the fairy tale in its present form. His "Histoires ou Contes du Temps Passé" was published in 1697, and in it are our old favourites, "La Barbe Bleue," "La Belle au Bois Dormant," "Le Petit Chaperon Rouge" and "Puss in Boots" once more. Louis XIV.'s Controller-General was a strange parent for Bluebeard, Little Red Riding Hood, and the Sleeping Beauty, but, though other writers followed him, none surpassed him. Madame de Villeneuve produced "Les Contes des Marines" in 1740, and among her stories we find "Beauty and the Beast." The fairy tale had taken a definite lease of life.

At the beginning of the nineteenth century the brothers Grimm began their work. For sixty years they laboured in rooms next door to one another, these two clever, unworldly men who were librarians first at Cassel and then at Göttingen. Jakob Grimm was librarian to Jerome Bonaparte before the Allies sent him packing and dismembered his Kingdom. He was also secretary to the Elector of Hesse at the Congress of Vienna, and he was sent to Paris, after peace was declared, to fetch back the books which the French Army of Occupation had removed during the wars. Later he and Wilhelm settled down to their life-long partnership, out of which arose "Hansel and Gretel," "The Twelve Dancing Princesses," and the other lovely fairy tales that have made their names so renowned.

HANS ANDERSEN.

Hans Andersen, whose anniversary has just been celebrated, died in 1875. In his native village he was known in his youth as the "comedy writer," but it is his fairy tales that have made him renowned—some taken from old legends and some the result of his own delicate imagination. There must be few children who do not know the Ice Maiden, or the Little Mermaid or the story of the little red shoes that went on dancing.

Fairies, elves, brownies, gnomes, ogres and witches—soon they will be found only between the pages of a book. Every year the old beliefs grow fainter. The day has gone when you can find "an excellent way to gett a fayrie," with a broad square "christall or Venice glasse," laid in "the bloude of a white henne, three Wednesdayes and Fridayes." When you have cut the fairy's name on three hazel rods and buried them under a hill where the fairies haunt on a "Wednesdaye," you can call her on the following "Fridaye, at eight or three or ten of clocke, which be good planetts for that turne. . . . And when you have her, binde her to that stone or glasse."

There were compensations for living in the Middle Ages, after all.

DUBLIN HARBOUR NOTES.

A SCHOONER WHICH MADE HISTORY.

(BY OUR HARBOUR CORRESPONDENT.)

Very few shore-going folk would give a second glance to the unpretentious little three-masted schooner, Mary B. Mitchell, at present discharging malt at the end of the South Wall. Yet a photograph of this vessel forms the frontispiece of Keble Chatterton's famous book, "Q-Ships and their Story," and the author describes her as "one of the most famous Q-ships, which rendered splendid service."

Known to the Admiralty as the Q9, the Mary B. Mitchell sailed under three different neutral flags, as convenient, and was, with other aliases, the Mary Y. Jose of Vigo, the Russian Neptun and the French Jeanette. In these various disguises she cruised about the Channel, tempting live bait for any lurking submarine. Concealed in a dummy deckhouse aft was a twelve-pounder gun, under each of two hatches was a six-pounder mounted on a revolving pedestal. In addition, she carried two Lewis guns, a quantity of small arms and an adequate supply of Mills hand grenades.

THE MODUS OPERANDI.

Manned by forty naval ratings tastefully disguised by bristling chins and tattered jerseys, the Q9 would send away the usual "panic party" when attacked, the guns' crew left on board keeping carefully out of sight. When the submarine came within range, an electric bell was pressed, the hinged bulwarks fell outboard and the painted tin sides of the dummy deckhouse collapsed, and the little schooner was cleared for action in three seconds. In this manner seven submarines were definitely accounted for, and it is believed that the total bag was nearer the dozen.

On one occasion the Q9 fought two actions in one day, off Ushant, and was later saved from going ashore by a Norwegian vessel, which, deceived by her neutral ensign, took her in tow. She escaped from the well-meant, but unwelcome, assistance of this vessel later by exhibiting a white ensign over her quarter to a British gunboat in such a way that the Norwegian could not see it. It is said that at one time she had on board the sole survivor of a submarine, a prince of the reigning house of Germany. She had her jibboom, fore and main masts blown out of her on another occasion. During the time when she was commanded by Lieutenant J. Lawrie, R.N.R., D.S.O., D.S.C., she accounted for four submarines in the Bay of Biscay, two off Trevose Head and one in the English Channel.

The Mary B. Mitchell was built in 1892 for Lord Penrhyn by the firm of Paul Rogers, of Carrickfergus. She is a steel topsail schooner, and was fitted with Kelvin motor engines by the Admiralty.

At present she is owned by Captain J. Tyrell, and carries six hands. The sinister hinged bulwarks may yet be seen. Captain Tyrell, himself, had an encounter with a submarine in another schooner during the war, trading between Lisbon and Jersey. After his vessel had been sunk by shellfire, he was fired on while in the lifeboat.

THE NAUTICAL COLLEGE.

The monthly meeting of the Board of Management of the Irish Nautical College and Training School was held on Monday, Mr. David Barry in the chair. Captain R. E. Kellett, in his report, stated that the school was drawing students from every county in Ireland, and was in a very healthy condition. Fifty-four students had attended during the current year, and of these thirty had passed the examinations for masters and mates. Many boys had been indentured on foreign-going steamers, three boys only last week having been placed with Messrs. James Bell, of Hull. The Committee stress the necessity of medical examination and eye-sight tests before boys attempt to go to sea. Only those physically fit may sample the colourful joys of "bilge diving," the esoteric significance of "sujee," and the wonders that can be accomplished when colza oil is allied to bathbrick. Yet all these things must be mastered during the four years which must elapse before such boys return to Dublin to sit for their second mate's "ticket." All information about the ways and means of going to sea may be obtained from Captain Kellett.

At the recent examinations Mr. T. Pritchard passed as mate, and Messrs. B. O'Connor and P. O'Shea as second mate.

The French steamer Grandlieu, 3,289 tons (Captain Jean Morvan), is discharging 4,800 tons of phosphate ore from Bona at the Alexandra Wharf. The Grandlieu was built at Kowloon Docks in 1919 by the Hong Kong and Whampoa Dock Company, as the British Drummer, but was immediately bought over by the French. Captain Morvan last visited Dublin twenty years ago as a boy in a sailing ship. He remembered Sackville street, but says that he has not noticed any change in Dublin during the interval.

Cuckoo!

In other countries it was believed that the cuckoo, when heard for the first time, could tell its questioner how many years he had to live; and this superstition has given rise to many of the mediæval Latin stories.

Up to comparatively recent times, the farm labourers in Shropshire downed their tools when the cuckoo appeared once more; and they spent the rest of the day in merry-making, the popular liquid refreshment being known as "cuckoo ale." In Denmark the bird is questioned by the peasant girls about the number of years that will pass before they marry, while the old folk want to know how much longer they have in this world. The cuckoo is said to answer all these questions quite accurately; but the building season is passing, and she finds she has no time to make a nest for herself. Harassed by all these seekers after knowledge, she is forced to lay her eggs in the nest of some other bird, and no one in Denmark thinks any the worse of her; for they know they have taken up her time.

The Galway Blazers Mastership.

Lord Altamont, who has been elected joint-Master, along with Captain Bowes-Daly, of the Galway Blazers during the coming season, may be trusted to bring much enthusiasm to his duties; for he is a keen follower of hounds, and will prove a popular head of the hunt.

LORD ALTAMONT.

His Christian name of Ulick carries one back to memories of his early relative, the first Earl of Clanricarde, who lived in the sixteenth century and was known as "Ulick of the Heads," 9th Chief of Clanricarde, and was created an Earl by Henry VIII. He is, through the Clanricarde line, a relative of the Earl of Harewood, formerly Viscount Lascelles (the husband of Princess Mary), who is also prominent in the hunting world as Master of the Bramham Moor Hounds.

Lord Altamont is the eldest son of the 6th Marquess of Sligo, and has just passed his 32nd birthday. He was formerly a captain in the Dragoons, and served with distinction in the European War, being awarded the Military Cross for gallant conduct. He served also with the Royal Scots Greys.

Maundy Money.

The distribution of Maundy Money in Westminster Abbey on the day before Good Friday now lacks most of the ceremonial which made it a great annual pageant in bygone centuries. Until the time of Queen Elizabeth the Sovereign in person washed the feet of as many poor folk as he or she had years of life, and afterwards made them presents of food and clothing. The washing ceremony was afterwards remitted to the Bishop of London, and in the eighteenth century was abandoned altogether. Since then, too, the gifts have been tendered in money, special silver coins being minted for the purpose. To these nowadays is added a Treasury note. The gifts, in red and white purses, are distributed by the Lord High Almoner on the King's behalf. The only Sovereign who still adheres to the old ceremony of washing the feet of the poor on Good Friday eve is the King of Spain.

Timber Shortage.

The English Admiral who planted acorns to provide for the Navy of the future could not have foreseen the modern battleship; but that does not detract from the intrinsic value of his hobby. If more people had followed his example during the nineteenth century, the world might not now be threatened with the shortage of timber foreshadowed by Mr. Henry Ford. Ireland, in particular, has been sadly neglected in the matter of afforestation. In 1783 the Irish Parliament provided for the planting of 65,000 trees, a number which had risen to nearly four millions in 1790. Planting was, however, discontinued in 1808, and was not resumed, except for some sporadic efforts on the part of individuals. Giving evidence before the Select Committee on Irish Industries in 1885, Conservator Howitz, a Danish expert, stated that the question of planting Ireland was of great importance, and that, instead of a population of five millions, a proper scheme of afforestation would enable her to support twenty-five millions. This might be considered a mixed blessing, but the policy of the Land Commission in establishing "shelter belts" along the western sea-board is a step in the right direction, and, perhaps, future generations may see the country clothed with forests again.

Clocks in Conflict.

The correspondent who drew my attention some time ago to the persistent conflict of opinion between the various clocks in the centre of Dublin, on which 'bus passengers have to rely, tells me that a sharp difference of opinion seems to have arisen between the time-keepers at the Custom House and the Ballast Office. While, on Sunday afternoon, the Ballast Office clock told him that it was 5.25, the Custom House time-piece announced that it was 4.25. He wants to know if this indicates a fixed difference of opinion between the Government and the Port and Docks Board—or whether it merely shows that there is still some hesitation in official circles about the acceptance of a Western-European time. Perhaps, however, the difference of opinion may have been adjusted since my friend made his observations.

An Irish Custom.

In a certain Midland county of Ireland, the children are very busy this week making their collections of eggs from the farmers of the district, or, rather, from the farmers' wives.

All through the week before Easter the mistress of every farmhouse there has a small store of eggs put by in readiness for the demands of the little groups of children who come out of the towns and villages and ask for their "Aisther coobogue"—at least that is what it sounds like.

Armed with baskets and tin cans, these youngsters make quite a goodly collection of eggs, and there is feasting in the town cottages on Easter Sunday. The shells of the eggs are carefully gathered up by the children who collect them, and they are coloured in readiness for the setting up of a decorated May bush at the outskirts of the town, where, on the first of May, country people must again pay toll before they can pass down the street.

Trophies of Waterloo.

Many and various are the ways in which a man's greatness is reflected by the world. One feels almost a sense of shame when one reads how, only about two years after his fall, the personal possessions of Napoleon, taken at Waterloo, were eagerly bought up in the presence of a numerous fashionable party of bidders at "the Museum in Piccadilly." The prices are interesting. The carriage fetched £168, a snuff-box £166 19s. 6d., a pair of opera glasses, £5 5s. All the little trivial things were pounced upon. Napoleon's "old slippers" were bought for £1, his shirt for £2 5s., an old pocket-handkerchief for £1 11s. 6d., a collar, or stock, for £1 17s. Nothing is sacred on such occasions, and nothing too trivial. The great Emperor's shaving brush and razor and comb are knocked down to the highest bidder, and a pitiful "piece of sponge" is handed over for 17s. 6d.

The Luck of Five.

Yachtsmen are earnestly hoping that the reputed luck of five will hold good this year, for it will be during the coming summer that Sir Thomas Lipton will make his attempt with Shamrock V. to win back the America Cup. That trophy was won by the United States eighty years ago, and they have succeeded in keeping it ever since.

Shamrock V., which was launched on Monday at Gosport, has been built to the design of Mr. Charles Nicholson. She has been described as the most beautiful yacht of her size that has ever been built, and it is expected that she will be the speediest craft of her class that has been built in an English yard.

SIR T. LIPTON.

The man in the street hardly realises the size and strength of a yacht like Shamrock V. or her rivals. Such craft provide luxurious accommodation for officers and crew, and are capable of withstanding the severe buffetting experienced on an Atlantic crossing.

Costly Failures.

Yacht racing with craft of the Shamrock V. class is reserved as the sport of millionaires. Sir "Tommy" declared recently that in his attempts to recover the America Cup he has spent about £400,000. This sum has, of course, covered the cost of maintenance and wages for the periods during which the yachts were not racing.

This year Shamrock V. will have a much better chance of winning the America Cup than her predecessors. Heretofore, American yachts had been built with a view only to speed. They were distinctly flimsy, whereas the Shamrocks were thoroughly seaworthy craft. Shamrick V. will, however, race against a rival built of corresponding structural heaviness; consequently, if winds are light during the race both yachts will be under an equal disadvantage.

The Glen of the Naul.

To those who are fond of out-of-the-way excursions not too far from Dublin, writes a correspondent, I would recommend a visit to the lovely Glen of the Naul, on the confines of County Dublin and Meath. It can easily be reached by 'bus from Dublin, but, having arrived in the neighbourhood, it is well to make the journey through the Glen on foot. The dark Castle of the Naul, which is said to have been erected by Stephen de Crues in the reign of King John, commands the Dublin end of the valley, and on one side there is a range of precipices, known as the Roches. Near the summits of these cliffs are several natural caverns, which had an unpleasant reputation in ancient times. It was here that the notorious robber, Shaun Kittogue, or Left-handed Jack, lived with an Amazonian woman as powerful and daring as himself. For years this remarkable pair, from their almost inaccessible retreat, preyed upon the surrounding country, until, eventually, an expedition was organised and the two marauders were captured and duly executed. The Glen is watered by a pleasant stream, which finds its way into the sea at Knockingen.

After Fifty Years' Service.

Mr. Francis S. Sheridan, I.S.O., barrister-at-law, who last week was made the recipient of a presentation on the occasion of his retirement from the post of Second Secretary of the Irish Land Commission, after forty-nine years in the public service, is now practising at the Irish Bar, to which he was called in Trinity Term, 1913. In the same year Mr. Sheridan was elected auditor of the Law Students' Debating Society of Ireland, and had the remarkable distinction of being awarded the following medals in debates by that Society:—The Charles Kendal Bushe and David Lynch medals for Legal Debate, the FitzGibbon Gold Medal for Legal Practice, the President's Medal for Legal Composition, the O'Hagan Silver Medal for Oratory, and the Lord Chancellor's Prize for Oratory and Legal Debate combined. When elected auditor of the Society Mr. Sheridan delivered his inaugural address on "The Law in its Relation to Aerial Navigation," displaying a keen perception in regard to the future of the air as a means of transport.

MR. F S. SHERIDAN.

A Scots Brigade.

Apropos of a recent paper read before the Royal Irish Academy on the colours borne by the Irish regiments in the service of France, a Scottish friend tells me that the Irish were not the only nation of Celtic origin who had national brigades, like the "Wild Geese," in Continental armies. For several centuries, he says, there was a famous Scots Brigade in the wars in the Low Countries, and the link it made between Scotland and Holland was nearly as strong as the still older link between Scotland and France.

This connection between the two countries is now to be commemorated by the placing of stained glass windows in the old Scots Kirk in Rotterdam, founded in 1643. The present minister of the Scots Kirk is the Rev. Dr. James Brown, and he and his congregation are busily engaged in working out the details of the memorial scheme. A well-known Dutch artist has been entrusted with the designing and execution of the windows, and it is hoped to unveil and dedicate them in 1933 on the two hundred and ninetieth anniversary of the foundation of the Scots Kirk.

Affairs of Honour.

The statement attributed to the late Mr. Bertrand, the fencing expert, that, if duelling had not been abandoned in these islands, there might have been a little blood spilt, but there would have been a great saving in lawyer's fees, recalls the story of Theodore Hook's duel, when he was Treasurer of Mauritius in 1814. The affair was bloodless, but Hook was sent for and severely reprimanded by the Governor, who threatened him with dismissal if anything of the kind occurred again. "But, sir," said Hook, "surely there are occasions when the 'Gothic appeal to arms' may be necessary?" "Such occasions must be avoided," was the reply. "But," continued Hook pertinaciously, "it is not always in a man's power to avoid insult. Supposing, for example, a person were to address you publicly, and say that he thought you were a meddling, impertinent upstart, what course would be left for you to pursue?" "I can't conceive such a case possible, sir." "Can't you, indeed!" said Hook. "I can—very. I wish you good morning."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

GREATER DUBLIN.

THE NORTHERN COASTAL DISTRICT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—On the 26th March you were good enough to publish a statement in which we, as ratepayers in the northern coastal area, joined with residents of the southern coastal districts in formulating the proposal that administrative councils should be set up for the northern and southern coastal districts, and linked up with the new County Borough of Dublin by means of a conjoint board to control such obviously common services as water supply, sewerage and housing. As it would now appear to be probable that the principle of such a conjoint board will be applied to the County Borough of Dublin and the "Borough of Dun Laoghaire," we desire to stress the importance of the proposal for a northern coastal authority.

In the first place, it is necessary to say that the special provision which is contained in Section 87 of the bill, which authorises and invites the Urban District Council of Howth to seek an extension of its boundaries after the expiration of a year, is a proposal which, for many reasons, is unlikely to lead to any adequate unification of urban service in the seaside districts which lie between Dollymount and Malahide. We are satisfied that the rent-payers of Howth will decline to accept the new and large liabilities which would be involved in any substantial extension of their present urban boundaries.

The clear alternatives, therefore, which must be faced, if anything is to be done to provide urgently required urban services for Raheny, Coolock, Baldoyle, Portmarnock and Malahide are:—

(1) That the boundaries of the County Borough of Dublin should be extended, as proposed by the Greater Dublin Commission, to include these districts.
(2) The creation of a Northern Coastal Council, as proposed in our previous communication.

As between these alternatives there can be no reasonable doubt that the immediate requirements of the residents, and adequate provision for the northward growth of the city which is now taking place, would be most effectively catered for by the creation of a comprehensive urban district, with a representative council and manager. It is only those who are familiar, as we are, with the primitive and chaotic condition of local services in the whole district who can appreciate the urgent necessity that exists for unification. Even the most casual inspection of Portmarnock (with a very precarious water supply and no sewerage facilities of any kind) during any week-end in the summer months, or Baldoyle (denied either water supply or sewerage services) at any time of the year, or of Raheny and its surroundings (now within twelve minutes' 'bus journey from O'Connell Bridge), without urban services of any kind, will suffice to convince any observer of two things. First, prevailing conditions in the district menace the health and well-being of the inhabitants, and are such as to prevent the natural and desirable development of the whole area for residential and pleasure purposes. Secondly, local administrative organisations and knowledge are necessary for its development.

We, therefore, most earnestly urge the Special Committee to which the whole question has now been referred that they should decide in favour of a northern coastal urban district to be linked up by means of the proposed Conjoint Board with the city and the southern coastal urban district for the common services we have named. We observe that the Dublin civic loan of £800,000, which was so readily subscribed within the last few days, was mainly to finance housing, water supply and sewerage schemes. A very small increase in the amount of that loan would have provided a sufficient sum for similar purposes in the northern coastal area. The provision of such necessary capital by Howth Urban District Council or by the ratepayers in the present surrounding rural districts would be extremely difficult and probably impossible.

For these and other reasons, too numerous to set out, we say that the interests of the new county borough and of the coastal district alike demand the amendment of the bill in the sense that we have indicated.—Yours, etc.,

"THE BOROUGH OF DUN LAOGHAIRE."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—On behalf of those who have spent several years in promoting the establishment of a southern coastal borough, to include Blackrock, Dun Laoghaire, Dalkey, Killiney, and their surrounding urbanised districts, I wish to say how greatly the leading articles upon the Greater Dublin Bill in the Irish Times have been appreciated. If it were necessary to urge you to continue your support of the view that the coastal district should have its own local administration—linked up by a conjoint board for certain common services with the new city and a northern coastal district—I would point out that the people of the whole districts concerned are practically unanimous in favour of a local, as against a centralised and overloaded, system of administration. I would lay stress upon the degree of success which, even under four separate bodies, has been achieved in the coastal townships during many long and difficult years; and I would point out that the creation of a borough or urban district, if linked up, in the way which is now proposed, with the city, so far from being opposed to the development of a Greater Dublin, may prove the safest and surest method of bringing a really Greater Dublin into existence.

The Southern Borough, if it is to have a real chance to succeed, must include a much greater area than the four townships as proposed in the bill. If any other city than Dublin had such opportunities of building developments as exist on both sides of the Dublin-Bray road from Rathmines to Shankill, I cannot believe that it would hesitate to take advantage of its opportunities. If these unrivalled and undeveloped districts are to be left, as the bill proposes, to be administered by the new County Council, little, if any, progress need be looked for. The new County Council—in which the southern townships will cease to be represented—will be much more a body of farming representatives than the existing Council. It is no disrespect to such representatives (many of whom are highly esteemed colleagues of mine on the present County Council) to say that their principal interest must lie in the development of purely agricultural districts. Such a body would, therefore, not have the outlook, the knowledge or the necessary financial resources with which to develop the new wing of the city which even now has begun to develop along the southern slopes of Dublin Mountains.—Yours, etc.,

RATES OF INCOME TAX.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—The following passage in your leading article, commenting on the British Budget, is, I think, open to misconstruction:—"Where the Saorstat scores, however, is in respect of income tax. The standard rate here is 3s., as against 4s. 6d. in Great Britain and the Six Counties."

It is quite true, as you point out, that a wealthy resident in the Free State pays less income tax than he would as a citizen of Great Britain. The true comparison, however, is between people of moderate incomes in one country with those similarly circumstanced in the other. Let us see how the Saorstat "scores" when this test is applied.

Take the case of a married man, with two children under sixteen years and an earned income of £450. In Great Britain his allowances will amount to £400 (one-sixth of income, £75; personal allowance, £225; children, £100). He is taxed on the difference, £50, at the rate of 2s. He therefore pays £5. In the Saorstat his allowances would be £333 (one-tenth of income, £45; personal allowance, £225; children, £63). He is taxed, therefore, on £117 at the rate of 1s. 6d. He pays £8 15s. 6d.—nearly £4 more than if he were resident in Great Britain.

On the lower income of £400 the comparison is even more striking, and from higher incomes of £500 and £550 the Free State still extracts more tax than these would yield across the water. Go higher, and you will still find that the advantage to the taxpayer in the country with the 3s. standard rate over his neighbour with a standard rate of 4s. 6d. is quite illusory. No citizen of the Saorstat should lose sight of the fact that, until the Government brings up the scale of allowances off income to the British level, a simple comparison between the standard rates of the two countries is utterly fallacious.—Yours, etc.,

FRANCE'S IRISH TROOPS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—My attention has been called to a letter, which appeared in yesterday's issue of the Irish Times, with reference to the paper I read, a few days ago, at the quarterly meeting of the Royal Society of Antiquaries of Ireland, on "The colours of some of the Irish regiments in the service of France." Although I was somewhat disappointed at not finding in the letter in question any new information on the subject I dealt with in my lecture—the extracts given by its author from Lemau de la Jaisse's Military Directory for the year 1739 having been, of course, duly quoted and commented upon by me, as is clearly shown in the lengthy account of my paper published in the Irish Times of the 9th—I would not trespass on the valuable space of your columns had not Mr. Byrne so mutilated the French eighteenth century writer's description of the colours borne by the few Irish regiments in the service of France, which survived the great reform of 1698, as to leave the reader under the erroneous impression that, with the exception of Fitz James's Regiment of Horse, all those corps only flew white ensigns adorned with more or less elaborate devices painted in gold.

Besides those white Drapeaux-Colonels, in all probability adopted by the Irish regiments only after their incorporation with Louis XIV.'s army in 1698, for the purpose of conforming with the usage in force in that army since the year 1661, each regiment was provided with two stand of regimental colours or Drapeaux d'Ordonnance—also described by Lemau de la Jaisse—which were peculiar to, and characteristic of, each particular corps. Why Mr. Byrne passed these over in silence, I cannot tell, but, be this as it may, readers interested in the subject will find a full account of them in my paper when it appears in print.

It is a well-known fact that both King James's allies and enemies regarded the Irish troops which followed him to France, after the conclusion of the Treaty of Limerick, as belonging to him de jure as well as de facto. The visible symbol of this ownership did not consist, as Mr. Byrne seems to think, in the crown or crowns which figured only on the colours of some of the regiments, but in the St. George's Cross which figured on all except on the standards of Fitz James's Regiment of Horse, which, as I have pointed out in my lecture, "were of a pattern common, at the time, to most French cavalry corps." As to the "golden harp" emblazoned in the centre of the St. George's Cross on the colours of the three regiments originally composing Mountcashel's brigade, I would very much like to know on what foundation rests the opinion expressed by Mr. Byrne that it "was probably an afterthought." Does this mean he believes that the harp was added to the colours of the three regiments in question only after the adoption of the well-known Latin motto, which, curiously enough, is not included in Lemau de la Jaisse's descriptions, although it effectively figured on the flags long before the first edition of the Abrégé de la Carte Générale du Militaire de France was ever published? Perhaps, more fortunate than Captain Malaguti and I, Mr. Byrne has succeeded in finding documentary evidence showing exactly when the regiments of Mountcashel, Clare and Dillon were first provided with the very characteristic colours under which they achieved so much distinction on the battlefields of Flanders, Germany, Italy and Spain.—Yours, etc.,

"THE HOUSE THAT JACK BUILT."

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, Tuesday.

The popular revue, "The House that Jack Built," has been removed from the Adelphi Theatre to the Winter Garden, where it opened last night with great success. The feature of the evening was the reappearance of Miss Norah Blaney and Miss Gwen Farrar together after a severance of several years. They achieved success immediately by singing "We'll try to cling together, too clever to sever again," and also with a skit on "Mickey the Mouse."

The other items of a most delightful entertainment were continued, and at the fall of the curtain Mr. Jack Hulbert, the star of the revue, was given an ovation.

Supposing you could bend down now and, between finger and thumb, quite painlessly, just pick out that old, tormenting corn—root and all. What instant relief you would feel! Well, take one or two Radox foot-baths, and this fancy will be a fact! You'll soon be inspecting the vicious pointed root of that old offender, and glorying in your conquest. And when you see the deep cavity it has left, you'll cease to wonder why cutting and plasters didn't move it. Read this letter:—

"For nearly twenty years I have been troubled with (I think) the most atrocious corn which ever grew. I tried all kinds of things, but they were only of slight avail. At last I have got rid of it with the aid of Radox Salts. I use them in a footbath, and find nothing to equal them, as I am on my feet many hours a day." (Miss) B. A., Lincoln. 19th March, 1930.

You may not know what a protein salt is, but any chemist does, and he will understand how in a Radox Salts footbath the hard skin of the corn combines with the Radox Salts to form a protein salt of the corn itself. And any chemist knows that this protein salt dissolves in water. He will see at once why this scientific treatment must so loosen the corn that it can be lifted out bodily. But prove it yourself to your profit.

"OLIVET TO CALVARY" SUNG TO LARGE CONGREGATION.

The sacred cantata, "Olivet to Calvary" (Maunder), was sung in Carrickmines Church, County Dublin, last night by the choir of St. Matthias's Church, Dublin, which was augmented for the occasion. Mr. Bridge Whelan was at the organ, and the soloists were: Miss E. M. Waugh (soprano), Mr. W. R. Maddison (tenor), and Mr. R. M. Irwin (baritone). The solo work was excellent, while the ensemble was delightfully harmonious, and the beautiful music was much appreciated by a fairly large congregation.

THE COST OF LIVING.

The cost of living figure in Great Britain on April 1st was 57 per cent., as compared with 61 per cent. a month ago and 62 per cent. a year ago. For food alone the figure was 43, compared with 50 both a month and a year ago. The falls in percentage were largely seasonal. The principal commodities showing important reductions were eggs, milk, butter, bread, flour and potatoes.

THE GOVERNMENT'S CONTRIBUTION.

COST OF THE POLICE FORCE.

In the Northern House of Commons yesterday, Sir Dawson Bates, in presenting the estimates for the Ministry of Home Affairs, said that the staff of the Ministry (180) remained the same as last year, notwithstanding the additional duties imposed on the Ministry in connection with de-rating.

Regarding the international motor race, they were asking for £350 towards the recoupment of expenditure on certain works which are to be undertaken by the local authorities in connection with the race. He referred particularly to the provision of barricades at the dangerous points. It would be necessary at a later stage to introduce a supplementary estimate concerning the full Government charge in connection with the race, as the Government had agreed to bear the cost—approximately £1,175—of widening the road opposite the grand stand in order to give a larger pit area, and so minimise the risk of accident by collision between cars emerging from the pits and those in the race. The Road Fund would bear £1,320 of the cost of improving the road, but 800 policemen would be employed to keep the course, the expense being almost £1,000.

These races had been successful to a marked degree in the past, and had attracted to Northern Ireland a considerable number of tourists, with resultant gain to the community as a whole.

"I trust," he said, "that the forthcoming race will be a greater success, if possible, and I am sure that the Committee will give the Government their support in connection with the making of the necessary provision for ensuring that the race is run under proper circumstances, with due regard to the safety of the spectators."

Sir Dawson said that it was estimated in 1921 that they had a housing shortage in Belfast alone of at least 10,000 houses, and the housing shortage in Northern Ireland was in the neighbourhood of 25,000. Up to the 31st March last a total of 17,528 houses had been completed with Government assistance.

With regard to the question of the treatment of tuberculosis, in regard to which the Government contributed 50 per cent. of the expenses of local authorities, the death-rate from tuberculosis had been steadily declining in recent years, being only 1.40 per 1,000 in 1928 as compared with 2.54 per 1,000 in 1918.

THE OMNIBUS TRAFFIC.

Referring to omnibus traffic in Northern Ireland, he said that the system established over a year ago with the approval of Parliament was working smoothly and satisfactorily. In 1928 there were 175 accidents, 208 persons were injured and 23 persons killed. In 1929 there were 86 accidents, 94 injured and 16 killed. Many private motor cars might well take example in matters of courtesy and consideration from the professional drivers of motor 'buses. At the present time there were 'bus services operating on 343 routes in Northern Ireland, and this figure included twenty new routes that had been opened up within the past six months, which contradicted the statement, which was so often made, that with the regulation of omnibus traffic development would be arrested.

Referring to the amalgamation of 'bus services and the acquiring of services by the railways, he said that some apprehension had been expressed lest such amalgamations should operate to deprive the public of services which they had.

"I am satisfied that such fears are entirely groundless," said Sir Dawson. "This process of amalgamation is not confined to Northern Ireland."

It had been suggested that it had resulted from a system of control, but this was obviously not the case, as a similar process had taken place in England, Scotland, Wales and the Irish Free State, where competition at the present moment was free and unrestricted. It had been found that road passenger traffic could be undertaken more cheaply and more efficiently by larger units rather than by small operators.

RAILWAYS AS PROPRIETORS.

Railways in Northern Ireland were now becoming important omnibus proprietors. There were many advantages in this, for it ensured co-ordination of the various forms of transport, and would enable the railways to offer many facilities to the public, such as interchangeability of tickets, which was an unheard of thing when the omnibus services and the railways were engaged in a war of extinction. In every case in which services had been acquired, whether by the railway company or any other operator, the transaction had been carefully scrutinised by the Ministry, and sanction had only been given where the Ministry was satisfied that the transaction would result in better service to the public. It has been made clear in the most specific terms to those responsible for the management of the railways in Northern Ireland that the road services must be maintained in the most efficient manner, and that they would not be allowed to deprive the public of the road service to which they were fully entitled. But in fairness to the railways, he should say that there was no evidence of any attempt on their part to abuse their position in this direction. On the contrary, where they had acquired services they had at once set to work to improve their efficiency, and to put on the road the latest and best type of vehicles.

Sir Dawson commended the efforts that were made to improve the roads. Schemes of reconstruction had been sanctioned by the Ministry involving 94 miles at a cost of £960,000.

In consequence of de-rating the Government was bearing no less than 75 per cent. of local expenditure in County Antrim, 83 per cent. in County Down, 88 per cent. in County Fermanagh, 80 per cent. in Londonderry, and 83 per cent. in Tyrone. The whole aspect of local government had been changed in the rural areas; the Government was the biggest ratepayer in the two county boroughs. The proportion of expenditure borne by the Government under the de-rating principle was about 11 per cent., while in urban districts the Government's share of expenditure under de-rating varied from 6 per cent. to 16.5 per cent.

THE POLICE FORCE.

Referring to peace of the community, he referred to the fact that it had been stated by the judges who presided over the various Assizes that there was a strong downward trend in crime in Northern Ireland. While to a large extent this gratifying feature was due to the moral influence exercised on the community by the various Churches, and, indeed, by the interests of the people themselves, on the other hand they could not leave out of account the fact that the diminution in crime was to a great extent due to the activities and efforts of the police force, and he also included the Special Constabulary, who, by their association with the police force in the country, exercise such a steadying influence on the community as a whole.

Referring to the establishment of a criminal lunatic asylum in the Londonderry Prison, the main object of which was to bring under their own care those Northern Ireland criminal lunatics confined in Dundrum Criminal Lunatic Asylum, he said that it was an interesting feature in connection with mental psychology that the change from Dublin to Northern Ireland appeared to have reacted in a most favourable manner on the criminal lunatics.

ONE POLICEMAN TO EVERY TWELVE PERSONS.

Mr. Cahir Healy (Nationalist), moving a reduction of the vote, referred to the burden of cost occasioned by the police force, and said that they would be told that the police restored peace in 1922, and, therefore, there must never be a diminution in these charges. With far worse reason might the European Powers who took part in the Great War decline to reduce their military establishments. Because of 1922 there must never be a reduction in the cost of the police. In time of peace the Minister persisted in keeping up an army at war strength. Not content with an armed police force, he had recruited an armed force on semi-political lines to the number of 14,000, and now they had 17,000 police to watch over a population not greater than the population of the City of Glasgow. They had a policeman for every twelve of the population and for every four adults of the population. How long was the country going to stand it, or how long was it likely to be able to stand it?

"I warn you," said Mr. Healy, "that you are approaching a time when even the Socialist worm at Westminster may turn, and Mr. Snowden may tell you that if you want to convert half the male adult population into an armed Militia, who are mostly engaged in arranging audiences for Ministers and doing registration and party work, you must find the money yourselves."

Mr. Healy went on to refer to the burning of a hall at Cladymore, Co. Armagh, although there was a police patrol looking after it, and to the pulling down of bills in Irish language at Dungannon and Derry. I supposed that, having nothing else to do, the police authorities felt obliged, for sheer shame, to justify the expenditure in some way. When taxpayers were harassed, the salary list was gradually rising. The Government was wasting money with all the abandonment of a gambler. He had heard it argued that the Government were solving the problem by turning a large proportion of able-bodied Unionists into policemen. The best guarantee for peace was the goodwill of the people.

The Imperial contribution will have disappeared this year, he added, and we will soon be obliged to carry on upon an Imperial dole—an undignified and very insecure method. Your officials are recruited on a sectarian basis; law and order are largely administered on sectarian lines. One-third of the population which we represent had their civic rights taken away in the gerrymandering of local government and parliamentary areas. Under this Ministry, in common with other classes, he concluded, they were bearing burdens of taxation that were crushing them to the ground.

A DEATH FROM STARVATION.

Mr. J. W. Nixon (Independent Unionist) referred to the death of a man from starvation at Hillhall, near Lisburn, and said that it was tragic in the light of their big estimates. He took exception to the allocation of a police motor car and driver for the Minister. Largely through the offices of Mr. Devlin, young Strannix, a Presbyterian, who was sentenced to the "cat," was liberated and pardoned, but the Minister refused to give the young innocent man compensation. There were complaints about the severity of discipline in the police, and he had to complain that too many Englishmen were appointed to head positions in the force. They could get as well qualified men in Ireland.

There is only one position, he added, you will not and cannot get any Irishman qualified for, and that is the position of hangman. (Laughter.)

He objected to the police cadet system. The Government paid one set of men for the teaching of Irish, and, according to Mr. Healy, paid another set of men for tearing down everything printed in Irish.

Professor Corkery (Unionist) suggested that the Minister should take steps to regulate clubs more strictly. It was as much as a man's reputation was worth to be seen too frequently in the golf house of some of the golf clubs.

SLUMS AND TOWN-PLANNING.

Mr. Joseph Devlin congratulated the Minister in establishing the Borstal system in Northern Ireland. He was glad to know that the Minister intended to introduce a Town-planning Bill in the near future, and he asked if it would also deal with the clearance of slum areas.

Sir Dawson Bates, intervening, said that the bill would deal with both town-planning and slum clearance, and give the necessary powers to local authorities.

Mr. Devlin—I am glad to hear that, for I always contended our housing schemes were not wide enough in their scope.

Proceeding, he urged that more labourers' cottages should be erected in rural areas, and pointed out that full advantage was not taken of the Labourers Acts in the past.

Referring to the Royal Ulster Constabulary, he said that there was no greater scandal in the community than to have a purely sectarian police force, and it was admitted that there was only a small proportion of those that he represented in the Royal Ulster Constabulary. No one could complain of the conduct of the Royal Ulster Constabulary. No body of men could discharge their duties with such fairness, sense of justice and large human sympathy with the civic rights of the population.

"I think I can say the same of the Civic Guards in Southern Ireland. I do not want to say a word against the old R.I.C., but I will say this, judging by what I see, the police forces in both Northern and Southern Ireland are as efficient a police force as is to be found in any part of Europe."

Proceeding, he criticised the Government for permitting police to carry revolvers, and referred to the bad effect that this had upon tourist traffic, as people from Great Britain would think it was not safe to come to Northern Ireland.

"Many people across the water ask me is it safe," declared Mr. Devlin, "and I reply it was always safe to come to Ireland. We do not hate strangers in Ireland; we only hate each other. (Laughter.) Even in the worst days in Southern Ireland individual Englishmen were perfectly safe."

THE "B" SPECIALS.

Continuing, Mr. Devlin declared that there was no defence for the continuance of the "B" Special Constabulary at a cost of £60,000. It was suggested that if this force was discontinued the saving would go to the Imperial contribution, but he suggested that an arrangement should be made with the British Government to allow all savings on administration to go to some work of productive utility. If that were done this £60,000 per year would go a long way to clear up slum areas.

There are two classes of men I cannot stand, said Mr. Devlin. One is a lay preacher, and the other an ununiformed policeman. (Laughter.) These special police were paid 1½d. per day, and he did not think that it would be a great loss if that small sum was withdrawn.

RELIGION IN THE FORCE.

Mr. G. B. Hanna (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister) said that Roman Catholics at the beginning did not join the police in the numbers which they had hoped for, owing to the difficulties which then existed, but there was now about one quarter of the police force of that persuasion. With regard to expenditure on the Special Constabulary, he pointed out that malicious damage to the extent of three million sterling was caused in a short time and the cost of the Special Police was the cost of insurance against a recurrence of that expenditure.

A Member—Are you aware that a lot of the damage was done by these very men?

Mr. Hanna—I am not aware of anything of the sort.

The motion to reduce the estimate was defeated by 28 to 6, and the estimate was passed.

NORTHERN SENATE.

GOVERNMENT FINANCE.

In the Northern Senate yesterday a motion by Mr. T. J. Campbell, K.C. (Nationalist), that the Government should deal immediately and effectively with the grave problem of slum clearance, and the rehousing of slum dwellers, was defeated.

GOVERNMENT EXPENDITURE.

Mr. Campbell asked (1) whether the estimated expenditure of the Government this year is about £9,000,000, or equivalent to about £7 per head of the population of Northern Ireland; (2), whether the expenditure of the Imperial Government during the past year in Northern Ireland was over £5,500,000, or equivalent to about £4 10s. per head of the population of Northern Ireland; (3), the total amount paid in Northern Ireland to the Imperial Government in taxation, direct or indirect, for the past year; (4), whether the Imperial Government makes any contribution to the £40,000 a week on the average expended in Northern Ireland on education and education services.

MINISTER'S REPLY.

Viscount Charlemont, Minister for Education, replied that owing to the somewhat intricate financial relations between the Imperial Government and the Government of Northern Ireland it was somewhat difficult to give by means of question and answer a lucid exposition to the House on a complex subject, or even an explanation which would enable hon. members, including the questioner, to carry away any tangible picture with them.

The estimated expenditure, he said, budgeted for in the Estimates, presented this year in another place, amounts, as stated, to a sum of about £9,000,000—to speak more accurately £8,800,000—but of this sum more than £800,000 is repaid by the British Treasury in respect of the new buildings at Stormont, and assistance towards the solvency of the Unemployment Insurance Fund, leaving the true total of the Estimates at about £8,000,000. The figure per head of the population is, therefore, overstated in the question. It must, however, be borne in mind that Northern Ireland estimates are not the full measure of Northern Ireland

HOUSE SHORTAGE IN CORK.

URGENT NEED OF NEW BUILDINGS.

CORK, Tuesday.

The acute housing shortage in the City of Cork, to which reference was made in Monday's Irish Times, was further discussed by the members of the Cork Rotary Club at their weekly meeting to-day. With a view to co-operating in the effort to relieve the situation, the suggestion of Mr. B. Sutton, who presided, was acted upon, and a committee formed to make investigations into the entire problem, and ascertain the desires of various sections of the community.

Mr. Sutton intimated that the Corporation had arranged a further loan of £100,000 from the bank as another instalment for the erection of houses. Naturally, there was no good going for a larger loan than they required at the moment; but when that was used up there was no reason why they should not go for another, and it was the intention to do so. He believed that it would be very useful if members of the Club formed a committee to interchange ideas on the matter, and see if some proposition could be brought before the Corporation, which was most anxious to cope with the matter.

A CRYING NEED.

Even from the most selfish point of view, declared Mr. J. J. Horgan, solicitor, there is a vital and crying necessity that the housing question of the city should be tackled. The problem is, in what way are we to do it? Up to the present it had been tackled in what might be called an economic way. Houses had been built and either sold for what they cost or let at a rent which was sufficient to pay sinking fund and interest charges. He suggested that that did not meet the real problem at all; it did not meet the problem of the man who could only pay 5s. a week for a house. Of course, the economic man, who looked at it from a purely material point of view, said that it was not good economics to build a house that would cost 20s. a week and let it for 5s. It might not be good economics, but he suggested that it was good Christianity, and this was a Christian country. He believed that it was the duty of the remainder of the population to come in and help the man who could only pay 5s. If that was not done, no real reduction would take place in their slum areas. What was happening at present was that the well-to-do artisan—very often from outside Cork, and perhaps a small farmer who had retired and had come to the city to educate his children—was coming in to Cork, buying these houses built with the money of the citizens, and the poor man in the slums had no chance whatever of moving upwards. To some extent that did relieve the pressure on the slums, but to no great extent, and he thought that they would have to tackle the insanitary tenements and slums and build something in the nature of flats. Anything that would replace the present uninhabitable house was a step in the right direction; and, moreover, these flats could be built outside the city, because land could be got cheaper, and because, with modern conditions of transport, there ought to be no difficulty in arranging cheap and efficient 'bus services between these flats and the centre of the city.

THE DIFFERENCE.

He thought that whatever the difference might be between the economic rent and the rent that these people could pay should be made up by the community, either the city or the State, and he was perfectly prepared to meet the case that it should be made up by the city if necessary, by an additional rate, because whatever was paid in that way would be returned a hundred or a thousand fold in due course.

He concluded by saying that unless it was tackled within the next ten years, which was a fairly long time, it would be a crying disgrace to Cork. He saw that they were going to have an international exhibition, but he suggested that before they had such a project it would be desirable that they should have a civic exhibition of decent housing in Cork.

A QUESTION OF MONEY.

Mr. C. Hayes, builder, agreed that the present conditions were a crying shame. The whole thing as far as he could see was a question of money. His experience was that the building of flats was more expensive than building the same number of ordinary houses, and the idea of flats was not liked in Cork. He thought that the issue of premium bonds or lotteries might provide the solution to the problem of how to raise the money. He believed that the indebtedness of the city was only £3 10s. per head, and the whole indebtedness of the city, after deducting sinking fund, was £27,000. The amount of debt per head was about £11 in Dublin, and was £31 in some places in England, so that he saw no reason why, instead of raising £100,000, as the Corporation proposed, they should not raise a quarter of a million.

Mr. H. H. Hill, architect, said that he thought that a good deal could be done in the way of reconditioning old houses.

The Chairman said that he and Mr. Foley were members of a deputation from the Corporation to the bank for a loan of £100,000 as another instalment for the building of houses.

expenditure, because in addition an Imperial contribution is paid, together with the cost of the Reserved Services in Northern Ireland, such as the Post Office, Land Purchase Commission and the Supreme Court of Judicature. What the expenditure under these two heads in the current year will be it is not possible for me to state, but it will, no doubt, be disclosed by the Minister of Finance in due course.

Turning now to the second part of the question, as I have already stated, certain expenditure met out of Northern Ireland revenues collected by the Imperial Government is incurred by that Government in Northern Ireland, although, in fact, ultimately paid for by this Government. I assume that the figure of £5,500,000 quoted by the learned member is intended to represent this expenditure last year. It is possible that the figure is quoted under a misunderstanding, and may be intended to represent not expenditure by the Imperial Government, but the amount of the share of the reserved taxes collected in Northern Ireland and paid over to us by the British Government. After deducting the imperial contribution and the expenditure on Reserved Services, the amount so paid over last year was about 5¼ million pounds.

With regard to the question at (3), I am not at all clear as to what figure the learned member is thinking of, but possibly he is referring to the actual amount paid over in imperial contributions during the past year. The sum as disclosed in the statement published on the 31st March last in respect of this expenditure was provisionally fixed at £600,000.

With regard to the enquiry relating to the Imperial Government's contribution towards education and educational services in Northern Ireland, I can say quite definitely that no such contribution is received by the Northern Irish Exchequer.

CRUELTY TO SHEEP.

REMARKABLE EVIDENCE IN SWORDS CASE.

Remarkable evidence was given at Swords District Court last Monday in a case in which Michael Sweetman, Ballyboughal, Co. Dublin, was charged with cruelly ill-treating one hundred and thirty-two sheep by failing to supply them with sufficient food; with cruelly ill-treating thirteen sheep suffering from foot-rot, and with leaving three dead sheep lying unburied within thirty feet of the public road.

Guard Byrne said that he visited the defendant's land on March 21 and 22, and found a hundred and thirty-two sheep, seven horses and four cows there. The land was very bare. He found one sheep dead the first day, and the defendant told him it had died from natural causes. The next day witness saw two other sheep dying, and the following day four more. Five sheep and five lambs died on that day. Thirteen animals had died altogether.

Guard Delaney said that the land was as bare as a billiard table.

Mr. Daly, veterinary surgeon, Swords, having given evidence,

Defendant, sworn, said that the first sheep that died died of old age. Some of the lambs which had been found dead were still-born, and the deaths of the others, as well as the sheep, was due to the storm which occurred about that time, when his land became "like an arm of the sea," with the result that he had to wade out up to his knees to try to save twelve animals which were in danger. He saved all but three, and he could not even get the bodies of these at the time, because they were in four feet of water near the road. Later on in the day the flood subsided a bit and it was possible to get them, and it was these sheep that were found unburied by the Guards. He admitted that four of the sheep had bad feet, but said that the other nine suffered from natural lameness.

To the Justice, defendant said that he had fed the sheep with mangolds and hay from February 27 to March 22. He was sheep-farming during his whole lifetime, and never lost an animal before.

JUSTICE'S COMMENT.

The Justice said that during the lambing season the farmer had a difficult time, and he did not want to take an unreasonable attitude in the case. But he did not think that the defendant discharged his duties during the lambing season, and, although he had stated that the sheep had been fed with hay and mangolds, he (the Justice) was inclined to believe the corroborated evidence of the Guards and Mr. Daly. The defendant had been guilty of cruelty in respect of these animals, both in regard to insufficient feeding and the other serious offence of having four of the sheep suffering from foot-rot, as had been admitted by the defendant himself. He convicted of cruelty in both cases, and fined defendant £5 in the first and £4 in the second case, with costs, and £2 2s. witnesses' expenses.

A TRAVELLER'S GUIDE.

SPECIAL IRISH SECTION.

Guide-books would be more popular with holiday-makers in this country if they did not cost so much. As it is the traveller prefers the chance of missing some of the sights rather than pay the 12s. or 15s. which a reliable guide-book costs him. The Traveller's Guide to Great Britain and Ireland, however, costs only 4s., an exceptionally modest price, considering its 648 pages of matter and illustrations. These illustrations, by the way, are something new in a guide-book of this kind. This is also the first guide-book to Great Britain which includes Ireland—a very sensible arrangement for visitors from Overseas. The book has evidently been written with one eye on the visiting American, and should prove useful when sold in the States and all over the Empire in promoting the "Come to England" movement. A reference to any place well known to the reader will show how carefully the book has been compiled. All the necessary information is there, with the exception of those dull and specialist details which so often overload a guide book and cause it to be looked at askance by potential users. The volume includes a special section devoted to Ireland. It is published by Trade and Travel Publications, Ltd., on behalf of the White Star Line and its associated companies.

OVERCROWDING IN MENTAL HOMES.

From Our Special Correspondent.
CORK, Tuesday.

Increasing demands upon the accommodation not alone at the Cork Mental Hospital, but also at the auxiliary institution at Youghal, have forced the authorities to seek additional premises, and the Local Government Department have now been informed that the former workhouse at Youghal should also be taken over and equipped as an asylum for the housing of more than three hundred patients.

The situation has caused great concern locally, and at a meeting of the Committee of Management of the Mental Hospital this afternoon one of the members, Mr. T. Corcoran, said that the matter of overcrowding in their institutions must be faced without delay. It was very regrettable that the necessity should arise for the creation of an additional hospital; for thirty years ago the accommodation in the asylum at Cork had been sufficient for their requirements, but since then the auxiliary institution at Youghal had also to be erected as an addition to the parent building.

Insanity had increased still further, added Mr. Corcoran, and it is still on the up-grade, the provision of increased accommodation being an urgent necessity.

NEED FOR NEW BUILDING.

A report regarding the suitability of the proposed building was adopted, on the motion of Mr. W. J. Broderick, who presided, and seconded by Councillor W. Desmond.

It had been found, the report stated, that the buildings lent themselves to adoption as a mental hospital for chronic lunatics, and, to obviate needless duplication and promote more efficient and economic administration, it was suggested that only female patients be lodged in the new asylum. It was thought that it would cost £30,000 to £35,000 to make the structural alterations. Included in that figure was the cost of such alterations and additions, and the cost of central heating and electric lighting. The equipment of a laundry or kitchen was not included. That worked out at an average of about £90 per patient, and the cost of accommodating an additional 216 patients, to bring the number of patients resident up to 572, should not exceed £60 per patient.

The cost per bed in the new hospital was less than one-half of the pre-war figure for mental hospitals, and, therefore, it could be seen that considerable economy would be effected by adopting the old workhouse buildings.

OBITUARY.

SIR EDWARD POLLOCK.

Sir Edward Pollock, who retired from the post in London of Senior High Court Official Referee in 1927, died in London on Monday night, aged 89. For about a fortnight he had been lying seriously ill at his home in York terrace, London. Sir Edward passed away peacefully in his sleep. His two daughters, Miss Muriel Pollock and Mrs. Horne, were present when the end came. Sir Edward's wife, Lady Pollock, died at the age of 84 on April 23rd last year. Sir Edward was one of 18 children of Lord Chief Baron Pollock. He was called to the Bar not long after his marriage, and was knighted in 1922.

COLONEL W. R. HOWELL.

Colonel W. R. Howell, D.S.O., whose death at the age of 55, at his residence, Longridge road, London, S.W., is announced, was Privy Chamberlain of Sword and Cape to Pope Pius XI. The holder of several important engineering posts abroad, he raised a volunteer corps during the Mendi rising in Sierra Leone in 1898-9, and also commanded a composite force of gunners and the West Indian Regiment. For his services he was awarded the D.S.O., being the first volunteer officer to receive this honour. During the Great War he was in the Secret Service, and was later appointed Controller-in-Chief of the Baghdad railway.

CARTHAGE CATHOLIC CONGRESS

The Most Rev. Thomas Williams, Archbishop of Birmingham, as representative of the Catholic Hierarchy in England, will lead the English party to the 30th International Eucharistic Congress, to be held at Carthage from May 8 to 11. The Archbishop and other English pilgrims will be accommodated on a liner which has been specially chartered for the Congress, sailing from Genoa.

The Archbishop will be a fellow-guest with the Papal Legate and the other eminent cardinals and prelates, but the English section as a whole will live aboard their ship, which will remain some days to make excursions to the many Roman ruins in the neighbourhood and to explore the remains of what was once the second city in the world.

STRIKING THE RATE.

WARRENPOINT COUNCILLORS WALK OUT.

At a special meeting of the Warrenpoint Urban Council on Monday night, called to strike a rate for the financial year, an unusual scene took place.

The Clerk (Mr. V. Crawford, B.A.) stated that it would take a rate of 13s. 10d. to meet the estimated expenditure and give them a credit balance of £400 at the end of the year.

Mr. Fox proposed, and Mr. Caulfield seconded, that the rate remain as last year—12s. 5d.

The Clerk said that if they did that they would be absolutely at sea at the end of the year.

Mr. Fox, in the course of further remarks, said that the best thing they could do would be to retire, and leave the matter in the hands of Messrs. Gordon and Connolly (who were for the higher rate).

Mr. F. P. Connolly, J.P., said that they would retire, and along with three Unionists and an Independent Nationalist he left the room.

The Chairman (Mr. P. McMahon) said that whether they had a full Council or not they would have to strike the rate, and after a protracted sitting it was, on a division, carried by five votes to two that the rate be 13s. 8d. in the £.

When Lieutenant Thomas Harold Hall was buried at Dunster, near Minehead, a Union Jack which flew over the main Red Cross dépôt at Cape Town during the Boer war, and which later came into the family's possession, draped the coffin and was buried with it.

THE FAMILY TONIC
SINCE THE SIXTIES

SIXTY years is a long test, but this tonic has survived it triumphantly. When you are run down, there's nothing like Fellows' Syrup. For headaches, irritability and other troubles that assail you when your nerves are overtaxed, it is a great remedy. It pulls you together. It builds you up. That is why doctors have consistently recommended Fellows' over this long period. They believe in it. It contains just those mineral ingredients that "tired nerves" need. Insist on Fellows' Syrup—the name makes all the difference between a good recovery and a poor one. 2/5, 3/6 and 6/- from all chemists.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 16, 1930.

IRELAND.

There were 165 entries at the Mallow Bull Show yesterday, or 63 more than last year.—(Page 3.)

In the Northern House of Commons yesterday the Minister for Home Affairs stated that the Government had agreed to find the sum of £1,175 for the widening of a road in connection with the holding of the International Motor Race in Northern Ireland.—(Page 5.)

The Kingstown Urban Council last night unanimously passed a resolution calling upon the parliamentary representatives of the County of Dublin to support the bill for the creation of a coastal borough.—(Page 7.)

GREAT BRITAIN.

Mr. Snowden explained his Budget to wireless listeners, whom he addressed as "fellow-taxpayers."—(Page 7.)

Mr. Churchill was the principal speaker in the debate on the Budget in the House of Commons yesterday.—(Page 8.)

Mr. J. H. Thomas, in the House of Commons yesterday, announced the formation of a company with a capital of £6,000,000 for the purpose of reorganising and rationalising industry.—(Page 7.)

ABROAD.

Fifteen lives were lost in a cinema fire at Licata, Sicily.—(Page 7.)

SPORTING.

At Nottingham yesterday Bou-Saada won the Newark Handicap.—(Page 10.)

At Edinburgh Lucky Son won the Buccleugh Spring Handicap.—(Page 10.)

FINANCIAL.

In Lombard street overnight money was in more urgent demand, and the rate ran up to 3 per cent. and sometimes more. Discounts were firmer in tone. All but £59,000 of the £397,000 of Cape gold was bought by Germany.—(Page 12.)

The Extinction of Wealth.

The expenditure side of Mr. Snowden's Budget reaches the huge figure of £871,000,000. Only half a century has passed since Mr. Gladstone lifted his hands and voice in horror at the prospect of a £200,000,000 Budget. He would be shocked if he were alive to-day, but we think that his graver concern would be, not the extent, but the incidence, of Mr Snowden's demand upon the British taxpayer. The Budget's sole addition to indirect taxation is the almost negligible tax on beer, and the bulk of the increased toll will be raised directly, not from all the payers of income tax, but from a mere fraction of that class. Some 2,150,000 persons are chargeable with income tax in Great Britain, but, as a result of abatements and allowances, not more than a quarter of them will be affected by Mr. Snowden's increase of sixpence in the standard rate. It is upon these half-million persons—with incomes of £500 a year and upwards—that virtually the whole burden of the new taxation falls. The screw, starting gently with the modest householder, turns with increasing ferocity until it pierces the very bowels of the man who, by inheritance or by his own toil and enterprise, is the possessor of great wealth. The class from which the Socialist Government will raise some £30,000,000 in this fashion represents one-fifty-seventh part of the British electorate and one-ninetieth part of the population of Great Britain. This small minority will be fleeced. The great majority of citizens, like the ninety and nine of the hymn, will lie safely in the shelter of the Socialist fold.

It is an easy, a popular and a fatal policy. On the economic side the merciless taxation of wealth must impair industry and trade. It discourages the enterprise that produces industry; it withdraws from the fruitful service of trade the money that is claimed for the State's bottomless purse. In this way, Mr. Snowden's attack upon wealth will create unemployment. The remedy will be a further increase of direct taxation, with still further unemployment; and from that dismal rut there will be small chance of escape. On the social side the loss will be yet more formidable. England has thriven in the past through the character and energy of her upper and upper-middle classes. They have been the makers of her Empire, the founders of her commerce, the leaders of her forlorn hopes, the stabilising influence in all the crises of her affairs. To-day these classes have lost political power, and now the fiat of financial extermination has gone forth against them: the fate of England's superior classes is to be the fate of the British Navy. Into the place of this fallen aristocracy will step—such is the whole purpose of Socialist policy and legislation—the new proletariat, which will have a single function and two qualities. Its function will be to keep a Socialist Government in office; its qualities will be a vast appetite for doles and an utter indifference to the duties of citizenship. The untaxed voter of the new régime will have no personal interest in the cost of government.

Dr. Johnson said that writers who lay on the watch for novelty could have little hope of greatness; "for great things cannot have escaped former observation." He could not have foreseen the mind of modern England. Eighteenth century thinkers could not have imagined an age in which the teachings of history would be ignored or defied. The classics are out of fashion, but to-day they reward their lingering votaries with lively parallels to the course of modern politics. The British proletariat is reacting to Socialism precisely as the Athenian proletariat reacted to Cleon. The decline of character and discipline in England, the growth of doles, the increasing dependence on foreign supplies have their full and exact precedents in the history of the Roman Empire. Any scholar can turn to his Gibbon for passages which show how great dependencies were lost and how the leaders of rebellious peoples dared to press their arrogant claims upon the councils of empire. To-day, while English democracy demands and receives its panem et circenses, India is in incipient revolt and Egyptian extremists are browbeating the British Government. We hope and, perhaps, we may dare to believe that history, yet to be made, will not carry the parallels to their tragic end. The English people have shown before now a quality which both Greeks and Romans lacked. Having created a perilous emergency through their own folly, they have mastered it through a trimphant access of vigour and common-sense. On the survival of that quality depends the survival of the British Empire.

Atlantic Traffic.

The announcement that the Cunard Company proposes to build a new liner of very large size indicates that the race for speed supremacy in the Atlantic is about to be resumed. Having lost virtually their entire fleet of merchant ships after the War, the Germans are determined to recapture their trans-Atlantic trade, and to that end they have produced the Bremen and the Europa, sister ships, which have broken all existing "records" for speed. The Europa has crossed the Atlantic in four days, seventeen hours and six minutes, thus leaving the Mauretania a long way behind. Already Germany's challenge has been taken up by the White Star Line, which has a 60,000-ton ship on the stocks in Belfast. This new monster is expected to surpass the feat of the Europa, and her engines were built specially to enable her to smash the German "record." France and Italy also are making preparations for the launch of speedy liners. Only yesterday the Atlantique, a ship of 40,000 tons, was launched at St. Nazaire, but she will ply on the South American route, which demands not so much speed as comfort and stability. The Italians, it is said, have a liner in preparation which will be not only faster, but bigger, more comfortable and more efficient in every way than any other ship that ever has sailed the seas. It seems now, however, that the Cunard Company intends to "go one better" than anybody else. The new vessel will have a tonnage of at least 70,000, as against the Majestic's 56,000, which represents the largest tonnage afloat to-day. Her engines will develop the stupendous horse-power of 200,000, and she will be capable of a speed of at least thirty-two knots. If, and when, this great ship is launched, she probably will make mincemeat of the Europa's "record," but by that time—three years hence—other rivals, doubtless, will have established new figures. Thus the passion for speed continues to drive mankind to ever-increasing efforts. Sooner or later, of course, a limit will be reached, and then ship-designers will turn their attention to something else; but for the time being the liner that can cross the Atlantic in the shortest space of time will attract the richest custom. Many experts in shipbuilding affairs take the view that the Bremen and Europa already have over-stepped the mark, inasmuch as their running costs are too great. Obviously there would be no point in the building of "super" ships for Atlantic or any other crossings if they would result in financial loss; but the competition is so keen that for the moment even economic considerations must yield to the demand for speed. Ireland is likely to benefit from this development; for, although the new Cunarder will be built on the Clyde, the Belfast shipyards still are supreme.

Excavations at Kish.

The great advance of archæology in recent years is manifested by the fact that a temple at Kish, built by Nebuchadnezzar about B.C. 600, now is thought young enough to be destroyed in order that older remains beneath its foundations may be unearthed. An element of mystery surrounds the building of this temple, which is known to have been dedicated to Ninhil, the mother-goddess, and to some other deity, since, although bricks bearing the stamp of Nebuchadnezzar and of a later monarch, Nabonidus, the father of Belshazzar, have been discovered, none of the king's other inscriptions mentions it. This omission is unusual, and M. Watelin, who, in a learned volume, has described the building, confesses that this circumstance baffles him. It may be that, while the temple is being demolished, some further evidence will be discovered. Hopes that rich discoveries will reward the excavations in the "red stratum," in which the temple's foundations are laid, are high. Already an inscribed brick of Merodach-baladan, who revolted successfully from King Sargon of Assyria in B.C. 721, and established anew the Babylonian kingdom, has been found in the vicinity. Moreover, prospecting operations in the "red stratum" have revealed painted ware and neolithic implements, belonging to the days when Kish was founded before B.C. 5000. The possibilities of the proposed work are entrancing and may give us a new knowledge of the lives of the early Sumerians and the first incursions of the Semites. The banks of the Euphrates were the cradle of civilisation, and as long ago as B.C. 2000 Khammurabi had evolved a code of laws which displayed an astonishing grasp of legal necessities. Like English law, it was case-made, and was based on the decisions of judges in individual plaints. The Sumerian language survived for some time in Babylonian law courts—a proof of the excellence of the old Sumerian law. We await with interest the results of the new excavations.

A Phantom Pack.

Only a generation ago, when we were less sophisticated and probably pleasanter, we used to derive periodical thrills from spectral apparitions. Some families made a speciality of their ghosts, and in ancient manors and baronial halls the haunted room was a macabre attraction for all who were not expected to sleep in it. The "white bird" of the Oxenhams, whose appearance foretold a death in the family, has become famous in literature, since Charles Kingsley mentioned it in "Westward Ho!" and speculations about the character and habits of the Glamis ghost were an ever-fruitful source of interest in Edwardian drawing-rooms. Leprechauns and pixies trod the bogs and moors of Ireland and England, and embellished them by their apocryphal presence. We did not wish to meet them, but we liked to think that they were there. Science now forbids these amiable conceits, and so we welcome the news that the "Cwn annwn"—or "hounds of hell"—are abroad again in the Vale of Glamorgan. In spite of their grim name, it is refreshing to learn that old-fashioned ghosts manage to survive. An ancestor of Lieutenant-Colonel Prichard, of Pwllywrach, where the phantom pack is said to have been heard recently, employed a careless huntsman, who paid dearly for his fault. For three days he dallied at the Newport fair, and forgot to arrange that the hounds should be fed. As soon as he entered the kennels on his return the famished animals tore the wretched man to bits. The tale is sad, as facts that give rise to eerie legends usually are sad; but, if we must choose, we should prefer to meet King Charles stalking headless down Whitehall in the approved fashion rather than to conjure up an ectoplasm of the unhappy monarch in a stuffy room.

THE DIOCESE OF DOWN AND CONNOR.

NEW APPOINTMENTS.

The Bishop of Down and Connor and Dromore has made the following appointments:—

The Rev. Canon Manning, M.A., M.C., Rector of Holywood, to be Archdeacon of Down in succession to the Ven. Archdeacon A. W. Barton, B.D. (Bangor), now Bishop of Kilmore, Elphin and Ardagh; the Rev. T. B. Brown, M.A., Rector of Newtownards, to be Canon of Down Cathedral, in succession to Canon Manning; the Rev. J. C. Rutherford, B.A., Rector of Willowfield, to be Canon of Down Cathedral in succession to the Rev. Canon F. W. Austin, M.A. (St. Columba's, Knock), retired; and the Rev. William Beveridge, Curate of Willowfield, to be Curate-in-Charge of the Parish of Ardkeen, Co. Down, in succession to the late the Rev J. J. H. Scott, M.A.

The newly-appointed Archdeacon of Down, the Ven. Charles Campbell Manning, M.C., took his B.A. at Trinity College, Dublin, in 1896, and his M.A. in 1901. He was ordained at Carrickfergus in 1896. From 1900 till 1904 he was Curate of Holywood, and from 1903 till 1911 he was Rector of Muckamore, County Antrim.

Archdeacon Manning served with the Ulster Division as a Chaplain to the Forces for four years during the European War. He was wounded, mentioned in despatches, and was awarded the Military Cross for conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. The Rev. James Cooper Rutherford, B.A., is a graduate of Queen's University, Belfast, and was Curate of St. Aidan's, Belfast, from 1915 to 1918, and later Rector of that parish.

Ordained in 1897, he was Curate of Christ Church, Lisburn, 1897-1902; Organising Secretary to the Church Missionary Society for the North of Ireland 1902-13, Curate of Ballymena 1913-14, Incumbent of Drumgath with Drumballyroney 1914-19, since when he has been Rector of Newtownards.

GLORY OF THE FLOWER.

SPRING IN THE BOTANIC GARDENS.

The Botanic Gardens in Glasnevin are beginning to display the gay spring spirit on every side, trees showing a mist of green instead of bare branches, and there is colour in the flower borders.

A new piece of land is being planted and set out with flower beds on the far side of the river, at the end of the Gardens, near the entrance gate, and will form a pleasant addition to the grounds.

Under the trees and in all the open spaces the daffodils sway and toss in the breeze—a shifting sea of yellow in every shade. Here and there wind flowers star the grass in the shaded nooks. Cherry trees of many species flutter their first frail sprays of blossom—rose and white. Already on the magnolia bushes a furry calyx or two has opened to reveal the great white bloom against the leafless branches of the shrub.

The pond is undergoing the process of spring cleaning, and men are engaged in clearing it out and making it fit for its summer array of water lilies and setting in order its edging of flower beds.

HOTHOUSE SPLENDOUR.

In the hothouses there is great splendour. Hippeastrums of enormous size, in crimson and red and pink, rear their heads proudly out of a setting of the humble but far sweeter mignonette. Calceolarias, in many gaudy shades, make a flaunting mass of fiery colour. There is something blatant about the calceolaria—something redolent of a Lord Mayor's procession in its superfluous opulence. The primulas and cinerarias alongside them, in their severe and slender grace, have an air of despising their plutocratic neighbours. Delicate indoor rhododendrons carry masses of exquisite faint-rose bloom, some of it already scattered; but, then, it falls so soon, both from the hothouse variety and the hardy outdoor rhododendron—a cinderella of a shrub that leaves the scene of gaiety early, lest disaster befall; too proud to remain when its first beauty of youth, shows signs of fading.

In contrast with these giants at one end of the hothouse that contains them is a stand with many tiny plants, whose names, as vouched by the labels, are in inverse proportion to their size—the smaller the plant the longer the name; scraps of rock plants, baby auriculas and primulas, and miniature replicas of many larger species.

WEATHER FORECAST

General Inference.—A ridge of high pressure crossing the British Isles is likely to maintain fair weather in most districts, apart from local showers. A depression moving North-eastwards across Iceland may, however, cause some rain or drizzle in the North-western districts of Scotland.

Ireland, all Districts. — Moderate Northerly to light variable winds; mainly fair; moderate day temperature; ground frost locally inland at night.

Irish Sea and St. George's Channel.—Moderate Northerly winds; fair, apart from local showers; sea moderate to slight.

LONDON LETTER.

OPINIONS ON THE BUDGET.

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
TUESDAY NIGHT.

City men came to business early to-day in order to review the Budget with their colleagues, and the opinion generally expressed was that the new taxation proposals would do nothing to help industrial revival, but, in all probability, will delay such a movement. On the Stock Exchange there was at first a decided setback in the prices of British Government stocks, but on second thoughts the market improved, and as the day passed it recovered most of its early losses. Interest was mainly professional, and it appears that those people who have been waiting until the Budget was over to invest money have not decided yet what they will do. One remarkable point about the Budget in financial circles is the fairly general decline in the value of British currency in the foreign exchange market, where sterling has fallen back rather sharply.

The Liberal Attitude.

It is obvious to-day that the Chancellor of the Exchequer will receive the full support of the Liberal Party for the adoption of his Budget. A meeting of the party has been called to discuss the proposals, and, while there is a strong objection to the increase in the income tax, there will be little opposition. Mr. Snowden's decision to drop the "safeguarding" duties when they expire pleases the free traders, and little stock is taken of the number of workers who will be thrown out of employment. That this will be large is appreciated fully in other circles and recognised among the members of the Labour Party. Strong efforts will be made by the affected industries during the next few weeks to bring the facts before Parliament, though hope of amelioration almost has been abandoned.

Labour Dissatisfaction.

The Labour extremists are annoyed greatly by the Budget, and it is intended to launch a big attack against it at the Independent Labour Conference at the week's end. In their idea it does not contain sufficient taxation, and they want it to be more drastic. On this point, however, desire must outrun performance; for the parliamentary machinery does not permit private members to move for increased taxation. The only thing that the private member can do is to move an amendment calling attention to the fact that the amounts asked for are too small. The Government is not worried, however; for it is convinced that Mr. Maxton and his followers will not put it out of office to give the Conservatives a chance.

The Egyptian Conference.

The proceedings attendant on the negotiations between the British Government and the Egyptian delegation attracted no little attention to-day; for the Conference sat from five o'clock yesterday afternoon until after four o'clock this morning. It is reported, however, that no decisions were reached. There is a rumour in political circles that the British Government refuses to give way to the demands of the Egyptian extremists, though ultimately it may concede some of the minor points. This afternoon I saw two members of the Egyptian delegation in a car passing the Houses of Parliament, but they sat so far back that they scarcely could be seen. I noticed, however, that both were looking very grave.

The Three-Power Pact.

The Italian delegation to the Naval Conference left Victoria Station for Rome to-day, headed by Signor Grandi, who is expected to return next week to attach his signature to the general understanding concerning the Three-Power Pact. The two committees now drafting the Treaty—one of which is composed of experts and the other of jurists—were hard at work to-day with the various reports accepted at yesterday's plenary session. Differences in language, particularly in the case of Japan, make the process of drafting a slow and difficult one; but efforts are being made to get the work done by Thursday evening. The draft must be submitted for final approval to every one of the Governments concerned, and at present it is not at all certain that the signing can be done on Tuesday next. It is possible that it will have to be delayed until the end of the week.

Reports.

The six reports of the first committee of the Naval Conference accepted at the plenary session were published to-day, and their bulk provides an idea of the mass of work which the Conference has accomplished. The reports in French and English are contained in about one hundred and thirty closely printed foolscap pages, and include a careful record of the work done in connection with the famous "global" and "categorical" tonnage controversy, "exempt" and special vessels, the humanisation of submarines, rules for the disposal of vessels of war and the proposed holiday in capital ships. All these details had to be translated into French, Italian and Japanese during the sittings of the various committees.

Irish Daffodils.

Ireland achieved magnificent successes to-day at the daffodil show held by the Royal Horticultural Society; for, while the Irish exhibitors were few, they managed to acquire a majority of the prizes. The Donard Nursery Company, of Newcastle, was given a silver Banksian medal for its very fine group display, together with an award of merit for a new seedling pure yellow named Slieve Buragh. This firm also secured a second prize for a basket of daffodils and a second prize for a bowl of the same blossoms. In addition, it was awarded eight first and second prizes in different classes. Mr. J. Lionel Richardson, of Waterford, however, was pre-eminent when it came to taking prizes in the various classes; for he secured no fewer than twelve first prizes and fourteen second and third prizes. In addition, Mr. Richardson had a very beautiful group display of perfect blooms—well worthy of the gold medal awarded it. He secured an even greater honour, however; for he was given the medal for the best flower in the show—a beautiful seeding of his own raising named "Gregalach."

Comfort to Invalids.

Two members apiece of the three parties in the House of Commons have supported a bill presented by Mr. Philip Oliver proposing to give powers to the Postmaster-General to grant to a permanently bedridden person a licence to keep a wireless outfit for the purpose of receiving messages, subject to conditions, but without payment of fee. A permanently bedridden person is defined as any person—not being resident in a public or charitable institution or in a school—who satisfies the Postmaster-General that he or she is confined permanently to bed through sickness or infirmity. The sponsors of the bill, in addition to Mr. Oliver, include Miss Lloyd George, the Marquis of Hartington, Sir Boyd Merriman, Mr. Simmons and Mr. Cecil Wilson.

SERIOUS RIOTING IN CALCUTTA.

BRITISH OFFICIALS INJURED: TRAMCARS BURNED.

STREETS PATROLLED BY ARMOURED CARS.

"AGGRESSIVE NON-VIOLENCE" GANDHI'S NEW POLICY.

SERIOUS rioting occurred in Calcutta yesterday, when students and others observing the hartal, or mourning strike, as a protest against the imprisonment of Nationalist leaders, endeavoured to stop the tramways and other traffic. Additional armed police were called out, and armoured cars patrolled the streets.

Two tramcars were set on fire, and the fire brigade was stoned, one English officer being very seriously injured. Seven British officials in all were injured, and there were numerous admissions to hospital as the result of the clashes between the police and the rioters. In the afternoon the situation was described as being "under control."

Meantime, Mr. Gandhi has been outlining a more pugnacious form of "civil disobedience," which he styles "aggressive non-violence." He declares that women ought not to take part with the men in the defence of the salt pans.

Fines, instead of sentence of imprisonment, were imposed on two Nationalist leaders in Madras, and, as they declined to pay, their motor cars were seized by the police as they left the courthouse.

MOB STONE FIRE BRIGADE.

ENGLISHMAN IN CRITICAL CONDITION.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
CALCUTTA, Tuesday.

A hartal is usually a passive affair, consisting of a voluntary suspension of trade and other activities for a fixed period as a sign of mourning, but serious developments occurred here to-day in connection with the hartal organised as a protest against the imprisonment of the Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, President of the National Congress, and of Mr. Sen Gupta, the Mayor of Calcutta.

Not content with ceasing work themselves, crowds of students and carters endeavoured to prevent anybody else from working. They placed obstacles on the rails to stop the tramway service, and two tramcars were burned in the southern section of the city. In the northern area students held up tramcars and cut off their trolley ropes.

ARMED POLICE ON DUTY.

The authorities quickly took steps to deal with the situation, which, in a brief period, became very menacing. Extra police, fully armed, were posted in all the important centres, and armoured cars patrolled the streets.

Attempts were made to interfere with traffic in various parts of the city, and there were numerous clashes between the police and the crowds before the latter were dispersed. The streets were littered with brickbats, road "metal," sheet iron and broken clubs.

When the Fire Brigade arrived to endeavour to save the burning tramcars they were attacked by the mob, and Mr. Durrant, an English Fire Brigade officer, sustained a fracture of the skull. He is at present in hospital, and there is very faint hope of his recovery. Several other members of the Brigade were injured.

Thirteen Sikhs, two of whom were wounded, were afterwards arrested. This is stated to be the first time in Calcutta's history that the Fire Brigade has been attacked.

ENGLISH GIRL INJURED.

In all, seven British officials were injured during the rioting, and many persons were admitted to hospital. Miss Dench, a London girl, daughter of the Station Superintendent at Sealdeh, is in hospital, badly cut and bruised by stones and other missiles.

It appears that, against the advice of the police, she tried to dash through the riot area on her motor cycle, but her way was blocked by a mob, and she had to run for her life, amid a hail of road metal. Her motor cycle was seized and burned by the rioters.

SHOTS FIRED AT MOB.

There has been one case of firing by the police. A European sergeant opened fire to save an injured fellow-sergeant, who was being attacked by Sikhs in South Calcutta. Two of the mob were wounded.

Early in the afternoon the authorities got the situation under control.

BENGAL DOCTORS AND THE MEDICAL COUNCIL.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
CALCUTTA, Tuesday, 10.30 p.m.

Sixteen students arrested yesterday evening were brought before a special magistrate at Alipore to-day on charges of rioting, unlawful assembly and violating police orders. One pleaded "guilty," and prayed for mercy. Two pleaded "not guilty." The rest refused to make any statement at all. They were remanded till the 22nd inst.

The special tribunal appointed to try the persons charged in connection with the Alipore bomb case has adjourned for lack of prison vans to bring the accused persons to court and also of sergeants for the escort.

At a meeting of Indian medical practitioners in Bengal to-night it was decided that no attempts should be made to request the General Medical Council of Great Britain to reconsider its decision not to recognise Indian degrees, but it was decided, in order to record a protest against the "undeserved slur" on the Indian medical graduates, and in order to develop the resources of India, that all Indian practitioners should be recommended to utilise Indian medical drugs and appliances as far as possible, or, where overseas goods are essential, should import them from countries other than Great Britain.

FINES INSTEAD OF IMPRISONMENT.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
MADRAS, Tuesday.

Mr. Prakasam, the former member of the Legislative Assembly, who has been prominent during the past few days in organising violation of the Salt Laws here, and Mr. Nageswara Rao, editor of the paper Andhra Patrika, another leader of civil disobedience in Madras City, were both convicted this afternoon under the Salt Act, and fined five hundred rupees (£37 10s.) each.

Both pleaded guilty, and Mr. Prakasam added that he broke the law deliberately.

The Magistrate asked: "Do you wish to express regret?" to which the accused men replied: "None at all. Not on this side of life."

SWIFT JUSTICE.

Both men refused to pay their fines, whereupon they were warned that their property would be attached. The threat was carried out sooner than they expected, for as they were leaving the courthouse the police seized their motor cars on a distraint warrant issued by the magistrate. The machines will be sold at auction by the authorities to raise the money for the fines.

This is the first salt law case in which a fine, without the alternative of imprisonment, has been imposed.

Mr. Nageswara Rao addressed a meeting on leaving the court. He declared that, although his motor car had been attached, he would continue to disobey the salt law, even if all his property were taken away by the Government.

IF GANDHI IS ARRESTED.

Mr. Prakasam exhorted the people to be prepared to court imprisonment in thousands if Mr. Gandhi were arrested.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
KARACHI, Tuesday.

A hartal was observed here to-day as a protest against the imprisonment of Mr. Jawaharlal Nehru, President of the National Congress. Intimidated by members of the Congress Party, the Hindu shops and markets closed.

THE MAHATMA'S NEW POLICY.

"AGGRESSIVE NON-VIOLENCE" EXPLAINED.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
NAVSARI, Tuesday.

Addressing himself to the men, Mr. Gandhi outlined a more aggressive form of disobedience against the Salt Law, which, for want of a better name, he called "aggressive non-violence."

"Hitherto," said the Mahatma, "I asked you to resist the snatching of salt by the police from your closed fists, and to suffer mutely and weakly whatever injuries the police might inflict on you. If you have got the strength for suffering and faith in your mission, I want to go many steps further."

Pointing to the salt pans prepared by the volunteers, Mr. Gandhi said: "I like henceforth to regard you as trustees or guardians, not merely of the precious national wealth locked up in your fists, but of the whole treasure now preparing in the salt pans. Defend that treasure with your life, if that be the price you have to pay for it. When the police come to raid these pans, surround them and do not let the police touch them until they have overpowered you by sheer brute force. From your sufferings will rise into being, not only purnaswaraj [complete independence], but a non-violent army for its defence."

WHERE WOMEN ARE NOT WANTED.

The Mahatma then declared that women ought not to take part alongside the men in the defence of the salt pans. "I still give the Government credit that they will not make war upon our women," he added. "It would be wrong on our part to provoke them to do so. This is a man's fight, and, so long as the Government confine their attention to the men, there will be time enough for the women to court assaults when the Government have crossed the limit. Let it not be said of us that the men sought to shelter behind the women, well knowing that they would be safe if they took the women with them in what, for want of a better name, I will call 'aggressive non-violence.'"

"Women have, in the programme I have placed before them, enough work and to spare," concluded Mr. Gandhi, "and all the adventure and risk they are capable of undertaking."

AN INVITATION TO BOMBAY.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
BOMBAY, Tuesday.

"I am hourly needed in Gujerat to consolidate my work," Mr. Gandhi has replied to a telegram which he has received from the President of the Bombay Provincial Congress Committee inviting him to Bombay. He adds, however: "But I will come when I am absolutely needed."

SOVIET CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
MOSCOW, Tuesday.

The official Tass Agency states that the ceremonial opening of the British section of the All-Union Western Chamber of Commerce took place to-day.

The ceremony was attended by Litvinoff, Acting Commissioner for Foreign Affairs; by Khinchuk, Chairman of the Council of the Chamber of Commerce, and by Sir Esmond Ovey, the British Ambassador.

MOTOR TRADE PLANS.

AMALGAMATION ANTICIPATED.

British motor manufacturers are about to make a "spring offensive" on the markets of the world, now that Mr. Snowden has set their fears at rest regarding the McKenna duties.

An official of the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders said: "British manufacturers hope to make this a 'record' year, and the fact that the McKenna duties have been retained will enable manufacturers to concentrate on capturing the overseas markets. There is every indication that they will be successful.

"The branch offices opened in Australia, New Zealand and South Africa by the British section of the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders are proving of very great value in keeping the home factories informed of market conditions and supplying them with information, as well as carrying on propaganda for British products.

"Already the industry employs considerably more than a quarter of a million people, and I think there is every likelihood of that figure being greatly increased when the various development schemes and factory extensions are in full swing. It is not unlikely that there may be some important and interesting amalgamations in the motor world very shortly."

The latest figures show that British motor exports exceed imports by £1,007,390 for the first three months of the year, exports of vehicles and accessories being valued at £2,584,614, and imports at £1,577,224.

Several manufacturers, it is understood, propose to produce special overseas models of the type which appeals to the Dominions' motorists. They will be built only for export.

COMMERCIAL VEHICLES.

The commercial vehicle industry is already "forging ahead" in the words of a member of a large manufacturing firm. "One manufacturer has sold 1,150 new type 'buses and coaches since the Commercial Vehicle Show in November last year," he said.

"The general sales manager of another firm has just left on an extensive tour of South America to investigate new methods of distribution, and generally to study the market conditions and requirements.

"An example of the way in which British manufacturers are studying their overseas customers' needs is the provision of left-hand drive for countries where the rule of the road is 'keep to the right.'

"Ingenious design both in the vehicle itself and in the assembly plant has made it possible for left hand drive to be fitted, necessitating only one extra machining operation."

THE WORLD'S WAGES.

AMERICAN WORKERS PAID BEST.

FREE STATE SEVENTH ON LIST.

Professor J. H. Richardson, recently appointed to the Chair of Industrial Relations at Leeds University, gave details of the relative value of wages paid to workers in different countries in a paper read at a meeting of the Royal Statistical Society in London last night. Comparisons of wages in different countries are often made by converting money wages from foreign countries into sterling by the rates of exchange, but this may give misleading results owing to differences in the cost of living, he said.

Comparisons should be by means of real wages—the purchasing power of the workers' money wages in relation to the commodities they ordinarily consume. On this basis he gave the following table of comparisons, calculated on the average hourly wage of adult workers in typical occupations:—

United States	197
Canada	165
Australia	148
Sweden	108
Denmark	107
Great Britain	100
Irish Free State	97
Netherlands	87
Germany	78
Switzerland	77

He pointed out that in the United States and Canada the figures would be several points lower if allowance were made for high rents, and in the United States a figure of 160 would be more representative for the general level of wages, because workers in the particular occupations covered were strongly organised, and their wages were considerably higher than those paid to workers in many other occupations in America.

A NEW CUNARDER.

PLANS FOR A GIANT VESSEL.

"No contracts have been placed for a new Cunard liner, but plans are in hand for building another vessel for trans-Atlantic service." The Liverpool manager of the Cunard Line made this official statement yesterday with regard to a report that orders had been placed for a new Cunarder, which it was thought would regain for the line the blue riband of the Atlantic, held so long by the Mauretania.

Full details of the new liner are not available, but she will not be an oil-driven vessel, though it is expected her engines will develop astonishing horse-power—200,000. "It is impossible to say the speed of the vessel at present," added the official. "With regard to regaining the blue riband, this is largely a question of economics. There is an economic speed to be attained, and if someone else has reached that before us, it is impossible for us to go beyond that limit. Whether the limit has been reached is not yet known."

It is understood that the tonnage of the vessel is unlikely to be as great as 70,000 tons, but the vessel will embrace all the new inventions and improvements.

A THOUSAND FEET LONG.

The plans of the new Cunarder show, according to Syren and Shipping, a three-funnelled cruiser-stern vessel a thousand feet long on the waterline, 115 feet beam, with designed speed on measured mile of 32 knots. The machinery is to consist of quadruple screw-geared turbines. She will carry first, second and tourist class passengers and emigrants, and practically all first class state-rooms will have bathrooms attached. A novel feature is a double-tiered smokeroom with balcony.

THE DUCHESS OF YORK.

KINGSTOWN'S DEMAND.

DEPUTIES ASKED TO SUPPORT BILL.

A resolution calling upon the parliamentary representatives of the County of Dublin to support the bill now before the Oireachtas for the creation of a coastal borough was adopted unanimously last night at the adjourned monthly meeting of the Kingstown Urban Council.

The Chairman (Mr. William Morrissey) said that since their last meeting a matter of very great importance had arisen concerning the township. The Minister for Local Government had withdrawn from the Greater Dublin Bill the clause dealing with the setting up of the coastal borough of Dun Laoghaire. A Parliamentary Committee, consisting for the most part of opponents to the bill, had been convened to consider the whole matter. They had now reached a stage when they must request the county deputies to support the bill, and he moved a resolution to that effect.

SIX YEARS AGO.

Mr. J. M. Devitt, seconding, said that for many years the people responsible for the local government of Dun Laoghaire and Blackrock realised the great advantage that would follow from the amalgamation of these districts and Dalkey into one area for administration. In 1924 they prepared and lodged with the Senate a bill to unite these districts into one borough. Informed by the Minister for Local Government that a Commission was being set up to inquire into the Greater Dublin project, the promoters did not proceed further with the bill.

This matter had been before the inhabitants for six years, and, irrespective of political difficulties or class interests, the vast majority of the electors favoured the change. When the Minister for Local Government introduced his bill the Councils of Dun Laoghaire, Blackrock, Dalkey and Killiney informed him that his proposals were approved of by them as representing the electors of their districts, and they ratified the proposals relating to the coastal borough almost with unanimity.

The Dail contended that its functions were governed by the will of the people. It was, therefore, not unreasonable to request the deputies representing the County of Dublin to withdraw their opposition to the coastal borough and to support the Minister's proposal.

CASE OF LONDON.

It had been stated that to establish a borough so close to Dublin would detract from the dignity and importance of the city. This assertion could not be defended, inasmuch as the growth and development of a successful health and pleasure resort within reach of the city would have the effect of adding considerably to Dublin's attractions without in any way interfering with its importance. London consisted of a large number of boroughs, which functioned side by side without any difficulty.

It would seem to be more appropriate for the Dail to encourage the growth of urban districts and their development into boroughs rather than to retard their progress. Suggestions had been made that these areas should be included in the city boundaries. Should this happen it would be a calamity for the urban districts, and would retard and delay their development.

Clontarf was added to the City of Dublin thirty years ago, and was left neglected until quite recently. The various problems peculiar to city administration would absorb the time of the City Council and its officers, and the affairs of the coastal townships would suffer.

If representation were to be made in proportion to population these urban districts probably would have on the City Council one or two members, who never could succeed in obtaining for their districts the special attention which they required.

DEVELOPMENT OF BUSINESS.

It had been stated that the coastal townships owed their existence to Dublin. The inhabitants said that the growth of these districts was due to their position by the seaside, to their healthy surroundings, and to the development of the local business. There was no greater community of interests between Dublin and Dun Laoghaire than there was between Dublin and Bray or Greystones, or between any city and any seaside resort.

TOWNSHIP'S SERVICES.

Mr. M. F. O'Brien said that, lest the comparative silence of the Council might be construed as a sneaking support of the opposition to the creation of the Dun Laoghaire Borough, he thought it only right to point out that the township had tackled the housing question many years ago, before other townships awoke to their responsibilities. The rents of these houses were lower than in neighbouring districts, and the Council never had stopped building houses.

The township had an excellent supply of water from the Vartry, and had its own electric lighting system until it was taken over by the Electricity Supply Board. Wash-houses, public baths, hospitals and public libraries were provided; social services were in existence, and the sinking fund on the main drainage scheme was now paid off.

He mentioned these matters because some of the City and County members of the Dail did not seem to be conversant with them. Deputy Good, who opposed the merging of Rathmines and Pembroke with Dublin, now sought to have Dun Laoghaire merged into the City Borough.

"FIGHT TO THE LAST."

Mr. Mallins said that Dun Laoghaire had the lowest rates of any of the townships around, and this opposition to the coastal borough should be fought to the very last.

Mr. O'Donnell said that this opposition was merely a pawn in the political game. If their views on the borough were not considered they should address the people of the district by holding a series of public meetings.

Dr. Merrin and Mr. Bartley also supported the resolution.

Mr. Dooge said that they could not expect the Government, in face of the opposition of the Independent Party, led by Mr. Good and Professor Thrift, to go forward with the bill as it was.

The resolution, as stated, was adopted unanimously.

ANGLO-EGYPTIAN TREATY.

DISCUSSIONS AT FOREIGN OFFICE.

Negotiations in connection with the Anglo-Egyptian Treaty were resumed at the British Foreign Office last night, when the British and Egyptian delegations again met in conference.

Nahas Pasha, the Egyptian Prime Minister, and his colleagues were met by Mr. Arthur Henderson, the Foreign Secretary; Lord Passfield, Dominions Secretary; Mr. Tom Shaw, Minister for War; Lord Thomson, Air Minister; Sir Percy Loraine, British High Commissioner for Egypt, and officials of the Foreign Office.

Monday's session lasted until 5 o'clock yesterday morning.

RATIONALISING INDUSTRIES.

LORD PRIVY SEAL'S ANNOUNCEMENT.

A question put by Commander Kenworthy, in the House of Commons yesterday, enabled the Lord Privy Seal (Mr. J. H. Thomas) to supplement the announcement made in his recent speech at Manchester, to the effect that "The City" had undertaken to provide money for the reorganisation and rationalisation of industry.

The Lord Privy Seal said that he was glad to be able to announce that a company had that day been registered at Somerset House, under the name of the Bankers' Industrial Development Company, with a nominal capital of £6,000,000, divided into 45 "A" shares and 15 "B" shares of £100,000 each.

The company had the support of a very considerable proportion of the most influential banking and financial institutions of the country, by whom the "A" shares had been subscribed. The "B" shares of the company had been subscribed by the Securities Management Trust, Ltd.

THE DIRECTORATE.

The directorate of the new company was honorary, and was as follows:—

The Right Hon. Montague Norman, Chairman;

Sir Guy Granet, who would also act as alternate to Mr. Norman.

Baron Bruno Schroder, with Major Albert Pam as alternate.

Mr. A. H. Wagg, with Mr. Nigel Campbell as alternate.

Mr. E. R. Peacock.

Mr. C. Bruce Gardner, Managing Director for the Securities Management Trust, Ltd.

In addition to the Board of Directors, the Lord Privy Seal continued, the company will have the services of an Advisory Council, on which a number of influential persons engaged in financial business will be invited to serve. The Advisory Council will have no executive duties to perform, but their services, either collectively or individually, will be available to the Board of Directors in a consultative capacity.

The object of the company is to receive and consider the schemes submitted by the basic industries of this country for the purpose of their rationalisation, either by industry or by regions. In the case of schemes which may be approved, arrangements will be made for the provision, in one way or another, and through existing agencies, of such money as may seem to be essential.

[Neither the directors of the company nor the members of the advisory council will receive any remuneration for their services. The company's business address is 5 Lothbury, E.C. 2.]

Replying to an inquiry by Commander Kenworthy as to what steps would be taken to safeguard the position of displaced workpeople, Mr. Thomas referred to an answer given by the Prime Minister on 5th February. In this answer Mr. Macdonald said that it would not be practicable to identify, among the unemployed, those whose unemployment was attributable to disarmament and rationalisation.

THE GOVERNMENT'S POSITION.

When the Lord Privy Seal talks about the money being supplied through existing agencies, asked Commander Kenworthy, does that mean that when this company approves the schemes of rationalisation, we will be consulted with a view to guaranteeing loans by the State?

Mr. Thomas—In so far as State money is concerned, it is not intended to be, and I hope will not be, involved. (Opposition cheers.)

In that case, where does the Government come in with regard to this company? asked Commander Kenworthy, amid a cheer from the Left Wing Labour members.

There were Opposition cheers when Mr. Thomas replied—So far as the money is concerned, the Government does not come in. I announced, in a speech at Manchester, he went on, in reply to much criticism about the action of the bankers, that money could, and would, be found for reorganisation and rationalisation. I was asked in this House what I meant by "the City," and many other questions. I have given the answer which is supplementary to my Manchester speech.

Mr. Hammersley (Conservative, Stockport)—Are we to take it that what is intended is that the reorganisation of the basic industries is only to take place with the approval of this Council?

Mr. Thomas—On the contrary, I hope—in fact, I know—that there are a number of schemes being considered to-day of reorganisation. When I am consulted I give help towards them. I announce this as another stage in that reorganisation on the financial side that I announced previously.

THE SECURITIES TRUST.

The Securities Management Trust, which has subscribed for the "B" shares of the new company, was founded last year to deal with credits for industry, and to assist manufacturers and distributors to develop the sale of their products. Its formation was generally recognised as a move by "The City" to help Mr. Thomas in his schemes for improving trade and reducing unemployment. Last month it was announced that Mr. Charles Bruce Gardner had accepted an exclusive appointment as managing director.

The Colonial Advisory Committee, which was appointed last July to consider schemes likely to aid and develop agriculture and industry in the Colonies, has issued its first report. During seven months there were sixty applications from twenty-five separate Colonial Administrations for assistance from the Colonial Development Funds. In a majority of cases the Committee were able to make a favourable recommendation. The cost of the projects approved to the end of February was £6,629,494, spread over a period of five years. The expenditure to be incurred in Great Britain in connection with the projects is £2,238,117. The total assistance to be provided from the fund was £1,369,632.

EXPORT TRADE.

Mr. R. A. Taylor (Labour, Lincoln) asked whether the Government would provide guarantees for the export trade, where expenditure abroad would promote employment at home.

Mr. J. H. Thomas said that the assistance considered proper by the Government was already available under the Exports Credits (Guarantees) Scheme, a bill to extend the duration of which was now before the House.

FIFTEEN LIVES LOST IN CINEMA FIRE.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
ROME, Tuesday.

A fire broke out during a performance at a cinema in Licata, Sicily, last night. The theatre was full of adults and children, and fifteen lives were lost in a panic that followed. A number of persons were injured.

A strip of film bursting into flame in the operator's box was the cause of the fatal panic. The fire did not spread beyond the operator's box, but the flames terrified the young people packing the balcony of the threatre.

At this moment the electric light failed, and in the ensuing total darkness the audience fought madly to reach the exits.

All the victims of the panic, whose ages range between 12 and 18 years, were either suffocated or crushed to death.

REFLECTIONS ON THE BUDGET.

WHAT THE TAXPAYER RESENTS.

In a leading article The Times to-day observes:—During the interval which has elapsed since the Budget speech, opinion in the country has had time to crystallise a little. The first impressions of Monday afternoon have, perhaps, been revised here and there in detail, but in the main the depressing sensations have persisted. Whatever relief may have been felt at the rigidly orthodox protection accorded to the Sinking Fund has been entirely obliterated by the dismal prospect of increased taxation devoted to no constructive purpose. What the taxpayer most resents is that twelve years after the conclusion of the War, at a time when the other great nations are steadily reducing their taxation, the contributions extracted from his pocket have actually been increased, with nothing to show for it all but an extension of the dole. It may be admitted at once, in fairness to Mr. Snowden, that on the technical side his second Budget possesses a number of the duller, but none the less essential, virtues, the absence of which most critics of our public finances have in recent years had reason to regret.

To make the taxpayer pay his bills is eminently right and proper. It may even, in certain circumstances, be magnificent; but it is not in itself economy, and economy of the most rigid kind is the one thing which the country has for years most urgently needed. Meanwhile, the highest hope that Mr. Snowden holds out to the over-burdened citizen is that with luck it may not be necessary next year to add to the load. In the debate on the Budget resolutions yesterday Mr. Churchill rightly treated this aspiration of his successor, which, no doubt, was sincere, with a certain degree of healthy scepticism, fully justified by the subsequent remarks of Mr. Maxton. But the satisfaction that Mr. Snowden may cull from the displeasure of Mr. Maxton and some other of the more extreme members of his party must be very limited; for the truth is that his Budget seems to have pleased no one.

BEARERS OF THE BURDEN.

As a matter of national politics the Budget is even more objectionable, adds The Times. By exempting smaller incomes from any increase in taxation, and throwing the whole burden of inflated expenditure upon the shoulders of a steadily narrowing class, Mr. Snowden has aggravated one of the most disquieting tendencies of post-war democracy, namely—the growing divorce of representation from taxation. During the past ten years the relief of larger and larger sections of the electorate from any share in the fiscal consequences of their voting by the progressive remission of direct taxation has been the principal cause of the alarming growth in public expenditure.

THE DISAPPOINTED PROPHET.

MR. GANDHI STILL A FREE MAN.

The arrest and conviction of Mr. Sen Gupta, the Swarajist Mayor of Calcutta, for publicly reading aloud seditious literature, have been followed by a violent outbreak of rioting, in which the police and the fire brigade were attacked and roughly handled, tramcars were stoned and burnt, and the streets were only cleared with difficulty by the police, remarks The Times editorially. On the other side of India the Hindu traders of Bombay have closed their shops and offices in protest against the conviction of Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, the President of the National Congress, and Mr. Gandhi's chief lieutenant, on a charge, which he admitted, of breaking the Salt Laws. A number of other manufacturers and vendors of illicit salt have been sentenced to imprisonment, but Mr. Gandhi remains at large—to his manifest annoyance. The decision of the Indian Government to leave him unarrested as long as possible has naturally led to criticism. Legalists, shocked by his defiance of the law, and naturally and properly alarmed by the support given to the Mahatma by the ignorant and the young, deplore the failure of the authorities to arrest the prophet of civil disobedience; the police and the magistrates, burdened by new and heavy responsibilities, would probably agree with them. But, as a well-informed correspondent pointed out in an article on Mr. Gandhi's campaign, which appeared in our columns on Monday, the Government of India have excellent political reasons for holding their hand as long as possible.

Mr. Gandhi's sole object is to wreck the coming conference between the British Government, the Indian States and the political leaders of British India. He knows that the Viceroy's announcement of the conference has rallied a body of moderate Indian opinion to its support. He knows also that he enjoys a peculiar prestige in Hindu India, even among his political opponents. Among the politically minded he is the living symbol of a natural desire for self-determination, to the devout of all classes—and India remains a country of devotees—he is a prophet honoured even in his own country. He believed when he started on his slow march to the sea at Dandi that he would be arrested, and that his arrest would arouse a storm which would sweep the moderates into the extremist camp.

MUCH DISAPPOINTED.

So far Mr. Gandhi has been largely disappointed. He has not been arrested, nor, though some moderate leaders have shown manifest signs of nervousness, has there been any such general movement in favour of civil disobedience as attended his earlier campaigns. He is isolated, Pandit Motilal Nehru, the only political leader of note, who supported his declaration of independence for India at Lahore, is known to disapprove of the launching of the civil disobedience movement, for which Mr. Gandhi himself declared India was unready less than four months ago. He has always sought to win sympathy for his political and social teachings in this and in other countries, notably in America, and, unlike earlier prophets, he has courted advertisement fully as eagerly as he has welcomed adversity.

For all his stage management, for all his mastery of the appeal to sentiment, there is no indication that his performances on the beach of Dandi have aroused more than an amused curiosity or strengthened the cause of Indian nationalism abroad.

PROTECTING BRITISH CONSUMERS.

COUNCIL TO REVIEW PRICES.

Mr. Graham, President of the Board of Trade, in the House of Commons yesterday, told Sir Kingsley Wood that he hoped to introduce a bill dealing with the proposed Consumers' Council soon after Easter. The new Council would have power to review prices at all stages from the raw material to the retail price.

Sir Cyril Cobb was adopted last night as Conservative candidate for the West Fulham parliamentary by-election at a meeting of the local Conservative Association.

BROADCAST ON THE BRITISH BUDGET.

"GOOD EVENING, FELLOW-TAXPAYERS."

—MR. SNOWDEN.

INCOME TAX, SUPER-TAX AND LAND VALUES.

"Good evening, fellow-taxpayers," said Mr. Philip Snowden, when he began his address to British wireless listeners last night from 11 Downing street, London.

"I dare say," he added, "you have seen something in the newspapers to-day about the Budget. You are probably all familiar by now with its main proposals.

"First of all, I want to explain how the Budget of the year is built up. I shall try to show what the problem is that faces the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he prepares his Budget. The total cost of expenditure for which I had to provide this year comes to £782,000,000. You will have noticed that the cost of the war debt is over half the total of the national expenditure.

"Now I will turn to the revenue side. Taking all sources of revenue together, I get a figure for our probable income of the coming year—that is apart from any changes I propose to make. That figure this year amounts to £740,000,000. That is the expected revenue. Thus, at this stage we have expenditure £782,000,000, revenue £740,000,000, leaving a gap to be filled of £42,000,000.

HIS PROBLEM.

"How to fill this gap was the problem I had to solve. This year there are two special items we must note. On last year's Budget there was a deficit of fourteen and a half millions—that is to say, revenue failed to meet expenditure last year by that sum. I had to do something to make good that deficit of fourteen and a half millions. It was absolutely futile to pay off debt, a thing we were bound to do, by borrowing money for the purpose. Therefore, I have to find money to make up this deficit.

"But a Budget is more than a matter of figures. It has a very big influence for good or ill in the country's affairs, and it is with that aspect that I now propose to deal. A year ago, just before the election, I broadcast a talk on Labour's financial and taxation policy. I said that we should pursue a sane policy of debt reduction. I then said: 'Labour's taxation policy is to raise revenue mainly by income tax and sur-tax, by death duties and by the tax of land values.' These are the two guiding principles which I have kept constantly in mind in framing this year's Budget.

TO PAY HIS WAY.

"I am determined to pay my way by sound financial methods. The policy of postponing the evil day does not appeal to me. When more expenditure has to be faced taxation should be raised immediately.

"It is well known that new taxation does not give its full yield the year it is imposed. I have arranged the new proposals that they shall give not only sufficient revenue to meet this year's expenditure, but shall give enough to meet the following years.

"I cannot predict the future, and I cannot make any binding promises. The new taxation which I have had to impose will be sufficient to meet next year's expenditure without any further increase in taxation.

NEW TAXES UNAVOIDABLE.

"The new taxation was unavoidable, and I have put the burden only upon those who are best able to bear it. I have placed no new burden upon industry. I have put it only on the rich, those people who have more than the mere necessaries of life. I only asked to contribute more those people who have more than reasonable luxuries.

"A misconception must be cleared away lest you should think that, as the standard rate of tax has risen from 4s. to 4s. 6d., therefore your contribution to that tax has risen in the same proportion. As a matter of fact, [illegible] first £225 of taxable income, [illegible] it on the first £250, and instead of fixing the relief—relief, mark you—at 2s. 3d. in the £, [illegible] 2s. 6d.

"This may be a little difficult to follow, because the income tax is a complicated affair; but the fact is that very large numbers of taxpayers will be paying no more tax than they do at present, while some will pay actually less.

"Rather more than two million people pay income tax. About three-quarters of them, under my proposal, will pay no more than they did before.

THE SUPER-TAX.

"About the super-tax and the estate duty I need say very little. [illegible] broad backs. [illegible] still to [illegible] made fortunes are now coming under review for taxation, there can be no reasonable complaint if the State should exact an increased contribution from them.

"These have been my guiding principles, and I feel confident that you will agree that they have been faithfully carried out in the Budget.

LAND VALUES.

"If our ancestors had had the foresight and the wisdom to impose a duty on land values a hundred years ago, the vast wealth that has fallen haphazard into the hands of private citizens would have been available for beneficent State purposes. The justice of the claim of the community to share in land values has long been a cherished conviction. That conviction is shared by two parties of the [illegible]. I am not, indeed, proposing to levy a duty on land values in this Budget. I am not even prejudging what the form of impost should be. Both the State and local authorities have claims to

The Irish Times.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 16, 1930.

IRELAND.

There were 165 entries at the Mallow Bull Show yesterday, or 63 more than last year.—(Page 3.)

In the Northern House of Commons yesterday the Minister for Home Affairs stated that the Government had agreed to find the sum of £1,175 for the widening of a road in connection with the holding of the International Motor Race in Northern Ireland.—(Page 5.)

The Kingstown Urban Council last night unanimously passed a resolution calling upon the parliamentary representatives of the County of Dublin to support the bill for the creation of a coastal borough.—(Page 7.)

GREAT BRITAIN.

Mr. Snowden explained his Budget to wireless listeners, whom he addressed as "fellow-taxpayers."—(Page 7.)

Mr. Churchill was the principal speaker in the debate on the Budget in the House of Commons yesterday.—(Page 8.)

Mr. J. H. Thomas, in the House of Commons yesterday, announced the formation of a company with a capital of £6,000,000 for the purpose of reorganising and rationalising industry.—(Page 7.)

ABROAD.

SPORTING.

At Nottingham yesterday Bou-Saada won the Newark Handicap.—(Page 10.)

FINANCIAL.

In Lombard street overnight money was in more urgent demand, and the rate ran up to 3 per cent. and sometimes more. Discounts were firmer in tone. All but £59,000 of the £397,000 of Cape gold was bought by Germany.—(Page 12.)

The Extinction of Wealth.

The expenditure side of Mr. Snowden's Budget reaches the huge figure of £871.000,000. Only half a century has passed since Mr. Gladstone lifted his hands and voice in horror at the prospect of a £200,000,000 Budget. He would be shocked if he were alive to-day, but we think that his graver concern would be, not the extent, but the incidence, of Mr Snowden's demand upon the British taxpayer. The Budget's sole addition to indirect taxation is the almost negligible tax on beer, and the bulk of the increased toll will be raised directly, not from all the payers of income tax, but from a mere fraction of that class. Some 2,150,000 persons are chargeable with income tax in Great Britain, but, as a result of abatements and allowances, not more than a quarter of them will be affected by Mr. Snowden's increase of sixpence in the standard rate. It is upon these half-million persons—with incomes of £500 a year and upwards—that virtually the whole burden of the new taxation falls. The screw, starting gently with the modest householder, turns with increasing ferocity until it pierces the very bowels of the man who, by inheritance or by his own toil and enterprise, is the possessor of great wealth. The class from which the Socialist Government will raise some £30,000,000 in this fashion represents one-fifty-seventh part of the British electorate and one-ninetieth part of the population of Great Britain. This small minority will be fleeced. The great majority of citizens, like the ninety and nine of the hymn, will lie safely in the shelter of the Socialist fold.

It is an easy, a popular and a fatal policy. On the economic side the merciless taxation of wealth must impair industry and trade. It discourages the enterprise that produces industry; it withdraws from the fruitful service of trade the money that is claimed for the State's bottomless purse. In this way Mr. Snowden's attack upon wealth will create unemployment. The remedy will be a further increase of direct taxation, with still further unemployment; and from that dismal rut there will be small chance of escape. On the social side the loss will be yet more formidable. England has thriven in the past through the character and energy of her upper and upper-middle classes. They have been the makers of her Empire, the founders of her commerce, the leaders of her forlorn hopes, the stabilising influence in all the crises of her affairs. To-day these classes have lost political power, and now the fiat of financial extermination has gone forth against them: the fate of England's superior classes is to be the fate of the British Navy. Into the place of this fallen aristocracy will step—such is the whole purpose of Socialist policy and legislation—the new proletariat, which will have a single function and two qualities. Its function will be to keep a Socialist Government in office; its qualities will be a vast appetite for doles and an utter indifference to the duties of citizenship. The untaxed voter of the new régime will have no personal interest in the cost of government.

Dr. Johnson said that writers who lay on the watch for novelty could have little hope of greatness; "for great things cannot have escaped former observation." He could not have foreseen the mind of modern England. Eighteenth century thinkers could not have imagined an age in which the teachings of history would be ignored or defied. The classics are out of fashion, but to-day they reward their lingering votaries with lively parallels to the course of modern politics. The British proletariat is reacting to Socialism precisely as the Athenian proletariat reacted to Cleon. The decline of character and discipline in England, the growth of doles, the increasing dependence on foreign supplies have their full and exact precedents in the history of the Roman Empire. Any scholar can turn to his Gibbon for passages which show how great dependencies were lost and how the leaders of rebellious peoples dared to press their arrogant claims upon the councils of empire. To-day, while English democracy demands and receives its panem et circenses, India is in incipient revolt and Egyptian extremists are brow-beating the British Government. We hope and, perhaps, we may dare to believe that history, yet to be made, will not carry the parallels to their tragic end. The English people have shown before now a quality which both Greeks and Romans lacked. Having created a perilous emergency through their own folly, they have mastered it through a trimphant access of vigour and common-sense. On the survival of that quality depends the survival of the British Empire.

Atlantic Traffic.

The announcement that the Cunard Company proposes to build a new liner of very large size indicates that the race for speed supremacy in the Atlantic is about to be resumed. Having lost virtually their entire fleet of merchant ships after the War, the Germans are determined to recapture their trans-Atlantic trade, and to that end they have produced the Bremen and the Europa, sister ships, which have broken all existing "records" for speed. The Europa has crossed the Atlantic in four days, seventeen hours and six minutes, thus leaving the Mauretania a long way behind. Already Germany's challenge has been taken up by the White Star Line, which has a 60,000-ton ship on the stocks in Belfast. This new monster is expected to surpass the feat of the Europa, and her engines were built specially to enable her to smash the German "record." France and Italy also are making preparations for the launch of speedy liners. Only yesterday the Atlantique, a ship of 40,000 tons, was launched at St. Nazaire, but she will ply on the South American route, which demands not so much speed as comfort and stability. The Italians, it is said, have a liner in preparation which will be not only faster, but bigger, more comfortable and more efficient in every way than any other ship that ever has sailed the seas. It seems now, however, that the Cunard Company intends to "go one better" than anybody else. The new vessel will have a tonnage of at least 70,000, as against the Majestic's 56,000, which represents the largest tonnage afloat to-day. Her engines will develop the stupendous horse-power of 200,000, and she will be capable of a speed of at least thirty-two knots. If, and when, this great ship is launched, she probably will make mincemeat of the Europa's "record," but by that time—three years hence—other rivals, doubtless, will have established new figures. Thus the passion for speed continues to drive mankind to ever-increasing efforts. Sooner or later, of course, a limit will be reached, and then ship-designers will turn their attention to something else; but for the time being the liner that can cross the Atlantic in the shortest space of time will attract the richest custom. Many experts in shipbuilding affairs take the view that the Bremen and Europa already have over-stepped the mark, inasmuch as their running costs are too great. Obviously there would be no point in the building of "super" ships for Atlantic or any other crossings if they would result in financial loss; but the competition is so keen that for the moment even economic considerations must yield to the demand for speed. Ireland is likely to benefit from this development; for, although the new Cunarder will be built on the Clyde, the Belfast shipyards still are supreme.

Excavations at Kish.

The great advance of archæology in recent years is manifested by the fact that a temple at Kish, built by Nebuchadnezzar about B.C. 600, now is thought young enough to be destroyed in order that older remains beneath its foundations may be unearthed. An element of mystery surrounds the building of this temple, which is known to have been dedicated to Ninhil, the mother-goddess, and to some other deity, since, although bricks bearing the stamp of Nebuchadnezzar and of a later monarch, Nabonidus, the father of Belshazzar, have been discovered, none of the king's other inscriptions mentions it. This omission is unusual, and M. Watelin, who, in a learned volume, has described the building, confesses that this circumstance baffles him. It may be that, while the temple is being demolished, some further evidence will be discovered. Hopes that rich discoveries will reward the excavations in the "red stratum," in which the temple's foundations are laid, are high. Already an inscribed brick of Merodach-baladan, who revolted successfully from King Sargon of Assyria in B.C. 721, and established anew the Babylonian kingdom, has been found in the vicinity. Moreover, prospecting operations in the "red stratum" have revealed painted ware and neolithic implements, belonging to the days when Kish was founded before B.C. 5000. The possibilities of the proposed work are entrancing and may give us a new knowledge of the lives of the early Sumerians and the first incursions of the Semites. The banks of the Euphrates were the cradle of civilisation, and as long ago as B.C. 2000 Khammurabi had evolved a code of laws which displayed an astonishing grasp of legal necessities. Like English law, it was case-made, and was based on the decisions of judges in individual plaints. The Sumerian language survived for some time in Babylonian law courts—a proof of the excellence of the old Sumerian law. We await with interest the results of the new excavations.

A Phantom Pack.

Only a generation ago, when we were less sophisticated and probably pleasanter, we used to derive periodical thrills from spectral apparitions. Some families made a speciality of their ghosts, and in ancient manors and baronial halls the haunted room was a macabre attraction for all who were not expected to sleep in it. The "white bird" of the Oxenhams, whose appearance foretold a death in the family, has become famous in literature, since Charles Kingsley mentioned it in "Westward Ho!" and speculations about the character and habits of the Glamis ghost were an ever-fruitful source of interest in Edwardian drawing-rooms. Leprechauns and pixies trod the bogs and moors of Ireland and England, and embellished them by their apocryphal presence. We did not wish to meet them, but we liked to think that they were there. Science now forbids these amiable conceits, and so we welcome the news that the "Cwn annwn"—or "hounds of hell"—are abroad again in the Vale of Glamorgan. In spite of their grim name, it is refreshing to learn that old-fashioned ghosts manage to survive. An ancestor of Lieutenant-Colonel Prichard, of Pwllywrach, where the phantom pack is said to have been heard recently, employed a careless huntsman, who paid dearly for his fault. For three days he dallied at the Newport fair, and forgot to arrange that the hounds should be fed. As soon as he entered the kennels on his return the famished animals tore the wretched man to bits. The tale is sad, as facts that give rise to eerie legends usually are sad; but, if we must choose, we should prefer to meet King Charles stalking headless down Whitehall in the approved fashion rather than to conjure up an ectoplasm of the unhappy monarch in a stuffy room.

THE DIOCESE OF DOWN AND CONNOR.

NEW APPOINTMENTS.

The Bishop of Down and Connor and Dromore has made the following appointments:—

The Rev. Canon Manning, M.A., M.C., Rector of Holywood, to be Archdeacon of Down in succession to the Ven. Archdeacon A. W. Barton, B.D. (Bangor), now Bishop of Kilmore, Elphin and Ardagh; the Rev. The newly-appointed Archdeacon of Down, the Ven. Charles Campbell Manning, M.C., took his B.A. at Trinity College, Dublin, in 1896, and his M.A. in 1901. He was ordained at Carrickfergus in 1896. From 1900 till 1904 he was Curate of Holywood, and from 1903 till 1911 he was Rector of Muckamore, County Antrim.

Archdeacon Manning served with the Ulster Division as a Chaplain to the Forces for four years during the European War. He was wounded, mentioned in despatches, and was awarded the Military Cross for conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was instituted Rector of Holywood in March, 1920, in succession to the Rev. Canon A. E. Ross, B.D. Since 1922 he has been Prebendary of Dunsford in Down Cathedral. In 1927 he succeeded Archdeacon Barton as Precentor.

The Rev. James Cooper Rutherford, B.A., is a graduate of Queen's University, Belfast, and was Curate of St. Aidan's, Belfast, from 1915 to 1918, and later Rector of that parish.

The Rev. Thomas Bradley Brown, Rector of Newtownards, is a graduate of Trinity College, Dublin, where he took his B.A. (Senior Moderator in Logic and Ethics) in 1896. He was Wray Prizeman 1895, Downes Divinity Prizeman in 1897, and became M.A. in 1902. Ordained in 1897, he was Curate of Christ Church, Lisburn, 1897-1902; Organising Secretary to the Church Missionary Society for the North of Ireland 1902-13, Curate of Ballymena 1913-14, Incumbent of Drumgath with Drumballyroney 1914-19, since when he has been Rector of Newtownards.

GLORY OF THE FLOWER.

SPRING IN THE BOTANIC GARDENS.

The Botanic Gardens in Glasnevin are beginning to display the gay spring spirit on every side, trees showing a mist of green instead of bare branches, and there is colour in the flower borders.

A new piece of land is being planted and set out with flower beds on the far side of the river at the end of the Gardens, near the entrance gate, and will form a pleasant addition to the grounds.

Under the trees and in all the open spaces the daffodils sway and toss in the breeze—a shitfing sea of yellow in every shade. Here and there wind flowers star the grass in the shaded nooks. Cherry trees of many species flutter their first frail sprays of blossom—rose and white. Already on the magnolia bushes a furry calyx or two has opened to reveal the great white bloom against the leafless branches of the shrub.

The pond is undergoing the process of spring cleaning, and men are engaged in clearing it out and making it fit for its summer array of water lilies and setting in order its edging of flower beds.

HOTHOUSE SPLENDOUR.

In the hothouses there is great splendour. Hippeastrums of enormous size, in crimson and red and pink, rear their heads proudly out of a setting of the humble but far sweeter mignonette. Calceolarias, in many gaudy shades, make a flaunting mass of fiery colour. There is something blatant about the calceolaria—something redolent of a Lord Mayor's procession in its superfluous opulence. The primulas and cinerarias alongside them, in their severe and slender grace, have an air of despising their plutocratic neighbours. Delicate indoor rhododendrons carry masses of exquisite faint-rose bloom, some of it already scattered; but, then, it falls so soon, both from the hothouse variety and the hardy outdoor rhododendron—a cinderella of a shrub that leaves the scene of gaiety early, lest disaster befall; too proud to remain when its first beauty of youth shows signs of fading.

In contrast with these giants at one end of the hothouse that contains them is a stand with many tiny plants, whose names, as vouched by the labels, are in inverse proportion to their size—the smaller the plant the longer the name; scraps of rock plants, baby auriculas and primulas, and miniature replicas of many larger species.

WEATHER FORECAST

General Inference.—A ridge of high pressure crossing the British Isles is likely to maintain fair weather in most districts, apart from local showers. A depression moving North-eastwards across Iceland may, however, cause some rain or drizzle in the North-western districts of Scotland.

Ireland, all Districts. — Moderate Northerly to light variable winds; mainly fair; moderate day temperature; ground frost locally inland at night.

LONDON LETTER.

TUESDAY NIGHT.

City men came to business early to-day in order to review the Budget with their colleagues, and the opinion generally expressed was that the new taxation proposals would do nothing to help industrial revival, but, in all probability, will delay such a movement. On the Stock Exchange there was at first a decided setback in the prices of British Government stocks, but on second thoughts the market improved, and as the day passed it recovered most of its early losses. Interest was mainly professional, and it appears that those people who have been waiting until the Budget was over to invest money have not decided yet what they will do. One remarkable point about the Budget in financial circles is the fairly general decline in the value of British currency in the foreign exchange market, where sterling has fallen back rather sharply.

The Liberal Attitude.

It is obvious to-day that the Chancellor of the Exchequer will receive the full support of the Liberal Party for the adoption of his Budget. A meeting of the party has been called to discuss the proposals, and, while there is a strong objection to the increase in the income tax, there will be little opposition. Mr. Snowden's decision to drop the "safeguarding" duties when they expire pleases the free traders, and little stock is taken of the number of workers who will be thrown out of employment. That this will be large is appreciated fully in other circles and recognised among the members of the Labour Party. Strong efforts will be made by the affected industries during the next few weeks to bring the facts before Parliament, though hope of amelioration almost has been abandoned.

Labour Dissatisfaction.

The Labour extremists are annoyed greatly by the Budget, and it is intended to launch a big attack against it at the Independent Labour Conference at the week's end. In their idea it does not contain sufficient taxation, and they want it to be more drastic. On this point, however, desire must outrun performance; for the parliamentary machinery does not permit private members to move for increased taxation. The only thing that the private member can do is to move an amendment calling attention to the fact that the amounts asked for are too small. The Government is not worried, however; for it is convinced that Mr. Maxton and his followers will not put it out of office to give the Conservatives a chance.

The Egyptian Conference.

The proceedings attendant on the negotiations between the British Government and the Egyptian delegation attracted no little attention to-day; for the Conference sat from five o'clock yesterday afternoon until after four o'clock this morning. It is reported, however, that no decisions were reached. There is a rumour in political circles that the British Government refuses to give way to the demands of the Egyptian extremists, though ultimately it may concede some of the minor points. This afternoon I saw two members of the Egyptian delegation in a car passing the Houses of Parliament, but they sat so far back that they scarcely could be seen. I noticed, however, that both were looking very grave

The Three-Power Pact.

The Italian delegation to the Naval Conference left Victoria Station for Rome to-day, headed by Signor Grandi, who is expected to return next week to attach his signature to the general understanding concerning the Three-Power Pact. The two committees now drafting the Treaty—one of which is composed of experts and the other of jurists—were hard at work today with the various reports accepted at yesterday's plenary session. Differences in language, particularly in the case of Japan, make the process of drafting a slow and difficult one; but efforts are being made to get the work done by Thursday evening. The draft must be submitted for final approval to every one of the Governments concerned, and at present it is not at all certain that the signing can be done on Tuesday next. It is possible that it will have to be delayed until the end of the week.

Reports.

The six reports of the first committee of the Naval Conference accepted at the plenary session were published to-day, and their bulk provides an idea of the mass of work which the Conference has accomplished. The reports in French and English are contained in about one hundred and thirty closely printed foolscap pages, and include a careful record of the work done in connection with the famous "global" and "categorical" tonnage controversy, "exempt" and special vessels, the humanisation of submarines, rules for the disposal of vessels of war and the proposed holiday in capital ships. All these details had to be translated into French, Italian and Japanese during the sittings of the various committees.

Irish Daffodils.

Ireland achieved magnificent successes to-day at the daffodil show held by the Royal Horticultural Society; for, while the Irish exhibitors were few, they managed to acquire a majority of the prizes. The Donard Nursery Company, of Newcastle, was given a silver Banksian medal for its very fine group display, together with an award of merit for a new seedling pure yellow named Slieve Buragh. This firm also secured a second prize for a basket of daffodils and a second prize for a bowl of the same blossoms. In addition, it was awarded eight first and second prizes in different classes. Mr. J. Lionel Richardson, of Waterford, however, was pre-eminent when it came to taking prizes in the various classes; for he secured no fewer than twelve first prizes and fourteen second and third prizes. In addition, Mr. Richardson had a very beautiful group display of perfect blooms—well worthy of the gold medal awarded it. He secured an even greater honour, however; for he was given the medal for the best flower in the show—a beautiful seeding of his own raising named "Gregalach."

Comfort to Invalids.

Two members apiece of the three parties in the House of Commons have supported a bill presented by Mr. Philip Oliver proposing to give powers to the Postmaster-General to grant to a permanently bed-ridden person a licence to keep a wireless outfit for the purpose of receiving messages, subject to conditions, but without payment of fee. A permanently bed-ridden person is defined as any person—not being resident in a public or charitable institution or in a school—who satisfies the Postmaster-General that he or she is confined permanently to bed through sickness or infirmity. The sponsors of the bill, in addition to Mr. Oliver, include Miss Lloyd George, the Marquis of Hartington, Sir Boyd Merriman, Mr. Simmons and Mr. Cecil Wilson.

SERIOUS RIOTING IN CALCUTTA.

STREETS PATROLLED BY ARMOURED CARS.

"AGGRESSIVE NON-VIOLENCE" GANDHI'S NEW POLICY.

SERIOUS rioting occurred in Calcutta yesterday, when students and others observing the hartal, or mourning strike, as a protest against the imprisonment of Nationalist leaders, endeavoured to stop the tramways and other traffic. Additional armed police were called out, and armoured cars patrolled the streets.

Two tramcars were set on fire, and the fire brigade was stoned, one English officer being very seriously injured. Seven British officials in all were injured, and there were numerous admissions to hospital as the result of the clashes between the police and the rioters. In the afternoon the situation was described as being "under control."

Meantime, Mr. Gandhi has been outlining a more pugnacious form of "civil disobedience," which he styles "aggressive non-violence." He declares that women ought not to take part with the men in the defence of the salt pans.

Fines, instead of sentence of imprisonment, were imposed on two Nationalist leaders in Madras, and, as they declined to pay, their motor cars were seized by the police as they left the courthouse.

MOB STONE FIRE BRIGADE.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
CALCUTTA, Tuesday.

A hartal is usually a passive affair, consisting of a voluntary suspension of trade and other activities for a fixed period as a sign of mourning, but serious developments occurred here to-day in connection with the hartal organised as a protest against the imprisonment of the Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, President of the National Congress, and of Mr. Sen Gupta, the Mayor of Calcutta.

Not content with ceasing work themselves, crowds of students and carters endeavoured to prevent anybody else from working. They placed obstacles on the rails to stop the tramway service, and two tramcars were burned in the southern section of the city. In the northern area students held up tramcars and cut off their trolley ropes.

ARMED POLICE ON DUTY.

The authorities quickly took steps to deal with the situation, which, in a brief period, became very menacing. Extra police, fully armed, were posted in all the important centres, and armoured cars patrolled the streets.

Attempts were made to interfere with traffic in various parts of the city, and there were numerous clashes between the police and the crowds before the latter were dispersed. The streets were littered with brickbats, road "metal," sheet iron and broken clubs.

When the Fire Brigade arrived to endeavour to save the burning tramcars they were attacked by the mob, and Mr. Durrant, an English Fire Brigade officer, sustained a fracture of the skull. He is at present in hospital, and there is very faint hope of his recovery. Several other members of the Brigade were injured.

Thirteen Sikhs, two of whom were wounded, were afterwards arrested. This is stated to be the first time in Calcutta's history that the Fire Brigade has been attacked.

ENGLISH GIRL INJURED.

In all, seven British officials were injured during the rioting, and many persons were admitted to hospital. Miss Dench, a London girl, daughter of the Station Superintendent at Sealdeh, is in hospital, badly cut and bruised by stones and other missiles.

It appears that, against the advice of the police, she tried to dash through the riot area on her motor cycle, but her way was blocked by a mob, and she had to run for her life, amid a hail of road metal. Her motor cycle was seized and burned by the rioters.

SHOTS FIRED AT MOB.

There has been one case of firing by the police. A European sergeant opened fire to save an injured fellow-sergeant, who was being attacked by Sikhs in South Calcutta. Two of the mob were wounded.

Early in the afternoon the authorities got the situation under control.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
CALCUTTA, Tuesday, 10.30 p.m.

Sixteen students arrested yesterday evening were brought before a special magistrate at Alipore to-day on charges of rioting, unlawful assembly and violating police orders. One pleaded "guilty," and prayed for mercy. Two pleaded "not guilty." The rest refused to make any statement at all. They were remanded till the 22nd inst.

The special tribunal appointed to try the persons charged in connection with the Alipore bomb case has adjourned for lack of prison vans to bring the accused persons to court and also of sergeants for the escort.

At a meeting of Indian medical practitioners in Bengal to-night it was decided that no attempts should be made to request the General Medical Council of Great Britain to reconsider its decision not to recognise Indian degrees, but it was decided, in order to record a protest against the "undeserved slur" on the Indian medical graduates, and in order to develop the resources of India, that all Indian practitioners should be recommended to utilise Indian medical drugs and appliances as far as possible, or, where overseas goods are essential, should import them from countries other than Great Britain.

FINES INSTEAD OF IMPRISONMENT.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
MADRAS, Tuesday.

Mr. Prakasam, the former member of the Legislative Assembly, who has been prominent during the past few days in organising violation of the Salt Laws here, and Mr. Nageswara Rao, editor of the paper Andhra Patrika, another leader of civil disobedience in Madras City, were both convicted this afternoon under the Salt Act, and fined five hundred rupees (£37 10s.) each.

Both pleaded guilty, and Mr. Prakasam added that he broke the law deliberately.

The Magistrate asked: "Do you wish to express regret?" to which the accused men replied: "None at all. Not on this side of life."

SWIFT JUSTICE.

Both men refused to pay their fines, whereupon they were warned that their property would be attached. The threat was carried out sooner than they expected, for as they were leaving the courthouse the police seized their motor cars on a distraint warrant issued by the magistrate. The machines will be sold at auction by the authorities to raise the money for the fines.

This is the first salt law case in which a fine, without the alternative of imprisonment, has been imposed.

Mr. Nageswara Rao addressed a meeting on leaving the court. He declared that, although his motor car had been attached, he would continue to disobey the salt law, even if all his property were taken away by the Government.

IF GANDHI IS ARRESTED.

Mr. Prakasam exhorted the people to be prepared to court imprisonment in thousands if Mr. Gandhi were arrested.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
KARACHI, Tuesday.

THE MAHATMA'S NEW POLICY.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
NAVSARI, Tuesday.

Addressing himself to the men, Mr. Gandhi outlined a more aggressive form of disobedience against the Salt Law, which, for want of a better name, he called "aggressive non-violence."

"Hitherto," said the Mahatma, "I asked you to resist the snatching of salt by the police from your closed fists, and to suffer mutely and weakly whatever injuries the police might inflict on you. If you have got the strength for suffering and faith in your mission, I want to go many steps further."

Pointing to the salt pans prepared by the volunteers, Mr. Gandhi said: "I like henceforth to regard you as trustees or guardians, not merely of the precious national wealth locked up in your fists, but of the whole treasure now preparing in the salt pans. Defend that treasure with your life, if that be the price you have to pay for it. When the police come to raid these pans, surround them and do not let the police touch them until they have overpowered you by sheer brute force. From your sufferings will rise into being, not only purnaswaraj [complete independence], but a non-violent army for its defence."

WHERE WOMEN ARE NOT WANTED.

The Mahatma then declared that women ought not to take part alongside the men in the defence of the salt pans. "I still give the Government credit that they will not make war upon our women," he added. "It would be wrong on our part to provoke them to do so. This is a man's fight, and, so long as the Government confine their attention to the men, there will be time enough for the women to court assaults when the Government have crossed the limit. Let it not be said of us that the men sought to shelter behind the women, well knowing that they would be safe if they took the women with them in what, for want of a better name, I will call 'aggressive non-violence.'"

"Women have, in the programme I have placed before them, enough work and to spare," concluded Mr. Gandhi, "and all the adventure and risk they are capable of undertaking."

AN INVITATION TO BOMBAY.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
BOMBAY, Tuesday.

"I am hourly needed in Gujerat to consolidate my work," Mr. Gandhi has replied to a telegram which he has received from the President of the Bombay Provincial Congress Committee inviting him to Bombay. He adds, however: "But I will come when I am absolutely needed."

SOVIET CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
MOSCOW, Tuesday.

The official Tass Agency states that the ceremonial opening of the British section of the All-Union Western Chamber of Commerce took place to-day.

The ceremony was attended by Litvinoff, Acting Commissioner for Foreign Affairs; by Khinchuk, Chairman of the Council of the Chamber of Commerce, and by Sir Esmond Ovey, the British Ambassador.

MOTOR TRADE PLANS.

AMALGAMATION ANTICIPATED.

British motor manufacturers are about to make a "spring offensive" on the markets of the world, now that Mr. Snowden has set their fears at rest regarding the McKenna duties.

An official of the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders said: "British manufacturers hope to make this a 'record' year, and the fact that the McKenna duties have been retained will enable manufacturers to concentrate on capturing the overseas markets. There is every indication that they will be successful.

"The branch offices opened in Australia, New Zealand and South Africa by the British section of the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders are proving of very great value in keeping the home factories informed of market conditions and supplying them with information, as well as carrying on propaganda for British products.

"Already the industry employs considerably more than a quarter of a million people, and I think there is every likelihood of that figure being greatly increased when the various development schemes and factory extensions are in full swing. It is not unlikely that there may be some important and interesting amalgamations in the motor world very shortly."

The latest figures show that British motor exports exceed imports by £1,007,390 for the first three months of the year, exports of vehicles and accessories being valued at £2,584,614, and imports at £1,577,224.

Several manufacturers, it is understood, propose to produce special overseas models of the type which appeals to the Dominions' motorists. They will be built only for export.

COMMERCIAL VEHICLES.

The commercial vehicle industry is already "forging ahead" in the words of a member of a large manufacturing firm. "One manufacturer has sold 1,150 new type 'buses and coaches since the Commercial Vehicle Show in November last year," he said.

"The general sales manager of another firm has just left on an extensive tour of South America to investigate new methods of distribution, and generally to study the market conditions and requirements.

"An example of the way in which British manufacturers are studying their overseas customers' needs is the provision of left-hand drive for countries where the rule of the road is 'keep to the right.'

THE WORLD'S WAGES.

AMERICAN WORKERS PAID BEST.

FREE STATE SEVENTH ON LIST.

Professor J. H. Richardson, recently appointed to the Chair of Industrial Relations at Leeds University, gave details of the relative value of wages paid to workers in different countries in a paper read at a meeting of the Royal Statistical Society in London last night. Comparisons of wages in different countries are often made by converting money wages from foreign countries into sterling by the rates of exchange, but this may give misleading results owing to differences in the cost of living, he said.

United States	197
Canada	165
Australia	148
Sweden	108
Denmark	107
Great Britain	100
Netherlands	87
Germany	78
Switzerland	77

He pointed out that in the United States and Canada the figures would be several points lower if allowance were made for high rents, and in the United States a figure of 160 would be more representative for the general level of wages, because workers in the particular occupations covered were strongly organised, and their wages were considerably higher than those paid to workers in many other occupations in America.

A NEW CUNARDER.

PLANS FOR A GIANT VESSEL.

"No contracts have been placed for a new Cunard liner, but plans are in hand for building another vessel for trans-Atlantic service." The Liverpool manager of the Cunard Line made this official statement yesterday with regard to a report that orders had been placed for a new Cunarder, which it was thought would regain for the line the blue riband of the Atlantic, held so long by the Mauretania.

Full details of the new liner are not available, but she will not be an oil-driven vessel, though it is expected her engines will develop astonishing horse-power—200,000. "It is impossible to say the speed of the vessel at present," added the official. "With regard to regaining the blue riband, this is largely a question of economics. There is an economic speed to be attained, and if someone else has reached that before us, it is impossible for us to go beyond that limit. Whether the limit has been reached is not yet known."

It is understood that the tonnage of the vessel is unlikely to be as great as 70,000 tons, but the vessel will embrace all the new inventions and improvements.

A THOUSAND FEET LONG.

The plans of the new Cunarder show, according to Syren and Shipping, a three-funnelled cruiser-stern vessel a thousand feet long on the waterline, 115 feet beam, with designed speed on measured mile of 32 knots. The machinery is to consist of quadruple screw-geared turbines. She will carry first, second and tourist class passengers and emigrants, and practically all first class state-rooms will have bathrooms attached. A novel feature is a double-tiered smokeroom with balcony.

THE DUCHESS OF YORK.

KINGSTOWN'S DEMAND.

DEPUTIES ASKED TO SUPPORT BILL.

A resolution calling upon the parliamentary representatives of the County of Dublin to support the bill now before the Oireachtas for the creation of a coastal borough was adopted unanimously last night at the adjourned monthly meeting of the Kingstown Urban Council.

The Chairman (Mr. William Morrissey) said that since their last meeting a matter of very great importance had arisen concerning the township. The Minister for Local Government had withdrawn from the Greater Dublin Bill the clause dealing with the setting up of the coastal borough of Dun Laoghaire. A Parliamentary Committee, consisting for the most part of opponents to the bill, had been convened to consider the whole matter. They had now reached a stage when they must request the county deputies to support the bill, and he moved a resolution to that effect.

SIX YEARS AGO.

Mr. J. M. Devitt, seconding, said that for many years the people responsible for the local government of Dun Laoghaire and Blackrock realised the great advantage that would follow from the amalgamation of these districts and Dalkey into one area for administration. In 1924 they prepared and lodged with the Senate a bill to unite these districts into one borough. Informed by the Minister for Local Government that a Commission was being set up to inquire into the Greater Dublin project, the promoters did not proceed further with the bill.

This matter had been before the inhabitants for six years, and, irrespective of political difficulties or class interests, the vast majority of the electors favoured the change. When the Minister for Local Government introduced his bill the Councils of Dun Laoghaire, Blackrock, Dalkey and Killiney informed him that his proposals were approved of by them as representing the electors of their districts, and they ratified the proposals relating to the coastal borough almost with unanimity.

The Dail contended that its functions were governed by the will of the people. It was, therefore, not unreasonable to request the deputies representing the County of Dublin to withdraw their opposition to the coastal borough and to support the Minister's proposal.

CASE OF LONDON.

It had been stated that to establish a borough so close to Dublin would detract from the dignity and importance of the city. This assertion could not be defended, inasmuch as the growth and development of a successful health and pleasure resort within reach of the city would have the effect of adding considerably to Dublin's attractions without in any way interfering with its importance. London consisted of a large number of boroughs, which functioned side by side without any difficulty.

It would seem to be more appropriate for the Dail to encourage the growth of urban districts and their development into boroughs rather than to retard their progress. Suggestions had been made that these areas should be included in the city boundaries. Should this happen it would be a calamity for the urban districts, and would retard and delay their development.

Clontarf was added to the City of Dublin thirty years ago, and was left neglected until quite recently. The various problems peculiar to city administration would absorb the time of the City Council and its officers, and the affairs of the coastal townships would suffer.

If representation were to be made in proportion to population these urban districts probably would have on the City Council one or two members, who never could succeed in obtaining for their districts the special attention which they required.

DEVELOPMENT OF BUSINESS.

It had been stated that the coastal townships owed their existence to Dublin. The inhabitants said that the growth of these districts was due to their position by the seaside, to their healthy surroundings, and to the development of the local business. There was no greater community of interests between Dublin and Dun Laoghaire than there was between Dublin and Bray or Greystones, or between any city and any seaside resort.

TOWNSHIP'S SERVICES.

Mr. M. F. O'Brien said that, lest the comparative silence of the Council might be construed as a sneaking support of the opposition to the creation of the Dun Laoghaire Borough, he thought it only right to point out that the township had tackled the housing question many years ago, before other townships awoke to their responsibilities. The rents of these houses were lower than in neighbouring districts, and the Council never had stopped building houses.

The township had an excellent supply of water from the Vartry, and had its own electric lighting system until it was taken over by the Electricity Supply Board. Wash-houses, public baths, hospitals and public libraries were provided; social services were in existence, and the sinking fund on the main drainage scheme was now paid off.

He mentioned these matters because some of the City and County members of the Dail did not seem to be conversant with them. Deputy Good, who opposed the merging of Rathmines and Pembroke with Dublin, now sought to have Dun Laoghaire merged into the City Borough.

"FIGHT TO THE LAST."

Mr. Mallins said that Dun Laoghaire had the lowest rates of any of the townships around, and this opposition to the coastal borough should be fought to the very last.

Mr. O'Donnell said that this opposition was merely a pawn in the political game. If their views on the borough were not considered they should address the people of the district by holding a series of public meetings.

Dr. Merrin and Mr. Bartley also supported the resolution.

Mr. Dooge said that they could not expect the Government, in face of the opposition of the Independent Party, led by Mr. Good and Professor Thrift, to go forward with the bill as it was.

The resolution, as stated, was adopted unanimously.

ANGLO-EGYPTIAN TREATY.

DISCUSSIONS AT FOREIGN OFFICE.

Negotiations in connection with the Anglo-Egyptian Treaty were resumed at the British Foreign Office last night, when the British and Egyptian delegations again met in conference.

Nahas Pasha, the Egyptian Prime Minister, and his colleagues were met by Mr. Arthur Henderson, the Foreign Secretary; Lord Passfield, Dominions Secretary; Mr. Tom Shaw, Minister for War; Lord Thomson, Air Minister; Sir Percy Loraine, British High Commissioner for Egypt, and officials of the Foreign Office.

Monday's session lasted until 5 o'clock yesterday morning.

RATIONALISING INDUSTRIES.

LORD PRIVY SEAL'S ANNOUNCEMENT.

A question put by Commander Kenworthy, in the House of Commons yesterday, enabled the Lord Privy Seal (Mr. J. H. Thomas) to supplement the announcement made in his recent speech at Manchester, to the effect that "The Ctiy" had undertaken to provide money for the reorganisation and rationalisation of industry.

The Lord Privy Seal said that he was glad to be able to announce that a company had that day been registered at Somerset House, under the name of the Bankers' Industrial Development Company, with a nominal capital of £6,000,000, divided into 45 "A" shares and 15 "B" shares of £100,000 each.

The company had the support of a very considerable proportion of the most influential banking and financial institutions of the country, by whom the "A" shares had been subscribed. The "B" shares of the company had been subscribed by the Securities Management Trust, Ltd.

THE DIRECTORATE.

The Right Hon. Montague Norman, Chairman;

Baron Bruno Schroder, with Major Albert Pam as alternate.

Mr. A. H. Wagg, with Mr. Nigel Campbell as alternate.

Mr. E. R. Peacock.

Mr. C. Bruce Gardner, Managing Director for the Securities Management Trust, Ltd.

In addition to the Board of Directors, the Lord Privy Seal continued, the company will have the services of an Advisory Council, on which a number of influential persons engaged in financial business will be invited to serve. The Advisory Council will have no executive duties to perform, but their services, either collectively or individually, will be available to the Board of Directors in a consultative capacity.

The object of the company is to receive and consider the schemes submitted by the basic industries of this country for the purpose of their rationalisation, either by industry or by regions. In the case of schemes which may be approved, arrangements will be made for the provision, in one way or another, and through existing agencies, of such money as may seem to be essential.

[Neither the directors of the company nor the members of the advisory council will receive any remuneration for their services. The company's business address is 5 Lothbury, E.C. 2.]

Replying to an inquiry by Commander Kenworthy as to what steps would be taken to safeguard the position of displaced workpeople, Mr. Thomas referred to an answer given by the Prime Minister on 5th February. In this answer Mr. Macdonald said that it would not be practicable to identify, among the unemployed, those whose unemployment was attributable to disarmament and rationalisation.

THE GOVERNMENT'S POSITION.

When the Lord Privy Seal talks about the money being supplied through existing agencies, asked Commander Kenworthy, does that mean that when this company approves the schemes of rationalisation, we will be consulted with a view to guaranteeing loans by the State?

Mr. Thomas—In so far as State money is concerned, it is not intended to be, and I hope will not be, involved. (Opposition cheers.)

In that case, where does the Government come in with regard to this company? asked Commander Kenworthy, amid a cheer from the Left Wing Labour members.

There were Opposition cheers when Mr. Thomas replied—So far as the money is concerned, the Government does not come in. I announced, in a speech at Manchester, he went on, in reply to much criticism about the action of the bankers, that money could, and would, be found for reorganisation and rationalisation. I was asked in this House what I meant by "the City," and many other questions. I have given the answer which is supplementary to my Manchester speech.

Mr. Hammersley (Conservative, Stockport)—Are we to take it that what is intended is that the reorganisation of the basic industries is only to take place with the approval of this Council?

Mr. Thomas—On the contrary, I hope—in fact, I know—that there are a number of schemes being considered to-day of reorganisation. When I am consulted I give help towards them. I announce this as another stage in that reorganisation on the financial side that I announced previously.

THE SECURITIES TRUST.

The Securities Management Trust, which has subscribed for the "B" shares of the new company, was founded last year to deal with credits for industry, and to assist manufacturers and distributors to develop the sale of their products. Its formation was generally recognised as a move by "The City" to help Mr. Thomas in his schemes for improving trade and reducing unemployment. Last month it was announced that Mr. Charles Bruce Gardner had accepted an exclusive appointment as managing director.

The Colonial Advisory Committee, which was appointed last July to consider schemes likely to aid and develop agriculture and industry in the Colonies, has issued its first report. During seven months there were sixty applications from twenty-five separate Colonial Administrations for assistance from the Colonial Development Funds. In a majority of cases the Committee were able to make a favourable recommendation. The cost of the projects approved to the end of February was £6,629,494, spread over a period of five years. The expenditure to be incurred in Great Britain in connection with the projects is £2,238,117. The total assistance to be provided from the fund was £1,369,632.

EXPORT TRADE.

Mr. R. A. Taylor (Labour, Lincoln) asked whether the Government would provide guarantees for the export trade, where expenditure abroad would promote employment at home.

Mr. J. H. Thomas said that the assistance considered proper by the Government was already available under the Exports Credits (Guarantees) Scheme, a bill to extend the duration of which was now before the House.

FIFTEEN LIVES LOST IN CINEMA FIRE.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
ROME, Tuesday.

A fire broke out during a performance at a cinema in Licata, Sicily, last night. The theatre was full of adults and children, and fifteen lives were lost in a panic that followed. A number of persons were injured.

A strip of film bursting into flame in the operator's box was the cause of the fatal panic. The fire did not spread beyond the operator's box, but the flames terrified the young people packing the balcony of the theatre.

All the victims of the panic, whose ages range between 12 and 18 years, were either suffocated or crushed to death.

WHAT THE TAXPAYER RESENTS.

In a leading article The Times to-day observes:—During the interval which has elapsed since the Budget speech, opinion in the country has had time to crystallise a little. The first impressions of Monday afternoon have, perhaps, been revised here and there in detail, but in the main the depressing sensations have persisted. Whatever relief may have been felt at the rigidly orthodox protection accorded to the Sinking Fund has been entirely obliterated by the dismal prospect of increased taxation devoted to no constructive purpose. What the taxpayer most resents is that twelve years after the conclusion of the War, at a time when the other great nations are steadily reducing their taxation, the contributions extracted from his pocket have actually been increased, with nothing to show for it all but an extension of the dole. It may be admitted at once, in fairness to Mr. Snowden, that on the technical side his second Budget possesses a number of the duller, but none the less essential, virtues, the absence of which most critics of our public finances have in recent years had reason to regret.

To make the taxpayer pay his bills is eminently right and proper. It may even, in certain circumstances, be magnificent; but it is not in itself economy, and economy of the most rigid kind is the one thing which the country has for years most urgently needed. Meanwhile, the highest hope that Mr. Snowden holds out to the over-burdened citizen is that with luck it may not be necessary next year to add to the load. In the debate on the Budget resolutions yesterday Mr. Churchill rightly treated this aspiration of his successor, which, no doubt, was sincere, with a certain degree of healthy scepticism, fully justified by the subsequent remarks of Mr. Maxton. But the satisfaction that Mr. Snowden may cull from the displeasure of Mr. Maxton and some other of the more extreme members of his party must be very limited; for the truth is that his Budget seems to have pleased no one.

BEARERS OF THE BURDEN.

As a matter of national politics the Budget is even more objectionable, adds The Times. By exempting smaller incomes from any increase in taxation, and throwing the whole burden of inflated expenditure upon the shoulders of a steadily narrowing class, Mr. Snowden has aggravated one of the most disquieting tendencies of post-war democracy, namely—the growing divorce of representation from taxation. During the past ten years the relief of larger and larger sections of the electorate from any share in the fiscal consequences of their voting by the progressive remission of direct taxation has been the principal cause of the alarming growth in public expenditure.

THE DISAPPOINTED PROPHET.

MR. GANDHI STILL A FREE MAN.

The arrest and conviction of Mr. Sen Gupta, the Swarajist Mayor of Calcutta, for publicly reading aloud seditious literature, have been followed by a violent outbreak of rioting, in which the police and the fire brigade were attacked and roughly handled, tramcars were stoned and burnt, and the streets were only cleared with difficulty by the police, remarks The Times editorially. On the other side of India the Hindu traders of Bombay have closed their shops and offices in protest against the conviction of Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, the President of the National Congress, and Mr. Gandhi's chief lieutenant, on a charge, which he admitted, of breaking the Salt Laws. A number of other manufacturers and vendors of illicit salt have been sentenced to imprisonment, but Mr. Gandhi remains at large—to his manifest annoyance. The decision of the Indian Government to leave him unarrested as long as possible has naturally led to criticism. Legalists, shocked by his defiance of the law, and naturally and properly alarmed by the support given to the Mahatma by the ignorant and the young, deplore the failure of the authorities to arrest the prophet of civil disobedience; the police and the magistrates, burdened by new and heavy responsibilities, would probably agree with them. But, as a well-informed correspondent pointed out in an article on Mr. Gandhi's campaign, which appeared in our columns on Monday, the Government of India have excellent political reasons for holding their hand as long as possible.

Mr. Gandhi's sole object is to wreck the coming conference between the British Government, the Indian States and the political leaders of British India. He knows that the Viceroy's announcement of the conference has rallied a body of moderate Indian opinion to its support. He knows also that he enjoys a peculiar prestige in Hindu India, even among his political opponents. Among the politically minded he is the living symbol of a natural desire for self-determination, to the devout of all classes—and India remains a country of devotees—he is a prophet honoured even in his own country. He believed when he started on his slow march to the sea at Dandi that he would be arrested, and that his arrest would arouse a storm which would sweep the moderates into the extremist camp.

MUCH DISAPPOINTED.

So far Mr. Gandhi has been largely disappointed. He has not been arrested, nor, though some moderate leaders have shown manifest signs of nervousness, has there been any such general movement in favour of civil disobedience as attended his earlier campaigns. He is isolated. Pandit Motilal Nehru, the only political leader of note, who supported his declaration of independence for India at Lahore, is known to disapprove of the launching of the civil disobedience movement, for which Mr. Gandhi himself declared India was unready less than four months ago. He has always sought to win sympathy for his political and social teachings in this and in other countries, notably in America, and, unlike earlier prophets, he has courted advertisement fully as eagerly as he has welcomed adversity.

For all his stage management, for all his mastery of the appeal to sentiment, there is no indication that his performances on the beach of Dandi have aroused more than an amused curiosity or strengthened the cause of Indian nationalism abroad.

PROTECTING BRITISH CONSUMERS.

COUNCIL TO REVIEW PRICES.

Mr. Graham, President of the Board of Trade, in the House of Commons yesterday, told Sir Kingsley Wood that he hoped to introduce a bill dealing with the proposed Consumers' Council soon after Easter. The new Council would have power to review prices at all stages from the raw material to the retail price.

Sir Cyril Cobb was adopted last night as Conservative candidate for the West Fulham parliamentary by-election at a meeting of the local Conservative Association.

BROADCAST ON THE BRITISH BUDGET.

"GOOD EVENING, FELLOW-TAXPAYERS."

—MR. SNOWDEN.

INCOME TAX, SUPER-TAX AND LAND VALUES.

"Good evening, fellow-taxpayers," said Mr. Philip Snowden, when he began his address to British wireless listeners last night from 11 Downing street, London.

"I dare say," he added, "you have seen something in the newspapers to-day about the Budget. You are probably all familiar by now with its main proposals.

"First of all, I want to explain how the Budget of the year is built up. I shall try to show what the problem is that faces the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he prepares his Budget. The total cost of expenditure for which I had to provide this year comes to £782,000,000. You will have noticed that the cost of the war debt is over half the total of the national expenditure.

"Now I will turn to the revenue side. Taking all sources of revenue together, I get a figure for our probable income of the coming year—that is apart from any changes I propose to make. That figure this year amounts to £740,000,000. That is the expected revenue. Thus, at this stage we have expenditure £782,000,000, revenue £740,000,000, leaving a gap to be filled of £42,000,000.

HIS PROBLEM.

"How to fill this gap was the problem I had to solve. This year there are two special items we must note. On last year's Budget there was a deficit of fourteen and a half millions—that is to say, revenue failed to meet expenditure last year by that sum. I had to do something to make good that deficit of fourteen and a half millions. It was absolutely futile to pay off debt, a thing we were bound to do, by borrowing money for the purpose. Therefore, I have to find money to make up this deficit.

"But a Budget is more than a matter of figures. It has a very big influence for good or ill in the country's affairs, and it is with that aspect that I now propose to deal. A year ago, just before the election, I broadcast a talk on Labour's financial and taxation policy. I said that we should pursue a sane policy of debt reduction. I then said: 'Labour's taxation policy is to raise revenue mainly by income tax and sur-tax, by death duties and by the tax of land values.' These are the two guiding principles which I have kept constantly in mind in framing this year's Budget.

TO PAY HIS WAY.

"I am determined to pay my way by sound financial methods. The policy of postponing the evil day does not appeal to me. When more expenditure has to be faced taxation should be raised immediately.

"It is well known that new taxation does not give its full yield the year it is imposed. I have arranged the new proposals that they shall give not only sufficient revenue to meet this year's expenditure, but shall give enough to meet the following years.

"I cannot predict the future, and I cannot make any binding promises. The new taxation which I have had to impose will be sufficient to meet next year's expenditure without any further increase in taxation.

NEW TAXES UNAVOIDABLE.

"The new taxation was unavoidable, and I have put the burden only upon those who are best able to bear it. I have placed no new burden upon industry. I have put it only on the rich, those people who have more than the mere necessaries of life. I only asked to contribute more those people who have more than reasonable luxuries.

"A misconception must be cleared away lest you think that, as the standard rate of tax has risen from 4s. to 4s. 6d., therefore your contribution to that tax has risen in the same proportion. As a matter of fact, instead of giving a relief on the first £225 of taxable income, I am giving it on the first £250, and instead of fixing the relief—relief, mark you—at 2s. 3d. in the £, I am fixing it at 2s. 6d.

"This may be a little difficult to follow, because the income tax is a complicated affair; but the fact is that very large numbers of taxpayers will pay no more tax than they do at present, while some will pay actually less.

"Rather more than two million people pay income tax. About three-quarters of them, under my proposal, will pay no more than they did before.

THE SUPER-TAX.

"About the super-tax and the estate duty I need say less. These are duties for broad backs. We must remember we have still to pay for the war, and, as war-time made fortunes are now coming under review for estate duties, I am sure there can be no reasonable complaint if the State should exact an increased contribution from those fortunes.

"These have been my guiding principles, and I feel confident that you will agree that they have been faithfully carried out in the Budget.

LAND VALUES.

"If our ancestors had had the foresight and the wisdom to impose a duty on land values a hundred years ago what vast wealth that has fallen haphazard into the hands of private citizens would have been available for beneficent State purposes. The justice of the claim of the community to share in land values has long been to me a cherished conviction. That conviction is shared by two parties of the land. I am not, indeed, proposing to levy a duty on land values in this Budget. I am not even prejudging what the form of impost should be. Both the State and local authorities have claims to

FINANCIAL.

In Lombard street overnight money was in more urgent demand, and the rate ran up to 3 per cent. and sometimes more. Discounts were firmer in tone. All but £59,000 of the £397,000 of Cape gold was bought by Germany.—(Page 12.)

The Extinction of Wealth.

The expenditure side of Mr. Snowden's Budget reaches the huge figure of £871,000,000. Only half a century has passed since Mr. Gladstone lifted his hands and voice in horror at the prospect of a £200,000,000 Budget. He would be shocked if he were alive to-day, but we think that his graver concern would be, not the extent, but the incidence, of Mr Snowden's demand upon the British taxpayer. The Budget's sole addition to indirect taxation is the almost negligible tax on beer, and the bulk of the increased toll will be raised directly, not from all the payers of income tax, but from a mere fraction of that class. Some 2,150,000 persons are chargeable with income tax in Great Britain, but, as a result of abatements and allowances, not more than a quarter of them will be affected by Mr. Snowden's increase of sixpence in the standard rate. It is upon these half-million persons—with incomes of £500 a year and upwards—that virtually the whole burden of the new taxation falls. The screw, starting gently with the modest householder, turns with increasing ferocity until it pierces the very bowels of the man who, by inheritance or by his own toil and enterprise, is the possessor of great wealth. The class from which the Socialist Government will raise some £30,000,000 in this fashion represents one-fifty-seventh part of the British electorate and one-ninetieth part of the population of Great Britain. This small minority will be fleeced. The great majority of citizens, like the ninety and nine of the hymn, will lie safely in the shelter of the Socialist fold.

It is an easy, a popular and a fatal policy. On the economic side the merciless taxation of wealth must impair industry and trade. It discourages the enterprise that produces industry; it withdraws from the fruitful service of trade the money that is claimed for the State's bottomless purse. In this way Mr. Snowden's attack upon wealth will create unemployment. The remedy will be a further increase of direct taxation, with still further unemployment; and from that dismal rut there will be small chance of escape. On the social side the loss will be yet more formidable. England has thriven in the past through the character and energy of her upper and upper-middle classes. They have been the makers of her Empire, the founders of her commerce, the leaders of her forlorn hopes, the stabilising influence in all the crises of her affairs. To-day these classes have lost political power, and now the fiat of financial extermination has gone forth against them: the fate of England's superior classes is to be the fate of the British Navy. Into the place of this fallen aristocracy will step—such is the whole purpose of Socialist policy and legislation—the new proletariat, which will have a single function and two qualities. Its function will be to keep a Socialist Government in office; its qualities will be a vast appetite for doles and an utter indifference to the duties of citizenship. The untaxed voter of the new régime will have no personal interest in the cost of government.

Dr. Johnson said that writers who lay on the watch for novelty could have little hope of greatness; "for great things cannot have escaped former observation." He could not have foreseen the mind of modern England. Eighteenth century thinkers could not have imagined an age in which the teachings of history would be ignored or defied. The classics are out of fashion, but to-day they reward their lingering votaries with lively parallels to the course of modern politics. The British proletariat is reacting to Socialism precisely as the Athenian proletariat reacted to Cleon. The decline of character and discipline in England, the growth of doles, the increasing dependence on foreign supplies have their full and exact precedents in the history of the Roman Empire. Any scholar can turn to his Gibbon for passages which show how great dependencies were lost and how the leaders of rebellious peoples dared to press their arrogant claims upon the councils of empire. To-day, while English democracy demands and receives its panem et circenses, India is in incipient revolt and Egyptian extremists are browbeating the British Government. We hope and, perhaps, we may dare to believe that history, yet to be made, will not carry the parallels to their tragic end. The English people have shown before now a quality which both Greeks and Romans lacked. Having created a perilous emergency through their own folly, they have mastered it through a trimphant access of vigour and common-sense. On the survival of that quality depends the survival of the British Empire.

Atlantic Traffic.

The announcement that the Cunard Company proposes to build a new liner of very large size indicates that the race for speed supremacy in the Atlantic is about to be resumed. Having lost virtually their entire fleet of merchant ships after the War, the Germans are determined to recapture their trans-Atlantic trade, and to that end they have produced the Bremen and the Europa, sister ships, which have broken all existing "records" for speed. The Europa has crossed the Atlantic in four days, seventeen hours and six minutes, thus leaving the Mauretania a long way behind. Already Germany's challenge has been taken up by the White Star Line, which has a 60,000-ton ship on the stocks in Belfast. This new monster is expected to surpass the feat of the Europa, and her engines were built specially to enable her to smash the German "record." France and Italy also are making preparations for the launch of speedy liners. Only yesterday the Atlantique, a ship of 40,000 tons, was launched at St. Nazaire, but she will ply on the South American route, which demands not so much speed as comfort and stability. The Italians, it is said, have a liner in preparation which will be not only faster, but bigger, more comfortable and more efficient in every way than any other ship that ever has sailed the seas. It seems now, however, that the Cunard Company intends to "go one better" than anybody else. The new vessel will have a tonnage of at least 70,000, as against the Majestic's 56,000, which represents the largest tonnage afloat to-day. Her engines will develop the stupendous horse-power of 200,000, and she will be capable of a speed of at least thirty-two knots. If, and when, this great ship is launched, she probably will make mincemeat of the Europa's "record," but by that time—three years hence—other rivals, doubtless, will have established new figures. Thus the passion for speed continues to drive mankind to ever-increasing efforts. Sooner or later, of course, a limit will be reached, and then ship-designers will turn their attention to something else; but for the time being the liner that can cross the Atlantic in the shortest space of time will attract the richest custom. Many experts in shipbuilding affairs take the view that the Bremen and Europa already have over-stepped the mark, inasmuch as their running costs are too great. Obviously there would be no point in the building of "super" ships for Atlantic or any other crossings if they would result in financial loss; but the competition is so keen that for the moment even economic considerations must yield to the demand for speed. Ireland is likely to benefit from this development; for, although the new Cunarder will be built on the Clyde, the Belfast shipyards still are supreme.

Excavations at Kish.

The great advance of archæology in recent years is manifested by the fact that a temple at Kish, built by Nebuchadnezzar about B.C. 600, now is thought young enough to be destroyed in order that older remains beneath its foundations may be unearthed. An element of mystery surrounds the building of this temple, which is known to have been dedicated to Ninhil, the mother-goddess, and to some other deity, since, although bricks bearing the stamp of Nebuchadnezzar and of a later monarch, Nabonidus, the father of Belshazzar, have been discovered, none of the king's other inscriptions mentions it. This omission is unusual, and M. Watelin, who, in a learned volume, has described the building, confesses that this circumstance baffles him. It may be that, while the temple is being demolished, some further evidence will be discovered. Hopes that rich discoveries will reward the excavations in the "red stratum," in which the temple's foundations are laid, are high. Already an inscribed brick of Merodach-baladan, who revolted successfully from King Sargon of Assyria in B.C. 721, and established anew the Babylonian kingdom, has been found in the vicinity. Moreover, prospecting operations in the "red stratum" have revealed painted ware and neolithic implements, belonging to the days when Kish was founded before B.C. 5000. The possibilities of the proposed work are entrancing and may give us a new knowledge of the lives of the early Sumerians and the first incursions of the Semites. The banks of the Euphrates were the cradle of civilisation, and as long ago as B.C. 2000 Khammurabi had evolved a code of laws which displayed an astonishing grasp of legal necessities. Like English law, it was case-made, and was based on the decisions of judges in individual plaints. The Sumerian language survived for some time in Babylonian law courts—a proof of the excellence of the old Sumerian law. We await with interest the results of the new excavations.

A Phantom Pack.

Only a generation ago, when we were less sophisticated and probably pleasanter, we used to derive periodical thrills from spectral apparitions. Some families made a speciality of their ghosts, and in ancient manors and baronial halls the haunted room was a macabre attraction for all who were not expected to sleep in it. The "white bird" of the Oxenhams, whose appearance foretold a death in the family, has become famous in literature, since Charles Kingsley mentioned it in "Westward Ho!" and speculations about the character and habits of the Glamis ghost were an ever-fruitful source of interest in Edwardian drawing-rooms. Leprechauns and pixies trod the bogs and moors of Ireland and England, and embellished them by their apocryphal presence. We did not wish to meet them, but we liked to think that they were there. Science now forbids these amiable conceits, and so we welcome the news that the "Cwn annwn"—or "hounds of hell"—are abroad again in the Vale of Glamorgan. In spite of their grim name, it is refreshing to learn that old-fashioned ghosts manage to survive. An ancestor of Lieutenant-Colonel Prichard, of Pwllywrach, where the phantom pack is said to have been heard recently, employed a careless huntsman, who paid dearly for his fault. For three days he dallied at the Newport fair, and forgot to arrange that the hounds should be fed. As soon as he entered the kennels on his return the famished animals tore the wretched man to bits. The tale is sad, as facts that give rise to eerie legends usually are sad; but, if we must choose, we should prefer to meet King Charles stalking headless down Whitehall in the approved fashion rather than to conjure up an ectoplasm of the unhappy monarch in a stuffy room.

He was instituted Rector of Holywood in March, 1920, in succession to the Rev. Canon A. E. Ross, B.D. Since 1922 he has been Prebendary of Dunsford in Down Cathedral. In 1927 he succeeded Archdeacon Barton as Precentor.

GLORY OF THE FLOWER.

SPRING IN THE BOTANIC GARDENS.

The Botanic Gardens in Glasnevin are beginning to display the gay spring spirit on every side, trees showing a mist of green instead of bare branches, and there is colour in the flower borders.

A new piece of land is being planted and set out with flower beds on the far side of the river at the end of the Gardens, near the entrance gate, and will form a pleasant addition to the grounds.

Under the trees and in all the open spaces the daffodils sway and toss in the breeze—a shitfing sea of yellow in every shade. Here and there wind flowers star the grass in the shaded nooks. Cherry trees of many species flutter their first frail sprays of blossom—rose and white. Already on the magnolia bushes a furry calyx or two has opened to reveal the great white bloom against the leafless branches of the shrub.

The pond is undergoing the process of spring cleaning, and men are engaged in clearing it out and making it fit for its summer array of water lilies and setting in order its edging of flower beds.

HOTHOUSE SPLENDOUR.

In the hothouses there is great splendour. Hippeastrums of enormous size, in crimson and red and pink, rear their heads proudly out of a setting of the humble but far sweeter mignonette. Calceolarias, in many gaudy shades, make a flaunting mass of fiery colour. There is something blatant about the calceolaria—something redolent of a Lord Mayor's procession in its superfluous opulence. The primulas and cinerarias alongside them, in their severe and slender grace, have an air of despising their plutocratic neighbours. Delicate indoor rhododendrons carry masses of exquisite faint-rose bloom, some of it already scattered; but, then, it falls so soon, both from the hothouse variety and the hardy outdoor rhododendron—a cinderella of a shrub that leaves the scene of gaiety early, lest disaster befall; too proud to remain when its first beauty of youth shows signs of fading.

In contrast with these giants at one end of the hothouse that contains them is a stand with many tiny plants, whose names, as vouched by the labels, are in inverse proportion to their size—the smaller the plant the longer the name; scraps of rock plants, baby auriculas and primulas, and miniature replicas of many larger species.

WEATHER FORECAST

General Inference.—A ridge of high pressure crossing the British Isles is likely to maintain fair weather in most districts, apart from local showers. A depression moving North-eastwards across Iceland may, however, cause some rain or drizzle in the North-western districts of Scotland.

LONDON LETTER.

TUESDAY NIGHT.

City men came to business early to-day in order to review the Budget with their colleagues, and the opinion generally expressed was that the new taxation proposals would do nothing to help industrial revival, but, in all probability, will delay such a movement. On the Stock Exchange there was at first a decided setback in the prices of British Government stocks, but on second thoughts the market improved, and as the day passed it recovered most of its early losses. Interest was mainly professional, and it appears that those people who have been waiting until the Budget was over to invest money have not decided yet what they will do. One remarkable point about the Budget in financial circles is the fairly general decline in the value of British currency in the foreign exchange market, where sterling has fallen back rather sharply.

The Liberal Attitude.

It is obvious to-day that the Chancellor of the Exchequer will receive the full support of the Liberal Party for the adoption of his Budget. A meeting of the party has been called to discuss the proposals, and, while there is a strong objection to the increase in the income tax, there will be little opposition. Mr. Snowden's decision to drop the "safeguarding" duties when they expire pleases the free traders, and little stock is taken of the number of workers who will be thrown out of employment. That this will be large is appreciated fully in other circles and recognised among the members of the Labour Party. Strong efforts will be made by the affected industries during the next few weeks to bring the facts before Parliament, though hope of amelioration almost has been abandoned.

Labour Dissatisfaction.

The Labour extremists are annoyed greatly by the Budget, and it is intended to launch a big attack against it at the Independent Labour Conference at the week's end. In their idea it does not contain sufficient taxation, and they want it to be more drastic. On this point, however, desire must outrun performance; for the parliamentary machinery does not permit private members to move for increased taxation. The only thing that the private member can do is to move an amendment calling attention to the fact that the amounts asked for are too small. The Government is not worried, however; for it is convinced that Mr. Maxton and his followers will not put it out of office to give the Conservatives a chance.

The Egyptian Conference.

The proceedings attendant on the negotiations between the British Government and the Egyptian delegation attracted no little attention to-day; for the Conference sat from five o'clock yesterday afternoon until after four o'clock this morning. It is reported, however, that no decisions were reached. There is a rumour in political circles that the British Government refuses to give way to the demands of the Egyptian extremists, though ultimately it may concede some of the minor points. This afternoon I saw two members of the Egyptian delegation in a car passing the Houses of Parliament, but they sat so far back that they scarcely could be seen. I noticed, however, that both were looking very grave.

The Three-Power Pact.

The Italian delegation to the Naval Conference left Victoria Station for Rome to-day, headed by Signor Grandi, who is expected to return next week to attach his signature to the general understanding concerning the Three-Power Pact. The two committees now drafting the Treaty—one of which is composed of experts and the other of jurists—were hard at work today with the various reports accepted at yesterday's plenary session. Differences in language, particularly in the case of Japan, make the process of drafting a slow and difficult one; but efforts are being made to get the work done by Thursday evening. The draft must be submitted for final approval to every one of the Governments concerned, and at present it is not at all certain that the signing can be done on Tuesday next. It is possible that it will have to be delayed until the end of the week.

Reports.

The six reports of the first committee of the Naval Conference accepted at the plenary session were published to-day, and their bulk provides an idea of the mass of work which the Conference has accomplished. The reports in French and English are contained in about one hundred and thirty closely printed foolscap pages, and include a careful record of the work done in connection with the famous "global" and "categorical" tonnage controversy, "exempt" and special vessels, the humanisation of submarines, rules for the disposal of vessels of war and the proposed holiday in capital ships. All these details had to be translated into French, Italian and Japanese during the sittings of the various committees.

Irish Daffodils.

Ireland achieved magnificent successes to-day at the daffodil show held by the Royal Horticultural Society; for, while the Irish exhibitors were few, they managed to acquire a majority of the prizes. The Donard Nursery Company, of Newcastle, was given a silver Banksian medal for its very fine group display, together with an award of merit for a new seedling pure yellow named Slieve Buragh. This firm also secured a second prize for a basket of daffodils and a second prize for a bowl of the same blossoms. In addition, it was awarded eight first and second prizes in different classes. Mr. J. Lionel Richardson, of Waterford, however, was pre-eminent when it came to taking prizes in the various classes; for he secured no fewer than twelve first prizes and fourteen second and third prizes. In addition, Mr. Richardson had a very beautiful group display of perfect blooms—well worthy of the gold medal awarded it. He secured an even greater honour, however; for he was given the medal for the best flower in the show—a beautiful seeding of his own raising named "Gregalach."

Comfort to Invalids.

Two members apiece of the three parties in the House of Commons have supported a bill presented by Mr. Philip Oliver proposing to give powers to the Postmaster-General to grant to a permanently bedridden person a licence to keep a wireless outfit for the purpose of receiving messages, subject to conditions, but without payment of fee. A permanently bedridden person is defined as any person—not being resident in a public or charitable institution or in a school—who satisfies the Postmaster-General that he or she is confined permanently to bed through sickness or infirmity. The sponsors of the bill, in addition to Mr. Oliver, include Miss Lloyd George, the Marquis of Hartington, Sir Boyd Merriman, Mr. Simmons and Mr. Cecil Wilson.

SERIOUS RIOTING IN CALCUTTA.

SERIOUS rioting occurred in Calcutta yesterday, when students and others observing the hartal, or mourning strike, as a protest against the imprisonment of Nationalist leaders, endeavoured to stop the tramways and other traffic. Additional armed police were called out, and armoured cars patrolled the streets.

Two tramcars were set on fire, and the fire brigade was stoned, one English officer being very seriously injured. Seven British officials in all were injured, and there were numerous admissions to hospital as the result of the clashes between the police and the rioters. In the afternoon the situation was described as being "under control."

Meantime, Mr. Gandhi has been outlining a more pugnacious form of "civil disobedience," which he styles "aggressive non-violence." He declares that women ought not to take part with the men in the defence of the salt pans.

Fines, instead of sentence of imprisonment, were imposed on two Nationalist leaders in Madras, and, as they declined to pay, their motor cars were seized by the police as they left the courthouse.

MOB STONE FIRE BRIGADE.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
CALCUTTA, Tuesday.

A hartal is usually a passive affair, consisting of a voluntary suspension of trade and other activities for a fixed period as a sign of mourning, but serious developments occurred here to-day in connection with the hartal organised as a protest against the imprisonment of the Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, President of the National Congress, and of Mr. Sen Gupta, the Mayor of Calcutta.

Not content with ceasing work themselves, crowds of students and carters endeavoured to prevent anybody else from working. They placed obstacles on the rails to stop the tramway service, and two tramcars were burned in the southern section of the city. In the northern area students held up tramcars and cut off their trolley ropes.

ARMED POLICE ON DUTY.

The authorities quickly took steps to deal with the situation, which, in a brief period, became very menacing. Extra police, fully armed, were posted in all the important centres, and armoured cars patrolled the streets.

Attempts were made to interfere with traffic in various parts of the city, and there were numerous clashes between the police and the crowds before the latter were dispersed. The streets were littered with brickbats, road "metal," sheet iron and broken clubs.

When the Fire Brigade arrived to endeavour to save the burning tramcars they were attacked by the mob, and Mr. Durrant, an English Fire Brigade officer, sustained a fracture of the skull. He is at present in hospital, and there is very faint hope of his recovery. Several other members of the Brigade were injured.

Thirteen Sikhs, two of whom were wounded, were afterwards arrested. This is stated to be the first time in Calcutta's history that the Fire Brigade has been attacked.

ENGLISH GIRL INJURED.

In all, seven British officials were injured during the rioting, and many persons were admitted to hospital. Miss Dench, a London girl, daughter of the Station Superintendent at Sealdeh, is in hospital, badly cut and bruised by stones and other missiles.

It appears that, against the advice of the police, she tried to dash through the riot area on her motor cycle, but her way was blocked by a mob, and she had to run for her life, amid a hail of road metal. Her motor cycle was seized and burned by the rioters.

SHOTS FIRED AT MOB.

There has been one case of firing by the police. A European sergeant opened fire to save an injured fellow-sergeant, who was being attacked by Sikhs in South Calcutta. Two of the mob were wounded.

Early in the afternoon the authorities got the situation under control.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
CALCUTTA, Tuesday, 10.30 p.m.

Sixteen students arrested yesterday evening were brought before a special magistrate at Alipore to-day on charges of rioting, unlawful assembly and violating police orders. One pleaded "guilty," and prayed for mercy. Two pleaded "not guilty." The rest refused to make any statement at all. They were remanded till the 22nd inst.

The special tribunal appointed to try the persons charged in connection with the Alipore bomb case has adjourned for lack of prison vans to bring the accused persons to court and also of sergeants for the escort.

At a meeting of Indian medical practitioners in Bengal to-night it was decided that no attempts should be made to request the General Medical Council of Great Britain to reconsider its decision not to recognise Indian degrees, but it was decided, in order to record a protest against the "undeserved slur" on the Indian medical graduates, and in order to develop the resources of India, that all Indian practitioners should be recommended to utilise Indian medical drugs and appliances as far as possible, or, where overseas goods are essential, should import them from countries other than Great Britain.

FINES INSTEAD OF IMPRISONMENT.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
MADRAS, Tuesday.

Mr. Prakasam, the former member of the Legislative Assembly, who has been prominent during the past few days in organising violation of the Salt Laws here, and Mr. Nageswara Rao, editor of the paper Andhra Patrika, another leader of civil disobedience in Madras City, were both convicted this afternoon under the Salt Act, and fined five hundred rupees (£37 10s.) each.

Both pleaded guilty, and Mr. Prakasam added that he broke the law deliberately.

The Magistrate asked: "Do you wish to express regret?" to which the accused men replied: "None at all. Not on this side of life."

SWIFT JUSTICE.

Both men refused to pay their fines, whereupon they were warned that their property would be attached. The threat was carried out sooner than they expected, for as they were leaving the courthouse the police seized their motor cars on a distraint warrant issued by the magistrate. The machines will be sold at auction by the authorities to raise the money for the fines.

This is the first salt law case in which a fine, without the alternative of imprisonment, has been imposed.

Mr. Nageswara Rao addressed a meeting on leaving the court. He declared that, although his motor car had been attached, he would continue to disobey the salt law, even if all his property were taken away by the Government.

IF GANDHI IS ARRESTED.

Mr. Prakasam exhorted the people to be prepared to court imprisonment in thousands if Mr. Gandhi were arrested.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
KARACHI, Tuesday.

THE MAHATMA'S NEW POLICY.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
NAVSARI, Tuesday.

Addressing himself to the men, Mr. Gandhi outlined a more aggressive form of disobedience against the Salt Law, which, for want of a better name, he called "aggressive non-violence."

"Hitherto," said the Mahatma, "I asked you to resist the snatching of salt by the police from your closed fists, and to suffer mutely and weakly whatever injuries the police might inflict on you. If you have got the strength for suffering and faith in your mission, I want to go many steps further."

Pointing to the salt pans prepared by the volunteers, Mr. Gandhi said: "I like henceforth to regard you as trustees or guardians, not merely of the precious national wealth locked up in your fists, but of the whole treasure now preparing in the salt pans. Defend that treasure with your life, if that be the price you have to pay for it. When the police come to raid these pans, surround them and do not let the police touch them until they have overpowered you by sheer brute force. From your sufferings will rise into being, not only purnaswaraj [complete independence], but a non-violent army for its defence."

WHERE WOMEN ARE NOT WANTED.

The Mahatma then declared that women ought not to take part alongside the men in the defence of the salt pans. "I still give the Government credit that they will not make war upon our women," he added. "It would be wrong on our part to provoke them to do so. This is a man's fight, and, so long as the Government confine their attention to the men, there will be time enough for the women to court assaults when the Government have crossed the limit. Let it not be said of us that the men sought to shelter behind the women, well knowing that they would be safe if they took the women with them in what, for want of a better name, I will call 'aggressive non-violence.'"

"Women have, in the programme I have placed before them, enough work and to spare," concluded Mr. Gandhi, "and all the adventure and risk they are capable of undertaking."

AN INVITATION TO BOMBAY.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
BOMBAY, Tuesday.

"I am hourly needed in Gujerat to consolidate my work," Mr. Gandhi has replied to a telegram which he has received from the President of the Bombay Provincial Congress Committee inviting him to Bombay. He adds, however: "But I will come when I am absolutely needed."

SOVIET CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
MOSCOW, Tuesday.

The official Tass Agency states that the ceremonial opening of the British section of the All-Union Western Chamber of Commerce took place to-day.

The ceremony was attended by Litvinoff, Acting Commissioner for Foreign Affairs; by Khinchuk, Chairman of the Council of the Chamber of Commerce, and by Sir Esmond Ovey, the British Ambassador.

MOTOR TRADE PLANS.

AMALGAMATION ANTICIPATED.

British motor manufacturers are about to make a "spring offensive" on the markets of the world, now that Mr. Snowden has set their fears at rest regarding the McKenna duties.

An official of the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders said: "British manufacturers hope to make this a 'record' year, and the fact that the McKenna duties have been retained will enable manufacturers to concentrate on capturing the overseas markets. There is every indication that they will be successful.

"The branch offices opened in Australia, New Zealand and South Africa by the British section of the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders are proving of very great value in keeping the home factories informed of market conditions and supplying them with information, as well as carrying on propaganda for British products.

"Already the industry employs considerably more than a quarter of a million people, and I think there is every likelihood of that figure being greatly increased when the various development schemes and factory extensions are in full swing. It is not unlikely that there may be some important and interesting amalgamations in the motor world very shortly."

The latest figures show that British motor exports exceed imports by £1,007,390 for the first three months of the year, exports of vehicles and accessories being valued at £2,584,614, and imports at £1,577,224.

Several manufacturers, it is understood, propose to produce special overseas models of the type which appeals to the Dominions' motorists. They will be built only for export.

COMMERCIAL VEHICLES.

The commercial vehicle industry is already "forging ahead" in the words of a member of a large manufacturing firm. "One manufacturer has sold 1,150 new type 'buses and coaches since the Commercial Vehicle Show in November last year," he said.

"The general sales manager of another firm has just left on an extensive tour of South America to investigate new methods of distribution, and generally to study the market conditions and requirements.

"An example of the way in which British manufacturers are studying their overseas customers' needs is the provision of left-hand drive for countries where the rule of the road is 'keep to the right.'

THE WORLD'S WAGES.

AMERICAN WORKERS PAID BEST.

FREE STATE SEVENTH ON LIST.

Professor J. H. Richardson, recently appointed to the Chair of Industrial Relations at Leeds University, gave details of the relative value of wages paid to workers in different countries in a paper read at a meeting of the Royal Statistical Society in London last night. Comparisons of wages in different countries are often made by converting money wages from foreign countries into sterling by the rates of exchange, but this may give misleading results owing to differences in the cost of living, he said.

Canada	165
Australia	148
Sweden	108
Denmark	107
Great Britain	100
Netherlands	87
Switzerland	77

He pointed out that in the United States and Canada the figures would be several points lower if allowance were made for high rents, and in the United States a figure of 160 would be more representative for the general level of wages, because workers in the particular occupations covered were strongly organised, and their wages were considerably higher than those paid to workers in many other occupations in America.

A NEW CUNARDER.

PLANS FOR A GIANT VESSEL.

"No contracts have been placed for a new Cunard liner, but plans are in hand for building another vessel for trans-Atlantic service." The Liverpool manager of the Cunard Line made this official statement yesterday with regard to a report that orders had been placed for a new Cunarder, which it was thought would regain for the line the blue riband of the Atlantic, held so long by the Mauretania.

Full details of the new liner are not available, but she will not be an oil-driven vessel, though it is expected her engines will develop astonishing horse-power—200,000. "It is impossible to say the speed of the vessel at present," added the official. "With regard to regaining the blue riband, this is largely a question of economics. There is an economic speed to be attained, and if someone else has reached that before us, it is impossible for us to go beyond that limit. Whether the limit has been reached is not yet known."

It is understood that the tonnage of the vessel is unlikely to be as great as 70,000 tons, but the vessel will embrace all the new inventions and improvements.

A THOUSAND FEET LONG.

The plans of the new Cunarder show, according to Syren and Shipping, a three-funnelled cruiser-stern vessel a thousand feet long on the waterline, 115 feet beam, with designed speed on measured mile of 32 knots. The machinery is to consist of quadruple screw-geared turbines. She will carry first, second and tourist class passengers and emigrants, and practically all first class state-rooms will have bathrooms attached. A novel feature is a double-tiered smokeroom with balcony.

THE DUCHESS OF YORK.

KINGSTOWN'S DEMAND.

DEPUTIES ASKED TO SUPPORT BILL.

A resolution calling upon the parliamentary representatives of the County of Dublin to support the bill now before the Oireachtas for the creation of a coastal borough was adopted unanimously last night at the adjourned monthly meeting of the Kingstown Urban Council.

The Chairman (Mr. William Morrissey) said that since their last meeting a matter of very great importance had arisen concerning the township. The Minister for Local Government had withdrawn from the Greater Dublin Bill the clause dealing with the setting up of the coastal borough of Dun Laoghaire. A Parliamentary Committee, consisting for the most part of opponents to the bill, had been convened to consider the whole matter. They had now reached a stage when they must request the county deputies to support the bill, and he moved a resolution to that effect.

SIX YEARS AGO.

Mr. J. M. Devitt, seconding, said that for many years the people responsible for the local government of Dun Laoghaire and Blackrock realised the great advantage that would follow from the amalgamation of these districts and Dalkey into one area for administration. In 1924 they prepared and lodged with the Senate a bill to unite these districts into one borough. Informed by the Minister for Local Government that a Commission was being set up to inquire into the Greater Dublin project, the promoters did not proceed further with the bill.

This matter had been before the inhabitants for six years, and, irrespective of political difficulties or class interests, the vast majority of the electors favoured the change. When the Minister for Local Government introduced his bill the Councils of Dun Laoghaire, Blackrock, Dalkey and Killiney informed him that his proposals were approved of by them as representing the electors of their districts, and they ratified the proposals relating to the coastal borough almost with unanimity.

The Dail contended that its functions were governed by the will of the people. It was, therefore, not unreasonable to request the deputies representing the County of Dublin to withdraw their opposition to the coastal borough and to support the Minister's proposal.

CASE OF LONDON.

It had been stated that to establish a borough so close to Dublin would detract from the dignity and importance of the city. This assertion could not be defended, inasmuch as the growth and development of a successful health and pleasure resort within reach of the city would have the effect of adding considerably to Dublin's attractions without in any way interfering with its importance. London consisted of a large number of boroughs, which functioned side by side without any difficulty.

It would seem to be more appropriate for the Dail to encourage the growth of urban districts and their development into boroughs rather than to retard their progress. Suggestions had been made that these areas should be included in the city boundaries. Should this happen it would be a calamity for the urban districts, and would retard and delay their development.

Clontarf was added to the City of Dublin thirty years ago, and was left neglected until quite recently. The various problems peculiar to city administration would absorb the time of the City Council and its officers, and the affairs of the coastal townships would suffer.

If representation were to be made in proportion to population these urban districts probably would have on the City Council one or two members, who never could succeed in obtaining for their districts the special attention which they required.

DEVELOPMENT OF BUSINESS.

It had been stated that the coastal townships owed their existence to Dublin. The inhabitants said that the growth of these districts was due to their position by the seaside, to their healthy surroundings, and to the development of the local business. There was no greater community of interests between Dublin and Dun Laoghaire than there was between Dublin and Bray or Greystones, or between any city and any seaside resort.

TOWNSHIP'S SERVICES.

Mr. M. F. O'Brien said that, lest the comparative silence of the Council might be construed as a sneaking support of the opposition to the creation of the Dun Laoghaire Borough, he thought it only right to point out that the township had tackled the housing question many years ago, before other townships awoke to their responsibilities. The rents of these houses were lower than in neighbouring districts, and the Council never had stopped building houses.

The township had an excellent supply of water from the Vartry, and had its own electric lighting system until it was taken over by the Electricity Supply Board. Wash-houses, public baths, hospitals and public libraries were provided; social services were in existence, and the sinking fund on the main drainage scheme was now paid off.

He mentioned these matters because some of the City and County members of the Dail did not seem to be conversant with them. Deputy Good, who opposed the merging of Rathmines and Pembroke with Dublin, now sought to have Dun Laoghaire merged into the City Borough.

"FIGHT TO THE LAST."

Mr. Mallins said that Dun Laoghaire had the lowest rates of any of the townships around, and this opposition to the coastal borough should be fought to the very last.

Mr. O'Donnell said that this opposition was merely a pawn in the political game. If their views on the borough were not considered they should address the people of the district by holding a series of public meetings.

Dr. Merrin and Mr. Bartley also supported the resolution.

Mr. Dooge said that they could not expect the Government, in face of the opposition of the Independent Party, led by Mr. Good and Professor Thrift, to go forward with the bill as it was.

The resolution, as stated, was adopted unanimously.

ANGLO-EGYPTIAN TREATY.

DISCUSSIONS AT FOREIGN OFFICE.

Negotiations in connection with the Anglo-Egyptian Treaty were resumed at the British Foreign Office last night, when the British and Egyptian delegations again met in conference.

Nahas Pasha, the Egyptian Prime Minister, and his colleagues were met by Mr. Arthur Henderson, the Foreign Secretary; Lord Passfield, Dominions Secretary; Mr. Tom Shaw, Minister for War; Lord Thomson, Air Minister; Sir Percy Loraine, British High Commissioner for Egypt, and officials of the Foreign Office.

Monday's session lasted until 5 o'clock yesterday morning.

RATIONALISING INDUSTRIES.

LORD PRIVY SEAL'S ANNOUNCEMENT.

A question put by Commander Kenworthy, in the House of Commons yesterday, enabled the Lord Privy Seal (Mr. J. H. Thomas) to supplement the announcement made in his recent speech at Manchester, to the effect that "The Ctiy" had undertaken to provide money for the reorganisation and rationalisation of industry.

The Lord Privy Seal said that he was glad to be able to announce that a company had that day been registered at Somerset House, under the name of the Bankers' Industrial Development Company, with a nominal capital of £6,000,000, divided into 45 "A" shares and 15 "B" shares of £100,000 each.

The company had the support of a very considerable proportion of the most influential banking and financial institutions of the country, by whom the "A" shares had been subscribed. The "B" shares of the company had been subscribed by the Securities Management Trust, Ltd.

THE DIRECTORATE.

The Right Hon. Montague Norman, Chairman;

Baron Bruno Schroder, with Major Albert Pam as alternate.

Mr. A. H. Wagg, with Mr. Nigel Campbell as alternate.

Mr. E. R. Peacock.

Mr. C. Bruce Gardner, Managing Director for the Securities Management Trust, Ltd.

In addition to the Board of Directors, the Lord Privy Seal continued, the company will have the services of an Advisory Council, on which a number of influential persons engaged in financial business will be invited to serve. The Advisory Council will have no executive duties to perform, but their services, either collectively or individually, will be available to the Board of Directors in a consultative capacity.

The object of the company is to receive and consider the schemes submitted by the basic industries of this country for the purpose of their rationalisation, either by industry or by regions. In the case of schemes which may be approved, arrangements will be made for the provision, in one way or another, and through existing agencies, of such money as may seem to be essential.

[Neither the directors of the company nor the members of the advisory council will receive any remuneration for their services. The company's business address is 5 Lothbury, E.C. 2.]

Replying to an inquiry by Commander Kenworthy as to what steps would be taken to safeguard the position of displaced workpeople, Mr. Thomas referred to an answer given by the Prime Minister on 5th February. In this answer Mr. Macdonald said that it would not be practicable to identify, among the unemployed, those whose unemployment was attributable to disarmament and rationalisation.

THE GOVERNMENT'S POSITION.

When the Lord Privy Seal talks about the money being supplied through existing agencies, asked Commander Kenworthy, does that mean that when this company approves the schemes of rationalisation, we will be consulted with a view to guaranteeing loans by the State?

Mr. Thomas—In so far as State money is concerned, it is not intended to be, and I hope will not be, involved. (Opposition cheers.)

In that case, where does the Government come in with regard to this company? asked Commander Kenworthy, amid a cheer from the Left Wing Labour members.

There were Opposition cheers when Mr. Thomas replied—So far as the money is concerned, the Government does not come in. I announced, in a speech at Manchester, he went on, in reply to much criticism about the action of the bankers. that money could, and would, be found for reorganisation and rationalisation. I was asked in this House what I meant by "the City," and many other questions. I have given the answer which is supplementary to my Manchester speech.

Mr. Hammersley (Conservative, Stockport)—Are we to take it that what is intended is that the reorganisation of the basic industries is only to take place with the approval of this Council?

Mr. Thomas—On the contrary, I hope—in fact, I know—that there are a number of schemes being considered to-day of reorganisation. When I am consulted I give help towards them. I announce this as another stage in that reorganisation on the financial side that I announced previously.

THE SECURITIES TRUST.

The Securities Management Trust, which has subscribed for the "B" shares of the new company, was founded last year to deal with credits for industry, and to assist manufacturers and distributors to develop the sale of their products. Its formation was generally recognised as a move by "The City" to help Mr. Thomas in his schemes for improving trade and reducing unemployment. Last month it was announced that Mr. Charles Bruce Gardner had accepted an exclusive appointment as managing director.

The Colonial Advisory Committee, which was appointed last July to consider schemes likely to aid and develop agriculture and industry in the Colonies, has issued its first report. During seven months there were sixty applications from twenty-five separate Colonial Administrations for assistance from the Colonial Development Funds. In a majority of cases the Committee were able to make a favourable recommendation. The cost of the projects approved to the end of February was £6,629,494, spread over a period of five years. The expenditure to be incurred in Great Britain in connection with the projects is £2,238,117. The total assistance to be provided from the fund was £1,369,632.

EXPORT TRADE.

Mr. R. A. Taylor (Labour, Lincoln) asked whether the Government would provide guarantees for the export trade, where expenditure abroad would promote employment at home.

Mr. J. H. Thomas said that the assistance considered proper by the Government was already available under the Exports Credits (Guarantees) Scheme, a bill to extend the duration of which was now before the House.

FIFTEEN LIVES LOST IN CINEMA FIRE.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
ROME, Tuesday.

A fire broke out during a performance at a cinema in Licata, Sicily, last night. The theatre was full of adults and children, and fifteen lives were lost in a panic that followed. A number of persons were injured.

A strip of film bursting into flame in the operator's box was the cause of the fatal panic. The fire did not spread beyond the operator's box, but the flames terrified the young people packing the balcony of the threatre.

All the victims of the panic, whose ages range between 12 and 18 years, were either suffocated or crushed to death.

WHAT THE TAXPAYER RESENTS.

In a leading article The Times to-day observes:—During the interval which has elapsed since the Budget speech, opinion in the country has had time to crystallise a little. The first impressions of Monday afternoon have, perhaps, been revised here and there in detail, but in the main the depressing sensations have persisted. Whatever relief may have been felt at the rigidly orthodox protection accorded to the Sinking Fund has been entirely obliterated by the dismal prospect of increased taxation devoted to no constructive purpose. What the taxpayer most resents is that twelve years after the conclusion of the War, at a time when the other great nations are steadily reducing their taxation, the contributions extracted from his pocket have actually been increased, with nothing to show for it all but an extension of the dole. It may be admitted at once, in fairness to Mr. Snowden, that on the technical side his second Budget possesses a number of the duller, but none the less essential, virtues, the absence of which most critics of our public finances have in recent years had reason to regret.

To make the taxpayer pay his bills is eminently right and proper. It may even, in certain circumstanecs, be magnificent; but it is not in itself economy, and economy of the most rigid kind is the one thing which the country has for years most urgently needed. Meanwhile, the highest hope that Mr. Snowden holds out to the over-burdened citizen is that with luck it may not be necessary next year to add to the load. In the debate on the Budget resolutions yesterday Mr. Churchill rightly treated this aspiration of his successor, which, no doubt, was sincere, with a certain degree of healthy scepticism, fully justified by the subsequent remarks of Mr. Maxton. But the satisfaction that Mr. Snowden may cull from the displeasure of Mr. Maxton and some other of the more extreme members of his party must be very limited; for the truth is that his Budget seems to have pleased no one.

BEARERS OF THE BURDEN.

As a matter of national politics the Budget is even more objectionable, adds The Times. By exempting smaller incomes from any increase in taxation, and throwing the whole burden of inflated expenditure upon the shoulders of a steadily narrowing class, Mr. Snowden has aggravated one of the most disquieting tendencies of post-war democracy, namely—the growing divorce of representation from taxation. During the past ten years the relief of larger and larger sections of the electorate from any share in the fiscal consequences of their voting by the progressive remission of direct taxation has been the principal cause of the alarming growth in public expenditure.

THE DISAPPOINTED PROPHET.

MR. GANDHI STILL A FREE MAN.

The arrest and conviction of Mr. Sen Gupta, the Swarajist Mayor of Calcutta, for publicly reading aloud seditious literature, have been followed by a violent outbreak of rioting, in which the police and the fire brigade were attacked and roughly handled, tramcars were stoned and burnt, and the streets were only cleared with difficulty by the police, remarks The Times editorially. On the other side of India the Hindu traders of Bombay have closed their shops and offices in protest against the conviction of Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, the President of the National Congress, and Mr. Gandhi's chief lieutenant, on a charge, which he admitted, of breaking the Salt Laws. A number of other manufacturers and vendors of illicit salt have been sentenced to imprisonment, but Mr. Gandhi remains at large—to his manifest annoyance. The decision of the Indian Government to leave him unarrested as long as possible has naturally led to criticism. Legalists, shocked by his defiance of the law, and naturally and properly alarmed by the support given to the Mahatma by the ignorant and the young, deplore the failure of the authorities to arrest the prophet of civil disobedience; the police and the magistrates, burdened by new and heavy responsibilities, would probably agree with them. But, as a well-informed correspondent pointed out in an article on Mr. Gandhi's campaign, which appeared in our columns on Monday, the Government of India have excellent political reasons for holding their hand as long as possible.

Mr. Gandhi's sole object is to wreck the coming conference between the British Government, the Indian States and the political leaders of British India. He knows that the Viceroy's announcement of the conference has rallied a body of moderate Indian opinion to its support. He knows also that he enjoys a peculiar prestige in Hindu India, even among his political opponents. Among the politically minded he is the living symbol of a natural desire for self-determination, to the devout of all classes—and India remains a country of devotees—he is a prophet honoured even in his own country. He believed when he started on his slow march to the sea at Dandi that he would be arrested, and that his arrest would arouse a storm which would sweep the moderates into the extremist camp.

MUCH DISAPPOINTED.

So far Mr. Gandhi has been largely disappointed. He has not been arrested, nor, though some moderate leaders have shown manifest signs of nervousness, has there been any such general movement in favour of civil disobedience as attended his earlier campaigns. He is isolated. Pandit Motilal Nehru, the only political leader of note, who supported his declaration of independence for India at Lahore, is known to disapprove of the launching of the civil disobedience movement, for which Mr. Gandhi himself declared India was unready less than four months ago. He has always sought to win sympathy for his political and social teachings in this and in other countries, notably in America, and, unlike earlier prophets, he has courted advertisement fully as eagerly as he has welcomed adversity.

For all his stage management, for all his mastery of the appeal to sentiment, there is no indication that his performances on the beach of Dandi have aroused more than an amused curiosity or strengthened the cause of Indian nationalism abroad.

PROTECTING BRITISH CONSUMERS.

COUNCIL TO REVIEW PRICES.

Mr. Graham, President of the Board of Trade, in the House of Commons yesterday, told Sir Kingsley Wood that he hoped to introduce a bill dealing with the proposed Consumers' Council soon after Easter. The new Council would have power to review prices at all stages from the raw material to the retail price.

BROADCAST ON THE BRITISH BUDGET.

"GOOD EVENING, FELLOW-TAXPAYERS."

—MR. SNOWDEN.

INCOME TAX, SUPER-TAX AND LAND VALUES.

"Good evening, fellow-taxpayers," said Mr. Philip Snowden, when he began his address to British wireless listeners last night from 11 Downing street, London.

"I dare say," he added, "you have seen something in the newspapers to-day about the Budget. You are probably all familiar by now with its main proposals.

"First of all, I want to explain how the Budget of the year is built up. I shall try to show what the problem is that faces the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he prepares his Budget. The total cost of expenditure for which I had to provide this year comes to £782,000,000. You will have noticed that the cost of the war debt is over half the total of the national expenditure.

"Now I will turn to the revenue side. Taking all sources of revenue together, I get a figure for our probable income of the coming year—that is apart from any changes I propose to make. That figure this year amounts to £740,000,000. That is the expected revenue. Thus, at this stage we have expenditure £782,000,000, revenue £740,000,000, leaving a gap to be filled of £42,000,000.

HIS PROBLEM.

"How to fill this gap was the problem I had to solve. This year there are two special items we must note. On last year's Budget there was a deficit of fourteen and a half millions—that is to say, revenue failed to meet expenditure last year by that sum. I had to do something to make good that deficit of fourteen and a half millions. It was absolutely futile to pay off debt, a thing we were bound to do, by borrowing money for the purpose. Therefore, I have to find money to make up this deficit.

"But a Budget is more than a matter of figures. It has a very big influence for good or ill in the country's affairs, and it is with that aspect that I now propose to deal. A year ago, just before the election, I broadcast a talk on Labour's financial and taxation policy. I said that we should pursue a sane policy of debt reduction. I then said: 'Labour's taxation policy is to raise revenue mainly by income tax and sur-tax, by death duties and by the tax of land values.' These are the two guiding principles which I have kept constantly in mind in framing this year's Budget.

TO PAY HIS WAY.

"I am determined to pay my way by sound financial methods. The policy of postponing the evil day does not appeal to me. When more expenditure has to be faced taxation should be raised immediately.

"It is well known that new taxation does not give its full yield the year it is imposed. I have arranged the new proposals that they shall give not only sufficient revenue to meet this year's expenditure, but shall give enough to meet the following years.

"I cannot predict the future, and I cannot make any binding promises. The new taxation which I have had to impose will be sufficient to meet next year's expenditure without any further increase in taxation.

NEW TAXES UNAVOIDABLE.

"The new taxation was unavoidable, and I have put the burden only upon those who are best able to bear it. I have placed no new burden upon industry. I have put it only on the rich, those people who have more than the mere necessaries of life. I only asked to contribute more those people who have more than reasonable luxuries.

"A misconception must be cleared away lest you think that, as the standard rate of tax has risen from 4s. to 4s. 6d., therefore your contribution to that tax has risen in the same proportion. As a matter of fact, instead of giving a relief on the first £225 of taxable income, I am giving it on the first £250, and instead of fixing the relief—relief, mark you—at 2s. 3d. in the £, I am fixing it at 2s. 6d.

"This may be a little difficult to follow, because the income tax is a complicated affair; but the fact is that very large numbers of taxpayers will pay no more tax than they do at present, while some will pay actually less.

"Rather more than two million people pay income tax. About three-quarters of them, under my proposal, will pay no more than they did before.

THE SUPER-TAX.

"About the super-tax and the estate duty I need say less. These are duties for broad backs. We must remember we have still to pay for the war, and, as war-time made fortunes are now coming under review for estate duties, I am sure there can be no reasonable complaint if the State should exact an increased contribution from those fortunes.

"These have been my guiding principles, and I feel confident that you will agree that they have been faithfully carried out in the Budget.

LAND VALUES.

"If our ancestors had had the foresight and the wisdom to impose a duty on land values a hundred years ago what vast wealth that has fallen haphazard into the hands of private citizens would have been available for beneficent State purposes. The justice of the claim of the community to share in land values has long been to me a cherished conviction. That conviction is shared by two parties of the land. I am not, indeed, proposing to levy a duty on land values in this Budget. I am not even prejudging what the form of impost should be. Both the State and local authorities have claims to be weighed. That is a question which must come afterwards. First of all, we need a valuation. It is only when the site value of land has been ascertained—a lengthy process—that money can be raised. But we shall introduce a valuation bill for the ascertainment of the site value of land, and as soon as legislation can be passed we shall press on actively with the task of valuation, so that this long overdue reform may be inaugurated with the least possible delay.

"In conclusion, I will say a few words from the broader point of view of its bearing on our national life and prosperity.

"I have held all my life that the happiness of the people can be vastly improved by great schemes of social reform and national reconstruction. I believe that the distribution of the national wealth calls for reform, and I believe also that these vital improvements are only possible out of revived and prosperous industry, from which our national revenue is derived. In the present circumstances the first concern must be to restore and maintain a spirit of confidence and enterprise among those responsible for the conduct of our trade and industry. Recent days have been dark, not only in this country, but throughout the whole world, but I can see on the horizon many hopeful signs. I have earnestly striven to place the new burden, which this year's Budget inevitably involved, so that it may not impede a revival of industrial activity and the re-capture of our place in the markets of the world. I should be inclined to describe this year's Budget as an inevitable Budget. I had to raise additional revenue to meet financial demands which I had inherited.

"It will take at least another Budget to put the finances of the country into a thoroughly sound condition. There are a great many things I would like to do, but they must wait for an improved time, improved trade and expanding revenue.

"I hope before this Parliament ends to redeem the Labour Party's pledge to remove all food taxes and protective duties and to amend the income tax charges in the direction of relieving the earned incomes a little more. In the situation in which I find myself this year I have done the best I could, and I am sure I have done it in a way which, while meeting the inevitable needs of the State, will inflict no real hardship upon those who are called upon to pay."

AN AUSTRALIAN VIEW.

MORE MONEY FOR THE "DOLE."

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

"Mr. Snowden's Budget reveals him at the height of his notorious ruthlessness," writes the Melbourne Argus. "There is not the slightest attempt to make an equitable distribution of the responsibility for helping the nation through its difficulties. Class taxation is the ringing note. The Minister for Labour has been granted a greatly increased share of expenditure, obviously to add to the recipients of the dole. This very disappointing feature makes it very doubtful whether the naval savings will not be dissipated in the same wasteful manner."

END OF THE FRENCH BUDGET CRISIS.

COMPROMISE BETWEEN THE TWO HOUSES.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
PARIS, Tuesday.

The Chamber received the Budget back from the Senate, and discussed it this morning. Regarding the pensions difficulty M. Taurines has proposed a compromise amendment, while the Government accepts, and which, if adopted by the Chamber, will be sent before the Senate.

A Radical-Socialist counter-amendment to M. Taurines's proposal, and a further onslaught of Socialist origin, were both defeated, the Government having made the matter one of confidence in the Government.

The amendment drafted by M. Taurines was finally carried, and the Budget, as a whole, was voted in its new form by 465 votes to 120. It then returned from the Chamber to the Senate.

The Senate, by 275 votes to 17, has passed the Budget in its new form, including the compromise proposal put forward by M. Taurines with regard to the adjustment of pre-war pensions.

The Senate also approved the increase in tariffs on imported motor cars and spare parts already voted this evening by the Chamber.

TAXATION OF FOREIGN CARS.

The Chamber has passed, by 475 votes to 2, the bill approved by the Tariff Committee of the Chamber some days ago altering the system of taxation on foreign cars and spare parts.

The bill provides that, instead of the 45 per cent. ad valorem tax which, on the actual sale price, is said to amount to no more than 15 per cent., a system of classified duties shall be introduced. Specified duties are to be levied on separate parts, and in the case of chassis and complete cars a specific rate per kilogramme will be imposed, which will itself vary in accordance with the class and type of car.

The Chamber had previously rejected, by 430 votes to 153, a Socialist amendment, which made the increase in tariffs subject to the application of a scheme for the rationalisation of the French motor car industry.

A SHORT WAY WITH RUM-RUNNERS.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S BILL.

Mr. Isaac Foot (Liberal, Bodmin) yesterday obtained leave of the House of Commons to bring in a bill to enable the Board of Trade to suspend or cancel the certificate of any master, mate or engineer who might engage in illicit importation of intoxicating liquor into the territory of the United States of America. The bill, he said, was designed to prevent the misuse of the British flag by lawless men, and to help to establish good relations between both countries.

Mr. Macquisten contended that there was no need for the bill. The people who were breaking the law were American citizens.

On a division leave was granted by 215 votes to 142, and the bill was read a first time.

Reuter's Washington Correspondent states that the introduction of the bill has given rise to no comment on the part of Treasury department officials, who are responsible for the enforcement of prohibition, apart from the statement that they had no previous information on the subject. It was added that the bill had not been presented at the request of the United States Government. It was felt, however, that the bill's provisions would be regarded as drastic.

RARE BOOKS SALE.

There was an opening bid of £500 for a first edition of Fanny Burney's "Evelina" at Sotheby's yesterday. The next bid was £1,000. An example of the first edition published in 1778 for nine shillings brought £1,160 at the Kern sale in New York in 1908. At Sotheby's no word was spoken until £4,000 was called, Dr. Rosenbach, of Philadelphia, securing the volume.

Mr. Gabriel Wells, of New York, bought for £540 the first copy of "The Vicar of Wakefield," the "record" price of £1,470 remaining unbeaten. Dr. Rosenbach's competitor for the copy of "Evelina" was Mr. Gabriel Wells. Jane Austen figured in the sale yesterday. A first edition, "Sense and Sensibility," 1811, brought £205, the auction "record" being £720.

FIELD WORK BACKWARD.

CONDITION OF CROPS IN THE NORTH.

The Northern Ireland Ministry of Agriculture's report on agricultural conditions during March states that very changeable weather was experienced during the month. The first few days of March were dry and comparatively mild for the time of the year, but a rapid change brought colder and more unsettled conditions. Strong east winds, with some rain and heavy falls of snow, were experienced during the second and third weeks. Thereafter followed a very wet and stormy period, which lasted until the close of the month. Ground frosts were frequent, and the temperature was generally on the low side, although there were some warm days at the beginning and end of the month. This inclement weather delayed field work, which is still backward for the season of the year. Ploughing has not yet been quite completed, and the sowing of spring crops has only been carried out in early districts. Winter wheat germinated well, but the crop is making very slow progress.

The plentiful supplies of home-grown foodstuffs have proved sufficient to meet the extra demand consequent on the very backward condition of pasture lands. Ample supplies of purchased foodstuffs were available at somewhat cheaper rates, which, however, showed a tendency to rise at the end of the month. Speaking generally, livestock are in normal health, despite the severe weather.

THE CROPS.

Supplies of oats at markets were a shade larger than a month ago, and prices were firmer, and averaged 6s. 4d. per cwt., as against 6s. 1d. per cwt. in February.

Small supplies of good quality flax were marketed during March, and average prices declined from 8s. 5½d. per stone in February to 7s. 11½d. per stone in March. Only small supplies remain on the farms.

The work of removing potatoes from the pits has not yet been completed. The tubers have kept well, and very little sprouting occurred. Supplies at markets were virtually equal to those of a month ago, and prices had a slightly easier tendency. The following are the average prices of the principal varieties sold at markets in Northern Ireland during the past two months:—

Arran Victory	1 11	1 10
Kerr's Pink	2 2	2 1
Up-to-Date	1 0	0 8

The market for seed potatoes opened without much activity, and prices were also on the low side for this trade.

Mangels have kept well, and are now being fed to stock. There is no scarcity of mangels in those districts where the crop is grown. Good supplies of turnips in sound condition are also still available. A slightly larger quantity of turnips was marketed in March than in February at cheaper prices.

Hay of good quality is still plentiful. The hay markets last month were of similar dimensions to those of February, and prices of both upland and meadow hay showed a reduction on the month, the former from 82s. 6d. per ton in February to 77s. 10d. per ton in March, and the latter from 63s. 2d. per ton to 59s. 6d. per ton.

LIVE STOCK.

Store cattle are in good condition, chiefly owing to the plentiful supply of home-grown foods. Dairy cattle also are generally in a healthy state, but the rather severe weather during the month has tended to delay an increase in the milk yield. Supplies of cattle at markets and fairs were of small dimensions for the month, and the improvement in prices noticeable in the previous two months was well maintained.

Sheep are in fairly good condition, and the number of lambs this year is estimated to be greater than that of last year. Some losses occurred in exposed districts during the snowstorms. The moderate-sized offerings of sheep, principally fats, met a fair demand in March, and recent rates were maintained.

The pork markets were larger than in February, and values improved during the first three weeks of the month from 102s. 9d. per cwt. to 105s. 3d. per cwt., but dropped to 99s. 9d. at the end of March. The brisk demand for pork in the period referred to was reflected in the trade for young pigs, which continued good, although there was a slackening in the demand consequent on the fall in pork prices at the end of the month. Prices of suckers followed closely on parallel lines with pork values.

There was a slight improvement in the demand for farm horses, and useful animals made from £20 to £30 each.

There was no shortage in supplies of milk and with the commencement of calving there should be an increase shortly in the milk yield. Farmers obtained from 6d. to 7½d. per gallon for milk delivered to the creameries, the separated milk being returned.

THE PRINCE OF WALES IN THE SUDAN.

ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS VISITED

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
KHARTOUM, Tuesday.

The Prince of Wales this afternoon visited Khartoum's remarkable little "Zoo," which takes the form of a beautiful tropical garden on the banks of the Blue Nile. In this enclosure many rare animals and birds enjoy almost complete freedom, and are so tame that they eat from the hand.

As he watched gazelle and antelope feeding quietly on the grass beneath the palms, His Royal Highness remarked how fine it was to see them free and uncaged like that. In the course of this visit the Prince saw in a docile state almost every kind of game which during the past few weeks he had tracked through hundreds of miles of African bush. Perhaps, for this reason, His Royal Highness showed a special interest in the fine specimens of elephant, hippo, buffalo and lion. He also spent a long time watching a proud father and mother baboon with a newborn baby.

Mr. Brocklehurst, game warden, and Major Barker, assistant warden, went the round with the Prince, whose visit attracted no more attention than that of an ordinary tourist.

The Prince, immediately after his visit, enjoyed a game of squash racquets at the Sudan Club. In the evening there was a dinner at the Palace.

ROAD AND RAIL.

AGREEMENTS IN GREAT BRITAIN.

References to the agreements reached in various parts of the country regarding omnibus transport services between the railway companies and his company were made by Sir John Jarvis, the Chairman, at the annual general meeting yesterday of the National Omnibus and Transport Company, Limited, held at the Cannon Street Hotel, London.

Sir John mentioned that the company had now entered into an agreement with the London and North-Eastern Railway and the London, Midland and Scottish Railway Companies regarding their services in the Eastern and Midland Companies. A new company, the Eastern National Omnibus Company, Limited, had been formed.

Sir John added—"There remain only two small areas not yet taken over. Whether these will be absorbed by the associated companies or dealt with in some other way is of relatively minor importance. We had to choose between competition and co-operation, and, remembering that our competitors had hundreds of millions of capital behind them, we chose co-operation as a wiser alternative."

BIG FRENCH LINER LAUNCHED.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
SAINT NAZAIRE, Tuesday.

The 40,000-ton liner Atlantique was successfully launched this afternoon. The launching was to have taken place yesterday, and M. Rollin, Minister of the Mercantile Marine, and a number of distinguished persons were present, but the ceremony had to be postponed on account of a sudden storm. The Atlantique is intended for the South American service.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT

SNOWDEN BUDGET CRITICISED.

MR. CHURCHILL'S ATTACK.

HOW NOTTINGHAM WILL FARE.

FROM OUR PARLIAMENTARY CORRESPONDENT.
WESTMINSTER, Tuesday.

The Opposition attack on the Budget proposals was launched to-day by Mr. Churchill. He began by acknowledging that the Chancellor, in his Budget speech, had avoided the appearance of recrimination, which was a step towards a better line of conduct. Nevertheless, he felt bound to attempt to disentangle their respective responsibilities for the present state of affairs, and to contrast their policies. According to Mr. Snowden, the wealth appropriated by the "idle rich" was a deduction from the first share that ought to go to the remuneration of industry in all its forms. So the Chancellor's endeavour was by taxation to divert national income into what he considered more useful channels. It was clear that the right hon. gentleman was opposed to the view that taxation was a regrettable necessity, that it was a burden on industry, that it discouraged enterprise and restricted national saving. As a fact, we were the most heavily directly taxed nation. Our three great competitors—the United States, Germany and France—were reducing by scores of millions a year their demands upon the direct taxpayer. These countries held that direct taxation were clogs upon trade and a danger to industry.

AN IMPEDIMENT.

Taxation in this country had reached a point when it had become a grievous impediment to the production of new wealth. The main intention of any Chancellor should be in the direction of alleviation of public burdens. We required less of the State and less of the tax-gatherer in our national affairs. The result of the general election had placed the right hon. gentleman in power, and various political developments since seemed to have entrenched him there. (Laughter.) Mr. Snowden was asking the House to impose new taxes upon wealth of 46½ millions, of which about 34 millions matured in the current year. We were being asked to return to the full severity of war-time taxation. Mr. Churchill went on to deny the necessity for new taxation at all, and said that if the Government had not been changed there would have been no fresh taxation. He was far from being a Protectionist, but he believed that far less injury would have been done to industry generally if a small duty had been put on foreign-manufactured, finished or semi-finished goods, than by increasing taxation.

The reason for this new taxation had been plainly and mercilessly exposed. It was designed to finance the Socialist schemes of the Government. (Opposition cheers and Labour jeers.) The Government had committed themselves to vast new expenditure, but they must be blind if they did not see the gravity of their proposals or the consequence of their folly. The addition of sixpence to the standard rate of income tax was a thumping blow at every form of enterprise and industry. It was not a sufficient answer to say that the new taxation would deprive no one of the necessities of life. If the incentive to save on the part of the super-rich was impaired, injury would follow to the whole community. What had the Government to show for the 40 millions of new taxation that they were imposing? The policy embodied in the Budget would promote the expatriation of capital, and delay the recovery of trade at the very moment when the opposite process was at work in all our competing countries.

AN "OPPORTUNIST BUDGET."

Mr. Maxton, Labour member for Bridgeton, was profoundly disappointed with the Budget, but from quite an opposite point of view to Mr. Churchill's. In fact, he said, the conclusion he came to was that the Budget had been countersigned by Mr Churchill, and approved in advance by Mr Lloyd George. The Labour Party had an overwhelming mandate from the electors to transfer the surplus wealth of the few to the pockets of the suffering poor.

Mr. Isaacs—And at one go. (Laughter.)

Mr. Maxton, proceeding, said that the Budget was more in keeping with the views of the Conservative Party, as it aimed at the restoration of capitalist trade and industry. He would like to remind the Financial Secretary to the Treasury (Mr. Pethick Lawrence) that not so long ago he was the foremost advocate of a capital levy, and was going to impose it in one bite or two. Now they found both the Chancellor and the Financial Secretary proposing a policy which was dead against the Socialist view. There was not a single provision in the Budget which was designed to make the lot of the worker easier. This was an opportunist Budget, the guiding principle of which was the stabilisation of the capital system.

LACE INDUSTRY'S PLIGHT.

Sir Henry Betterton, Conservative member for Nottingham, said that the Chancellor's decision to allow the safeguarding duties on lace to lapse at the end of June would be received with consternation and despair by those in the trade. It would mean the ruin of the industry and the throwing out of employment of a great many people.

Colonel Wedgwood was disappointed that the Chancellor had not availed himself of the first opportunity of taxing land values. Unemployment was closely connected with the land, and the problem would not be solved until they made it too expensive and uncomfortable for people who owned land not to make proper use of it. He did not think that the heart of the Financial Secretary to the Treasury had ever been bent on such taxation. He would remind the House that the President of the Board of Education was one of the largest landholders in the Labour Party. (Laughter.)

Mr. H. Mond, in regretting the disappearance of the Safeguarding duties, remarked—Some of us, of the younger generation, have no interest in the rattling skeletons of defunct statesmen. (Laughter.)

Sir J. Ferguson's criticism was that in sticking to an economic theory the Chancellor had struck a blow at the Empire. This was one of the most destructive and vindictive Budgets that had ever been introduced.

Mr. Pethick Lawrence, replying to the debate, said that if the Chancellor had attempted to introduce all kinds of social reform he would have been exceeding the task allotted to him. What he had to do was to find the money to foot the bill created by the estimates. Commenting on the fact that Mr. Churchill attributed his financial troubles to the general strike, Mr. Pethick Lawrence said that the right hon. gentleman, like a bad bridge player, blamed his cards.

Mr. Churchill—I blame a crooked deal.

ARMY ANNUAL BILL.

LORDS RESTORE DEATH PENALTY.

The House of Lords this evening restored to the Army and Air Force Annual Bill the clause which imposes the death penalty for cowardice and desertion. This provision had been deleted in the Commons, but their lordships reversed the Commons' decision by 45 votes to 12. Lord Fitzalan, who argued that the abolition of the death penalty would greatly increase the temptation to give way in face of the enemy, was supported by Lord Plumer and Lord Allenby, who pointed out that from the point of view of moral and discipline it was very necessary that the extreme penalty should be retained.

Lord Thomson, speaking for the Government, said that the proposed amendment was bound to be rejected by the Commons, with the result that, if their lordships insisted, they might lose the bill altogether and find themselves next month without a legalised Army or Air Force.

DUBLIN WRITERS' CLUB.

At the Dublin Writers' Club meeting at Jury's Hotel to-night, Mr. M. F. Liddell, M.A., Ph.D. (of the University of Birmingham), will lecture on "The German Impressionist Drama."

During raids by detectives and Civic Guards on houses in Annacarthy and Donohill districts, CO. TIPPERARY, "Easter Lilies," which are being sold throughout the country, and have been issued in connection with the forthcoming Easter Week celebrations, were seized, together with literature.

TWENTY THOUSAND TON LINER.

COMING BELFAST LAUNCH.

On April 29 Messrs. Harland and Wolff will launch from their East Yard at the Musgrave Channel, the Warwick Castle, a 20,000 ton motor vessel, for the South African passenger service, and the Union Castle Mail Steamship Company, Ltd.

The Warwick Castle is a sister ship of the Winchester Castle, launched last November, and still completing in Belfast. She is one of the finest ships ever laid down in the port, and following the lead set in the Carnarvon Castle in 1926, she will be propelled by internal combustion engines. Her principal dimensions are 630 feet long, by 75 feet beam, while the passenger accommodation will be of a superior scale.

The building of these liners has enabled the company to dispose lately of one of its older tonnage. The Glengorm Castle left London last Monday in tow of a Dutch tug to be broken up at Hendrick, Holland. She was built at the Queen's Island in 1898 as the German, and as the last of the "G" class intermediate ships, of which Gaul, Goth, Greek, and Garka were the best known.

YESTERDAY'S LAUNCH.

Messrs. Harland and Wolff, Limited, launched yesterday from their South Yard, Belfast, the twin screw motor cargo vessel, Silverwalnut, the second of four similar vessels ordered by Messrs. Stanley and John Thompson, Limited (Silver Line). The launching ceremony was performed by Mrs. Kerr, the wife of Mr H F. Kerr, director of Silver Line, Ltd.

The Silverwalnut has been built under Board of Trade survey and to meet the requirements of Suez and Panama Canal certificates. The principal dimensions are: Length B.P. 455 feet, breadth mld. 61 feet 9 inches, depth 40 feet, gross tonnage 6,200.

The propelling machinery consists of two sets of single-acting Diesel engines of the Harland-B. and W. type. Each main engine is direct-coupled to a propeller and is of the six-cylinder type, having a three-stage air compressor, mounted at the forward end, and driven off an extension from the crankshaft to supply air for fuel injection. The pistons are cooled with oil, whilst the sea water passes through the oil-cooler before circulating through the compressor, jackets, and cylinder covers.

Among those present at the launch were the Viscountess Pirrie, Mr. H. F. Kerr and Mr. Stanley Thompson, directors; Mr. J. Smith, superintendent engineer of the Silver Line, Ltd.; Mr. D. C. Arnell, Mr. C. Payne, C.B.E., D.L., and Mr. F. E. Rebbeck, J.P., managing directors of Harland and Wolff, Limited.

"DRACULA"-LIKE TALE OF A CHATEAU.

WEALTHY MANUFACTURER ARRESTED.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
PARIS, Tuesday.

An astonishing story of events in a seventeenth century Normandy chateau is given by the Evreux Correspondent of the Intransigeant. A wealthy manufacturer, it is declared, took the chateau, furnished, in the spring of 1927. He left towards the end of 1928, and, in August last, the owner, a woman, found that silver and furniture valued at 30,000 francs (£250) had disappeared. Some of the objects, it is alleged, were eventually found in the possession of her late tenant.

The manufacturer, a woman who had lived at the chateau with him, and his son were arrested. The son, in prison, is said to have confessed to an extraordinary series of crimes. Among these were the poisoning of a newly-born infant, an attempt to poison the caretakers of the chateau and the desecration of graves in the chateau park, which were disturbed in the hope of finding hidden treasure.

The manufacturer and the woman have been released on bail, the son alone remaining in jail. The chateau, which contains fifty rooms, was once a nunnery.

STORY DISPROVED.

News has just reached here that an official investigation was carried out to-day into the extraordinary story of crime that has been woven round a Normandy chateau. A careful search was made, but no trace was found anywhere of anything having been broken open, and the graves supposed to have been desecrated showed every sign of having been undisturbed for many years. The owner of the chateau is at present staying with some friends and was not present at the investigations.

THE GRAF ZEPPELIN OVER FRANCE.

BAD WEATHER ON VOYAGE TO SPAIN.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
PARIS, Tuesday.

The Graf Zeppelin, which is proceeding to Spain in order to give the officers an opportunity of making certain arrangements in connection with the proposed trans-Atlantic flight via Seville next month, left Friedrichshafen at a quarter-past two this afternoon, carrying sixteen passengers.

The authorities at Orly Aerodrome, near Paris, have received a wireless message from the airship, stating that at 6.55 p.m. all was well aboard, and that the airship was making for Bordeaux. At 5.55 p.m. she was sighted over Dijon. It was then raining and there were low clouds.

The wireless station at Bordeaux picked up at 10 p.m. (summer time) the following message from the Zeppelin: "At 9 p.m. (G.M.T.) we were over Montmorillon."

ACTION BY COMMONWEALTH GOVERNMENT.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

At the request of the British Government, Mr. Scullin, Prime Minister of the Commonwealth, has written to the Premier of Victoria urging him to take immediate action with regard to the recent complaints by members of the British Overseas Settlers and Imperial Ex-Service Associations that the pledges made to them have been broken, and that many of them have been placed on land already abandoned by native Australians as hopeless. Mr. Scullin has suggested that these settlers are entitled to special consideration from the Victorian Government.

Mr. Hogan, the Premier of Victoria, has replied that this matter is now under consideration.

The settlers recently presented a petition to Lord Somers, Governor of Victoria, which they asked should be forwarded to the British Government in order to persuade it to intervene on their behalf. In the complaint they stated that, of seven hundred settlers who had brought out an aggregate of more than £250,000 in capital, most were now "on the bread line."

A TWO MINUTES' SILENCE ON GOOD FRIDAY.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
HAMILTON, ONTARIO, Tuesday.

The Mayor has issued a proclamation requesting all residents in the city to observe a two-minutes' silence on Good Friday in commemoration of the Crucifixion.

EMPIRE FREE TRADE.

A CONSERVATIVE LEAFLET.

LORD BEAVERBROOK'S PROTEST.

Lord Beaverbrook, in a letter forwarded for publication to-day, says:—"I have received many copies of a leaflet, No. 3,153, issued by the Conservative Central Office, under the heading: 'This is Baldwin's Pledge to You.' It is here explained that the Conservative Party seeks power 'to go into conference with the Dominions, in order to make a bargain which will enable us to sell more manufactured goods to them," and that if then the Dominions ask us 'to help them by putting taxes on foreign foodstuffs and allowing theirs in free, the question will be put to the country by means of a referendum.'

"I desire to state as plainly and as publicly as possible that this is not in consonance either with the policy which the Empire Crusaders have advocated or with the arrangement under which we accepted the referendum in order to facilitate the adoption of that policy by the Conservative Party. It puts the onus of asking for duties on foreign food on the Dominions, instead of making these duties the extent of the constructive policy which Great Britain ought to put forward.

"The publication of this leaflet is one in a chain of events which have gradually made the present position extremely difficult.

"Let me add that I have read all the literature issued by the Conservative Central Office upon this subject, and that in my opinion not one single part of it is of the smallest service whatever, either in explaining the project of Empire free trade or of urging that course upon the country."

A MARRIAGE AT SEA.

WOMAN'S EVIDENCE IN CORRIGAN CASE.

Michael Denis Corrigan (45), mining engineer, made a further appearance at Marlborough street Police Court, London, yesterday, on charges of obtaining money and cheques by false pretences. Corrigan, who denied the charges, was arrested in Paris last November.

The sums mentioned in the case are £4,900 from Derek Dakeyne Cannon, £10,700 from Mary Louise Harrold and £18,320 from Thomas Oswald Noad.

In her evidence last week Mrs. Harrold said that she met Corrigan at the Savoy Hotel, London, and he declared he was the manager of the European group of an oil company. She handed a total of £10,700 to him for investment, and was now almost penniless.

Her daughter and Corrigan became engaged, and she had discovered that a statement by Corrigan that they were married on a yacht was untrue.

THE DEFENDANT'S RACEHORSES.

Mrs. Harrold yesterday said that she was staying at Cannes when Corrigan and her daughter told her that they had been married on a yacht fifteen miles off the coast of Ireland. She told them it was not legal. She had asked him if he were in a position to support her daughter. He said that he owned racehorses and kept a trainer. He took her down to see his stable and his racehorses.

Mrs. Harrold said that she had given Corrigan about £2,800, when her bank manager warned her about letting him have any more money. She went on trusting him, however. Corrigan had lent her £720.

Mrs. Harrold said it was absolutely false to suggest that every penny she paid Corrigan was to assist him in connection with the business he had in hand and was not for investment in the oil company.

Mrs. Harrold described as "a tissue of lies" a letter which Corrigan had written to her about oil shares.

Corrigan was remanded, bail not being allowed.

A BELFAST APPOINTMENT.

NEW CLERK OF PETTY SESSIONS.

At a meeting of the Belfast city magistrates, held in the City Hall yesterday, Mr. William J. Holmes, barrister-at-law, was appointed Clerk of Petty Sessions, Belfast, in succession to the late Mr. John G. Ballentine.

Mr. William J. Holmes, barrister-at-law, has been a member of the Petty Sessions staff for thirty-five years. He is the eldest son of the late Mr. Arthur Holmes, J.P., of Bangor, for many years managing director of the firm of Messrs. Wm. Cowan, Ltd., wholesale wine and spirit merchants, Belfast. In 1920 Mr. Holmes was called to the Bar of Northern Ireland. An enthusiastic golfer, he is a member of the Royal Belfast Club, Craigavad.

LIGHTHOUSE SERVICE.

FREE STATE COST OF LIVING BONUS.

Mr. W. Graham, President of the Board of Trade, stated yesterday in a written reply to Captain Peter MacDonald (Conservative, Isle of Wight) that the cost of living bonus paid to men in the lighthouse service of the Irish Free State is on the same principle as that in Great Britain, but is based on the cost of living in the Irish Free State. The rate is reviewed every six months, and on 1st September last it was reduced in accordance with a drop in the cost of living figure from 80 to 75. From the 1st of March the rate has been increased on a rise in the cost of living from 75 to 80.

BAKERY DISPUTE SEQUEL.

THREE MEN CHARGED AT TIPPERARY.

There was a sequel to the recent dispute in the bakery trade in the Tipperary District Court yesterday, when Patrick McInerney, Thomas Scully and Richard Maddock were charged with the larceny of thirty shillings and two reference papers from Thomas O'Connell, Castlecomer, Co. Kilkenny, and with intimidating him and unlawfully detaining him in the Workmen's Club, Tipperary.

O'Connell stated that after his arrival in Tipperary on March 24th, to take up work in the local bakery establishment, where there was a trade dispute, he was brought by Maddock and Scully to the Workmen's Club, where McInerney caught him by the throat, rifled his pockets, took his money and reference papers. Witness was locked in a room in the club premises from which he later escaped through the skylight.

For the defence it was stated that O'Connell came voluntarily to the club, where McInerney sought to reason with him against "blacklegging." It was strongly denied that O'Connell was molested or that anything was taken from him.

McInerney said that O'Connell, who was drunk, went with his own consent to the bandroom to await a general meeting of the bakers in regard to his case that night. Witness locked him in the room, fearing a possible assault on him by other workers pending the meeting. It also was stated that the bakery dispute now was amicably settled.

Justice Troy dismissed all the charges against Maddock and Scully. In the case of McInerney the Justice dismissed the charges of larceny and intimidation, and on the charge of unlawful detention held that this offence was of a trivial nature and dismissed that charge also.

Human nature being what it was, added the Justice, and considering how high feeling rose on an occasion of the kind, it was satisfactory that the trouble had passed over without anything more serious occurring.

Owing to a motor car skidding at Madrid and overturning yesterday, one person was killed and four seriously injured.—(Reuter.)

U.S. MARKETS.

STOCKS CLOSE EASY.

REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.
NEW YORK, Tuesday.

After opening heavy the market experienced a sharp sinking spell, in which most Copper issues sagged to new low levels for the year, while the declines in active issues, including leading Rails, ranged from 1 to 6 points, and a few specialities lost 7 to 12 points. The reaction, however, was checked around midday in response to a brisk demand for some high-grade Industrials, while Merchandising Stocks were heavily bought on reports of good Easter business. People's Gas early broke 12 points, and Allied Chemical, American Telegraph and Telephone, Atchison Topeka, and Western Union Telegraph lost 3 to 6 points. The marked reduction in Copper commodity prices was the principal disturbing factor, while the unsatisfactory Copper situation has been the chief deterrent to bullish operations, and, with the reduction finally out of the way, many are inclined to the theory that the market is in a much better position to advance. In late dealings the market generally was inclined to sag, but Coppers received some support. The closing was easy. People's Gas lost 9 points, New York and Harlems 8, Allied Chemical, Atchison Topeka, Granby Consolidated, Southern Railway, Missouri Pacific, American Waterworks, Missouri Kansas, National Lead, Chesapeake and Ohio, Lehigh Valley and Underwood-Elliott-Fisher lost 2 to 5 points; while Case Threshing Machine and Gulf States Steel advanced 6 and 5 respectively, and American Can, American Rolling Mill, Auburn Auto, Loews Incorporated, May Department Store, Sears Roebuck, Standard Gas and U.S. Steel gained 2 to 3 points. Government Bonds barely steady; Railroad Bonds steady. The day's sales totalled 4,204,000 shares.

Money on call closed steady at 4 p.c. bid and 4¼ p.c. asked. All business during the day was concluded at 4 p.c. Sterling exchange quiet. Silver ⅛c. lower at 42⅜.

CAR IN FLAMES.

THREE MEN BURNED TO DEATH.

Three men were burned to death in a motoring accident at Creswell, Derbyshire, late on Monday night. They were returning to Creswell, after a visit to relatives of one of the party, when their car skidded, crashed into a telegraph post, and then overturned. The car burst into flames, and, although a 'bus taking miners into Worksop came on the scene, nothing could be done to save the men, who were pinned underneath the car.

Herbert Tomlinson (38), one of the victims, was serving beer in a Creswell club when he was invited to go for a ride. He agreed, but his brother, who was also invited, declined.

When the bodies were recovered, fifty £1 notes, all badly charred, were found upon Arthur Bacon (34), a Basford butcher, the owner of the car.

The third victim of the accident was Walter Holmes, a miner. Bacon and Holmes were single. Tomlinson was married, and had one child.

THREE CHILDREN POISONED.

Seven members of a family named Blower, living at Aldridge, near Walsall, were admitted to hospital at Walsall suffering from ptomaine poisoning. One child, aged four, died at midnight yesterday, and two others, aged ten and eleven, died later yesterday.

WINNIPEG GRAINS.

WHEAT at the opening was steady and unchanged to ⅛c. up. Advances were stimulated by better Liverpool cable advices than expected, reports of a good export business, and buying of May option, credited to foreign interests. A rise of 1/- in the Argentine and Australian freight rates to Europe, together with covering by shorts, assisted the upward movement; then a sharp break in prices was influenced by a forecast for general rains over the North-West provinces and a bearish Indian crop estimate. NEW YORK COTTON.

COTTON opened steady at 13 to 8 points loss, and continued to recede under liquidation in near months by smaller longs and quiet general selling of new crop on generally favourable weather news. CHICAGO, Tuesday.

WHEAT opened steady and ¼c. down to ⅛c. up; then all advanced on a bullish Clement Curtis report stating that prospects at present point to a yield in Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma and Texas of 265 million bushels. Reports of damage by hessian fly in Western Kansas and rumours of some export business, coupled with shorts covering, further assisted the rise; then the market broke sharply under advices of good rains in Oklahoma and liquidation. THE "ZOO" IN APRIL : A "Q" BOAT : KING CRICKET ARRIVES.

PRIDE, DISDAIN AND ANGER—A camera-man who visited the Dublin "Zoo." yesterday found the animals in moods that together reflected the various and many-sided weathers of the month of April. The eagle owl (left) was proud and pleased. (The photographer avers that he actually "purred.") The vultures, however, were both suspicious and supercilious; while Balor, the magnificent lion, was definitely in disagreement with the weather, the Budget, and the world in general.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES—In Dublin yesterday summer sports enthusiasts were busy practising for the coming season. Left: Mr. A. E. Knight, the Leicester and All-England player, coaching a Belvedere College batsman in the Phœnix Park. Centre: Miss P. Wallis—apparently pleased with her form—preparing for the Irish Hard-court Championships. Right: A batsman fixing his pads.

THE "TOTE" ON TRIAL—Punters drawing their winnings at a trial run of the pari-mutuel installation at Fairyhouse Racecourse yesterday. The "tote" will be in operation there for the first time on Easter Monday.

VISITORS TO IRELAND—The Hon. Charles Wood (seated) and the Hon. Francis Wood, sons of Lord Irwin, Viceroy of India, and nephews of the Countess of Iveagh, M.P., are included in the house party at Farmleigh, Castleknock, Dublin.

Spring

Andrews has taken the place of the old Springtime correctives: a merry, sparkling, cleansing glass of Andrews is the modern medicine of Spring . . . . preferable by far to the brimstone and treacle of old.

During Springtime the inner cleansing action of Andrews is needed and welcome: for yourself and for the children, a glass of pleasant-tasting Andrews for a few successive days will cool and purify the blood.

Andrews quickly corrects the little Ills which change-of-Season brings. The fathers and mothers of the parents of to-day have proved its worth within the Home.

GOSSIP FROM THE COURSE

FASHION CHANGES.

ST. LEGER HARD SET TO LAND ODDS.

POOR LAD'S PROMISE.

(FROM OUR TRAVELLING CORRESPONDENT.)

NOTTINGHAM, Tuesday Night.

There are few things more noticeable in racing then the way in which fashion changes, and how the so-called bad jockey of yesterday is the genius whose services must be obtained at any cost to-day. A few years ago when C. Ray, who rode three winners this afternoon, arrived from South Africa no leading trainer would look at him. He was a rather dried-up looking man of mature years, with no capacity for self-advertisement, and only small stables would put him up. Now he is a personalty, and when his name goes into the frame people look to see what he is riding. Yet he rides no better than in his first season in England. He always was quick at the gate, he always had good hands, and horses have always gone for him. It has, however, taken people several years to realise this.

CRAGFORD'S SCORE.

His first winner this afternoon was the aged Cragford, an almost invincible plater when at the top of his form. Ray had the mount on him in the Sherwood Selling Plate —a race in which his son was also riding—and he fairly wore down the favourite, Exalt, and beat him by half a length. Cragford, by the way, was the first winner which Mr. Douglas-Pennant has trained since he took out a licence this year, and took over sole control of the Upavon stable.

La Fontaine, a Milesius colt, trained by Mr. Frank Hartigan, was Ray's second winner. There were several preferred to him in the Little John Plate, in which Punkawalla was favourite. When La Fontaine had taken the lead from this one he swerved right across the course, but he did not lose much ground, and he won a length and a half from Shy Baby. The form in this race did not appear nearly so good as that in the two-year-old race yesterday, which Atbara won in such smashing style.

Then, for Mr. Joe Shepherd, Ray won the Bestwood Park Plate on To You, who had run second to Ophir at Lincoln. The failure of the latter at Newbury had seemed to discount To You's running at Lincoln, and Thunder Squall was a good favourite, but the Tetratema colt, who was rather disappointing last year, beat the other. De Mestre is now Mr. J. Shepherd's trainer in succession to many others, and he should win more races with To You.

A NEAR THING.

Lord Derby's big four-year-old, St. Leger, a son of Tranquil, who had never run before he won at Liverpool, had odds laid on him in the Bentinck Maiden Plate, but he only managed to win a neck from Persevere, after Aureate Bay, a surprise winner at Lincoln, had fallen when in the lead a furlong and a half or so from home. Well as he is bred, it is doubtful whether St. Leger will rise to giddy heights as a racehorse.

Alfred Sadler was a little disappointed at Leicester when the Simon Pure filly, Bou Saada, whom he trains for Mrs. Gutmann, was beaten by Rivalry. She made amends here when she won the Newark Handicap by three-parts of a length from Gowan Lodge. She was losing ground in the early stages, but when she found her legs she went on and outstayed the second to win with a lot in hand.

Sir Hugo Cunliffe Owen ran Poor Lad, whom he bought last year after he had shown good form in Ireland, but the colt is being harshly treated by the handicapper at present. He showed some promise here, but he is still backward and was not at all fancied.

SELECTIONS.

There is no more racing on the flat in England this week. But there is a National Hunt meeting at Cheltenham, beginning to-morrow. The Holman Cup, a three-mile steeplechase, should be a good event, and in this I incline to the chance of BIG WONDER, a winner of the National Hunt Steeplechase here. It is likely that T. B. Cullinan will ride him, and Shaun Goilin's jockey may have another winner in Sir Lingard Goulding's ST. GERMAINE, who is a likely runner for the Ledbury Handicap Steeplechase.

Irish One Thousand Guineas.

For the Irish One Thousand Guineas, which will be run at the Curragh on Wednesday, 23rd inst., the following fillies are said to be certain starters:—Gay Caprice, Tuneful, Rose Cygnet, South Sea Bubble, Athmore, Lisdoon and Glass Princess. St. Breda is not likely to run.

St. Frusquin's Trainer Dead

Mr. Alfred Hayhoe, the former Newmarket trainer, who had been ill for some time, died yesterday. He was born at Malton, Yorkshire in 1852. On the death of his father in 1881 he was appointed private trainer to Baron Alphonse de Rothschild and Mr. Leopold de Rothschild, at Palace House, Newmarket, and quickly put up a remarkable sequence of winners. The Persimmon-St. Frusquin Derby will long be remembered. In 1896 Hayhoe won the Two Thousand Guineas with Mr. Leopold de Rothschild's St. Frusquin, in the absence of King Edward's Persimmon, who had been scratched. As a result of this success St. Frusquin became a hot favourite for the Derby and started at odds-on with Persimmon, second favourite, at five to one. It was a great race between the pair. St. Frusquin made the early running, but Persimmon drew up, momentarily faltered, but was quickly balanced, got his head in front, and won by a neck. Hayhoe retired in 1905.

Jockey Thrown, But Not Hurt.

About two furlongs from the finish of the Bentinck Maiden Plate at Nottingham yesterday Aureate Bay, when going well, swerved into the rails and fell, dislodging his jockey, G. Skelton. The Stewards subsequently inquired into the incident, and found that nobody was to blame. Neither jockey nor horse was injured.

BIG WONDER FOR THE HOLMAN CUP.

SELECTIONS.

With no racing under Jockey Club Rules, there should be plenty of support forthcoming for the "jumping" fixture at Cheltenham. It is anticipated that the majority of those left in the United Services' Challenge Cup will go to the post. This event is decided over three miles and a half of the steeplechase course, and provides a good sporting contest. Blank Cartridge ran very well against Mellaray's Belle for the Foxhunters' Challenge Cup last month, and as the mare was narrowly beaten by Shaun Goilin for the Grand National it makes the form look good. Mystery XXI. is of the typical hunting type—slow, but sure. He carried his owner, Major R. L. McCreery, into third place at Aldershot in the Services' Open Steeplechase decided over three miles and a quarter, but finished a long way behind the two leaders. The almost general opinion is that Fear Nothing, who was successful at the National Hunt fixture, will again win. He is, undoubtedly, a fine jumper, but I doubt his ability to concede the required weight to either Rock Crystal or Rosetta Stone. Both these horses jumped faultlessly when winning races at the Royal Artillery Meeting held at Sandown Park earlier in the present month, and they should take a lot of beating. They are under the care of Stedall at Lewes, and the selected should win.

Pride of the Morning, who won the Holman Cup, a handicap steeplechase of three miles, last year, is quite expected to repeat that success. The opposition will be much stronger on this occasion, for the runners will include Big Wonder, Glen Andred, Redan, Coral Reef II., and Sir Jasper. The form of these is well known, and, if showing his best, Big Wonder should win.

TOTALISATOR TESTED.

SUCCESSFUL TRIAL AT FAIRYHOUSE.

An interesting event, which may be regarded as the harbinger of a new prosperity to Irish horse breeding and horse racing, took place at the Fairyhouse Racecourse yesterday afternoon, when the first totalisator or pari-mutuel system of betting was demonstrated successfully, prior to its inaugural appearance at the Fairyhouse Bank Holiday meeting on next Monday.

Despite the handicap of circumstances, great promise was seen in the demonstration yesterday. Two imaginary races were "run," and quite a considerable gathering bet on the various horses on the card with imitation money in the shape of cardboard and paper. Of course, the main purpose of the demonstration was to give the Totalisator Board's staff first-hand experience, and it must be admitted that they came through the test most satisfactorily.

There is something about this system that gives a new aspect to betting, for it adds to its sporting element, and there is always the chance of bringing off a "long shot," while the facilities for place betting are unlimited, which is a decided advantage. Further, all money bet on each race, minus the official ten per cent. reduction, goes back to the punter, whether in the form of a small dividend on the favourite or in a large dividend on an outsider.

There probably will be some people who will find some fault with the pari-mutuel system of betting on one ground or another at the very beginning, but when they get used to the system, which is really very simple and only needs a little forethought, they will then be prepared to admit that it is a proposition calculated to materially benefit racing in Ireland, as it has done in all the other countries where it has been established.

THE UNITS.

The backer can only bet in units of two shillings, and its multiples. Thus at the two shilling window, a person can only make a bet of 2s., and any multiple of that; at the ten shilling window he can make a bet of 10s., and any multiple of ten shillings; and similarly at the £1 and £5 windows. This means that if a person wants to bet 14s. he must buy seven 2s. tickets, and not go to the 10s. window for it. Also if a person wants to make a bet of 30s. he must go to the 10s. window and buy three ten shilling tickets.

Until the people get used to the little intricacies of the pool betting it is only to be expected that there will be some slight confusion and delay at the windows, both in the buying of tickets and in the cashing of winning tickets, but it will be remedied in due course. So that the least possible trouble will be experienced on Monday racegoers are advised to study copies of the instruction booklets, which will be handed out to everyone entering the course. Amongst other things this booklet will tell them how to read the indicator board, with its record of the betting on the various horses in a race, and its total pools and dividends after the race has been run.

Among the interested gathering at Fairyhouse yesterday were Lord HolmPatrick, General Sir Bryan Mahon, Mr. J. J. Maher, Mr. T. Levins Moore, Mr. J. H. H. Peard, Mr. B. T. O'Reilly, and the members of the Totalisator Board, including Captain C. Moore, the chairman, Hon. Mr. Justice Wylie, vice-chairman, Major Shirley, Senator Parkinson, and Major Shine.

HUNTING.

THE ISLAND HOUNDS.

REPORT OF THE SEASON 1929-30.

These hounds started cub hunting on September 9th, and had their last meet of the season on April 7th. In all they met on 98 days, two of which were blank. They were never stopped by frost, but did not hunt on one occasion, owing to the country being inundated. During the season proper, which opened on November 1st, hounds accounted for 25½ brace of foxes, of which 4½ brace were caught in the open after runs varying from forty minutes to two hours, the mixed pack especially distinguishing itself by killing a fox in the open on three successive days.

The best hunt of the season, with the proper ending, was on March 7th from Swaine's bog, when the fox pointed first for Boley Hill, but, being headed, turned back and took us through Coolook Beg and Ballywalter. Then, leaving Ashton on the left, was rolled over at Boleamy pointing for Courtown. This was a 4½ mile point, and the time 1½ hours.

The longest hunt of the season was on January 11th, when a fox found in Ballyorley bog went first to Ballincash, then wheeling left-handed went by Oulart covert, between Wells and The Island, towards Kilmuckridge, across the Gorey road north of Kilmuckridge to Dundrum, then on to Raheenlusk, where hounds were called off in the dark. This was an 8½ mile point, and quite 16 as hounds ran. Time, 3½ hours.

RAILWAY UNION UNBEATEN.

RAILWAY UNION 5 NATIONAL BANK... 0

At Park avenue yesterday evening, Railway Union completed the Senior League programme, and, in securing a ready victory, have maintained an unbeaten record in Leinster and Irish hockey for the season.

The feature of the game was the splendid display of D'Arcy in the bank goal, and he displayed great resource and ability on several occasions when faced with V. Sully in possession. In the first half Hennessy opened the score from a rebound off D'Arcy, and before the interval V. Sully got through on a couple of occasions, to add clever goals. The same player was responsible for both goals in the second half.

CIVIL SERVICE CUP FINAL.

LAND COMMISSION "A" 3 REVENUE 1

In the final of the Civil Service Cup, played yesterday evening at Serpentine avenue, Land Commission defeated Revenue by 3 goals to 1.

Land Commission attacked from the start, but were well held for the first ten minutes of the game, Miss Murray stopping shots from Misses McGarry and Cummins. However, continued pressure brought about their first score, Miss Cummins sending in. Soon after a good passing movement ended in Miss Fitzpatrick getting a second. Miss O'Riordan scored for Revenue before the interval, while Miss M'Crossan put on a third for Land Commission in the second half.

Among the guests invited by the Football Association to see the final tie for the Association Cup at Wembley on Saturday week are the Prime Minister, the Foreign Secretary, the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Home Secretary. The Egyptian delegates, who were at Wembley when England beat Scotland in the recent international match, expressed themselves as being so pleased with the game that they desired to be present at the final tie, and it is expected that they will witness the contest.

LINFIELD AND DUNDALK DRAW.

DUNDALK .... 1 LINFIELD 1

At Dundalk yesterday a very interesting challenge match was played between Linfield and Dundalk. Linfield were without Lawson, Sloan and McCracken, and brought on Cochrane, Black and Somerset, but Dundalk played at full strength. The home team scored after fifteen minutes (Coston), and five minutes later Bambrick equalized. The second half was very evenly contested.

RUGBY.

FRANCE v. WALES.

BAILLETTE NOT TO PLAY.

"PROFITEERING" IN TICKETS.

PARIS, Tuesday.

The Auto announces to-day that J. Baillette, the French three-quarter, is suffering from a torn muscle, and has been ordered a complete rest for two weeks. He will, therefore, be unable to take part in the match between France and Wales on Easter Monday. His place in the three-quarter line will probably be taken by A. Behoteguy.

Mr. D. Hellewell (Bradford), who referred the match between Wales and Ireland at Swansea, will have control of the game.

The importance of next Monday's Rugby International has led to a veritable ramp of ticket speculation here. The bookings opened over a week ago, and by Thursday last every numbered seat had been bought—to a great extent, it is alleged—by persons hoping to re-sell them at greatly enhanced prices. This proceeding has naturally caused great disappointment and resentment on the part of bona fide buyers, and one sporting paper to-day calls upon the Rugby Federation for an explanation, and also asks that urgent measures be taken to put a stop to "this illicit traffic."

OTHER FRENCH PLAYERS INJURED.

PARIS, Tuesday.

Reports on the condition of France's selected players make very unsatisfactory reading for her supporters. Baillette, as stated, will not be able to play because of a torn muscle sustained in a League game. For the same reason Houdet was not even considered. Ribere also is stated to be suffering from the effects of a recent injury, and Tailloutou is stated to be far from fit. The latter strained a muscle in the match against Germany, and felt the handicap severely when he turned out for his club against the Stade Français last Sunday. Finally, one of the reserves, Barbazante, is also injured. The Southern members of the team will come to Paris on Saturday, travelling overnight. They will then go to the Stadium at Colombes, where a practice game will be held. Following this they will be sent into the country, probably to Rambouillet, in accordance with the usual policy of keeping them away from prying eyes. They will remain there until a short time before the match begins. Before the Southern players leave they will do combined training at Quillan on Thursday.

CHANGE IN WELSH XV.

At a meeting of the Welsh Rugby Union in Cardiff to-night (Tuesday), it was decided that Edgar Jones (Llanelly) should take the place of D. Thomas (Swansea) in the Welsh team to meet France, Thomas having sustained an injury.

THE BARBARIANS' TOUR.

FIVE IRISH PLAYERS SELECTED.

Although many well-known players are not available owing to the Rugby Union tour to New Zealand, the Barbarians will be strongly represented for their Easter tour in Wales. Altogether thirty players, including five Irish internationals, will compose the party, which leaves Paddington on Thursday, April 17th, by the 3.55 p.m. train for Cardiff. The headquarters of the tour will be the Esplanade Hotel, Penarth, and four matches will be played, Penarth being met on Good Friday, Cardiff on Saturday, Swansea on Easter Monday and Newport on the next day.

The following are the players who will make the journey:—W. C. C. Agnew (Stewarts P.P.), J. W. Allen (Melrose), D. Bradley (Batley), E. Coley (Northampton), W. R. Collins (Rosslyn Park), D. Crichton-Miller (Gloucester), J. J. A. Embleton (Cambridge University), D. St. Clair Ford (United Services), J. E. Forrest (Glasgow Academicals), C. G. Gosling (United Services, Devonport), J. Graham (Kelso), C. J. Hanrahan (Dolphin), R. G. S. Hobbs (Richmond), E. W. F. De V. Hunt (Richmond), A. G. Johnston (Guy's Hospital), A. Key (Old Cranleighans), T. S. Lee (United Services), Windsor H. Lewis (Guy's Hospital), F. W. S. Malir (Otley), M. A. McCanlis (Gloucester), J. Moffat (Edinburgh Academicals), H. Murphy (Cork Constitutional), C. T. Payne (North of Ireland), J. R. F. Popplewell (Guy's Hospital), M. Robson (Oxford University), I. M. B. Stuart (London Irish), L. M. Stuart (Glasgow High School), J. S. Tucker (Bristol), R. N. Williams (St. Bartholomew's Hospital), W. H. Wood (United Services, Devonport).

MUNSTER JUNIOR CUP.

PLAYER ORDERED TO THE SIDE LINE.

YOUNG MUNSTER 8, ABBEY 0.

In the re-played semi-final of the Northern Section of the Munster Junior Cup at the Markets Field, Limerick, yesterday, Young Munster defeated Abbey by a goal and a penalty goal (8 points) to nil.

The teams met on a previous occasion, when the game was declared off by the referee, owing to his being assaulted, and the question had been before the Munster Branch, who ordered the replay. This game was under the control of Mr. J. H. Miles, Dublin.

In the early stages Young Munster had the advantage, and their backs showed much more cleverness than their opponents, particularly Hickey and the wing three-quarters, Keane and Carroll; while the Abbey forwards, led by O'Halloran, were better in the tight play. The game was twenty-five minutes old when the scoring opened. McCormack, the Young Munster full, cut in among his three-quarters, and, sending out to Begg, the latter sent a fast pass to Carroll, who showed fine speed to beat the opposition from half way; McCormack goaling. Near the close of half time Young Munster improved their position further, when Abbey were penalised, and McCormack landed a penalty goal.

In the second half Abbey had territorial advantage for a lengthy period, and were unlucky when L. McNamara failed to goal from a penalty in a good position. Young Munster attacked strongly on two occasions, but there was no further scoring.

LAWN TENNIS.

AMATEURS AND "PROS" TO MEET IN AUGUST.

ENGLAND V. IRELAND.

Several international fixtures were arranged at a meeting of the Council of the Lawn Tennis Association in London. It was decided that if the international programme permits a match will be played in England against Japan this year. A men's team is to be nominated to take part in the British Empire Games at Hamilton, Ontario, on August 16th to 23rd.

The annual match between England and Ireland will in future be played alternately in the two countries. It will be played in England this year.

Leave has been granted to Queen's Club, London, to send a team to compete in an international tournament at Amsterdam on May 9th to 11th.

A match between British and French women will be played at Deauville on July 12th and 13th.

The meeting of amateurs and professionals will take place in a match at Eastbourne in August.

GOLF.

WORKING BACKWARDS WITH THE BEGINNER.

DUNCAN'S DISCOVERY.

(By Our Golf Correspondent.)

George Duncan lectured to bigger audiences at Clery's, Sackville street, yesterday; indeed, the available space was not sufficient to accommodate all those who were anxious to hear him "talk" at 3 o'clock and again at 4.30.

The late Charles Wilkinson, when professional at Clontarf, remarked to the writer that he thought the best way to teach golf to the beginner would be to work from the bottom to the top, to start on the putting green. Some years later the leading American professionals adopted that method, and yesterday Duncan opened his lecture with the statement that he had discovered that better results were obtained by "starting young beginners with the half-mashie shot, and working back to the drive," for the reason that it was much easier to introduce a little foot-work into that stroke than the drive, and to get the hands working, one against the other. He then proceeded to show us how we should get the weight at once in front for the half-shot with the mashie. The up-swing being much shorter than those for the iron and driver, we would not have time on the way back to get it forward quickly enough if we were to adopt the procedure necessary in the case of the largest club. Regarding the distribution of weight, he said that in the up-swing if the weight were made to travel in the direction in which the club is going a mess would be made of the shot. It must always be moving in the opposite direction.

PUSH AGAINST THE GROUND.

Passing to the iron shot, Duncan insisted that the left foot on the up-swing should be pushed hard against the ground, and that it was always good to have the left toe pointing outwards at an angle of 45 degrees. With the "closed" stance the ball could be hit further, but, he added, how crooked! "Push against the ground with the left foot as hard as you can," he said, "and the more impetus you will get; it is from the left foot at the impact that we secure that 'snap' which the average amateur admires, but cannot get, thinking, as he does, that it comes from the wrists."

HOW NOT TO DO IT.

The lecturer then demonstrated how not to do it. We saw ourselves on the teeing ground digging ourselves in, as he said, looking down on the ball with arms held rigidly, instead of standing as easily as possible, and our left knee half circling in to the right instead of being pushed out to the ball, the right hip swinging round, and the clubhead thrown out and across the ball for a bad slice.

The old-time theory of the hands starting the clubhead was exploded long since. Duncan's contention is that "all bad shots come from starting the club with the hands." The feet do the preliminary work, and we must, if we would swing and hit the ball properly, leave the hands out of it.

ON THE GREENS.

In reference to the putt, the distribution of the weight and getting the hands to work against each other were points that had to be remembered. Duncan regards Hagen as the best striker of the ball on the green that we have; he puts all the weight on the left leg and opposes the hands, as all the leading professionals and amateurs do. The Scot emphasised the importance of the right hand resisting the left on the back swing, and of the left resisting the right in the hit. Some good putters pay no attention to such resistance; but this "non-resistance" on the greens gets right into our game, into every stroke.

Duncan also alluded to what is known as the "grip." He explained the different "grips," but told us to never "grip" a golf club. "Hold it," he said, adding: "I hold it as lightly as possible."

"Straight lefts" were poor drivers. Taylor, we were informed, never had a straight left; if he had he would not have been an Open Champion five times.

Slow-moving pictures of the leading golfers were thrown on the screen. We saw in action Mr. Wethered, Miss Wethered, Mr. Tolley, Walter Hagen, Jim Barnes, Johnny Farrell, Arthur Havers, Taylor and Duncan, and these pictures served to bring out very clearly the points which Duncan emphasised.

The lectures will be continued to-day and to-morrow at 3 o'clock and 4.30.

DUNCAN AT DOLLYMOUNT.

On Friday George Duncan will be at Dollymount. In the morning he will partner Fred. Smyth against Mr. C. W. Robertson and Mr. J. F. Jameson, and, after lunch, Mr. Jameson and Duncan will play Mr. Robertson and Smyth. In the forenoon the amateurs will receive two holes up. The committee of the Royal Dublin Club invite members and their friends from other clubs to the full use of the clubhouse.

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY LOSE AT EDINBURGH.

Queen's University, Belfast, were heavily defeated by Edinburgh University on the Royal Burgess Golfing Society links yesterday. They lost both foursomes and singles.

In the leading foursomes F. P. McConnell, partnered by T. D. Reade, after being 2 down at the 13th, won four successive holes, to pull victory out of the fire.

In the singles, McConnell was defeated by Eric Mathieson, the Edinburgh leader. The Scottish student, one up at the turn, won the 10th and 13th, and the others were halved to the 16th.

CARNERA IN TROUBLE IN AMERICA.

NEGRO ALLEGES A "FAKE" WAS ARRANGED.

Press Association Foreign Special.

OAKLAND, CALIFORNIA, Tuesday.

Primo Carnera met another negro here last night, winning on this occasion by the technical knock-out in the sixth round. Chevalier, his opponent, who hails from San Francisco, weighted 16st. 6lb., slightly more than 3st. less than Carnera's usual weight. Chevalier put up a much stronger exhibition than the crowd expected, and he received a great ovation when he left the ring.

PURSE WITHHELD.

The Californian Athletic Commission has suspended payment of the purse of 10,000 dollars to Carnera pending investigation of reports that the fight had been faked.

It appears that at the end of the sixth round one of the negro's seconds threw in the towel. This is contrary to the regulations of the California State Athletic Commission, which only allow the towel to be thrown in by the boxer's chief second.

The second immediately became the centre of a howling mob, who handled the man very roughly, and he was badly gashed over the eye. Other members of the audience meanwhile protested volubly against the summary conclusion of the fight, their opinion being that Chevalier was not in the least distressed, and that the fight had been faked. Their arguments were answered by Carnera's fellow-countrymen with cries of "bring Carnera back," "let him fight over again."

The State Commission thereupon made the necessary inquiries on the spot, and decided to withhold the payment of the purse until evidence had been heard on the matter.

NEGRO'S ALLEGATIONS.

Chevalier is reported to have made a statement that he had been approached before signing articles for the fight with a proposition that he must agree to fake the fight. If he did so, adds the statement, his end of the purse would be made more than 900 dollars. Chevalier said that the business was handled by his manager.

Both fighters have been ordered to appear before the Californian State Athletic Commission to explain Chevalier's charge.

COUNTY DUBLIN BOARD I.A.B.A.

At the weekly meeting of the Co. Dublin Board, I.A.B.A., last night, over which Mr. J. J. Healy presided, tournaments were sanctioned for Dun Laoghaire on 30th inst. and for Drogheda on 24th inst.

The Garda applied for 30th inst. as the date for the visit of a cross-Channel team, but as this date had already been allotted it was suggested that the 29th should be taken.

St. Andrew's were granted May 11th and 18th as dates for the club championships.

A recommendation was made to the Central Council that no active amateur boxer be allowed to officiate at tournaments.

On the motion of Lieutenant Phelan, the Board congratulated the Irish team on their performances in the A.B.A. Championships, and, in particular, Garda Murphy, who won the cruiser title.

A special meeting of the Provincial Council will be held to-morrow (Thursday) night at 8 o'clock.

McCALL BEATS IRELAND.

NEW SCOTTISH MIDDLE-WEIGHT CHAMPION.

Steve McCall, of Aberdeen, defeated the holder, Alex. Ireland, for the Middle-Weight Championship of Scotland at Edinburgh on Monday night, after one of the finest contests seen in that city for some years. McCall began very aggressively, and scored well in the first couple of rounds, until Ireland began to settle down. In the fourth and fifth rounds Ireland was compelled to give ground, but he kept McCall out with his left. In the next three rounds Ireland was taking a more active part in the fight, and he pulled up points so well that there was little between the men at the tenth. From that point, however, Ireland began to weaken, and, although he made desperate efforts to land a knock-out punch, he was unable to get through McCall's defence, and the latter, staying on the better, won a capital contest on points.

Allowing for the relief to be given by grants and other receipts (totalling £82,093), there remains to be raised from the county rates a sum of £131,991. Last year's warrant was for £134,875. Mr. Connor said that it was well to say that the Drogheda rate collectors had announced that morning that their rate collections for the year were closed.

The death has occurred of the Rev. D. Hayes, P.P., KILMIHILL. Born in Balleen, Kilmaley, eighty-one years ago, he received his early education in the old College of St. Flannan's, and completed his studies in Maynooth, where he was ordained. He ministered successively in Clarecastle, Coolmeen, Cranny, Doonbeg and Cooraclare prior to his appointment as Parish Priest of Kilballyown, and subsequently Kilmihill. The chairman of the BELFAST Harbour Board (Mr. P. E. Herdman, D.L.) announced at the meeting of the Board yesterday that he wished the Board to accept from him a gift of a clock made by a celebrated maker about 1680. LONE MAN DIES OF STARVATION.

A verdict of "death from heart failure, the result of starvation," was returned yesterday at a Lisburn inquest on the body of Samuel Truesdale (48), a clerk, who was found dead in the house where he lived alone at MILLHALL, Antrim. A relative said that the deceased man had been unemployed since the death of his father nine or ten years ago, and a police witness said that he found the body lying on the kitchen floor; there was no food or fuel in the house. A doctor, who was of opinion that death had taken place some twenty-four hours previously, said that the body resembled a skeleton.

EDUCATION BILL PROTEST.

At a special meeting of the ARMAGH Council yesterday, Mr. T. H. Montgomery, D.L., presiding, Mrs. B. Quinn proposed that the Council express its most vigorous protest against the provisions of the Amending Education Bill at present before Parliament. The bill would deprive county councils of virtually all powers to manage transferred schools, and even provided schools, built out of public funds. The Council unanimously resolved to hold up all expenditure over which it had control until the bill had reached its full and final form, and that for the present no other building operations in connection with which loans were required would be sanctioned.

MYSTERY MAN IDENTIFIED.

At the meeting of the BELFAST Board of Guardians yesterday the Master reported that "Matt," a man who, suffering from loss of memory, came to the workhouse in November, 1927, and who had now gone to fill a post in England, had been identified. A Mr. and Mrs. King, of Crayford, Kent, had visited "Matt" at his new home and identified him by papers, a photograph and his Army pension book as John Francis Teel. "Matt," the Master explained, had served in the Royal Lancashire Regiment during the war, and was severely wounded. After the war he found work on the Gold Coast, and later returned to his home in Kent. He left Crayford on November 16, 1927, with a small attaché case, and turned up at the Belfast Workhouse eleven days later.

COMPULSORY IRISH.

At the meeting of the MEATH Agricultural Committee a letter was read from the Free State Department requesting to be informed whether the Committee desired in future that Irish should be included as an obligatory subject in the syllabus of the examination for male and female candidates competing for the award of scholarships offered by the committee. Mr. Murray said that he would most certainly favour this; but he would not make the examination too difficult—up to the sixth standard. Mr. McDonald—It is the language of the country. Captain Fowler—English is spoken all over the world. When you have travelled about as much as I have you will come to realise that. Mr. Murray proposed that Irish should be obligatory, and Mr. Kelly seconded. The motion was passed.

CANAL IMPROVEMENT SCHEME.

At the meeting of the NEWRY Urban Council a report was read from the Joint Committee of the Urban Council and Harbour Trust in charge of the canal improvement scheme to the effect that Mr. Milne Barbour, the Northern Ireland Minister of Commerce, had considered the modified scheme, as prepared by the consulting engineers, and that subject to satisfactory results from the preliminary borings, he was prepared to approve of a Government contribution of one half the estimated cost of the work. The estimated cost was set out as £43,970. The Minister stated that he was advised that the work would provide reasonable accommodation for future developments, including the accommodation of the Dundalk and Newry Steam Packet Company's proposed new steamer. The chairman (Mr. H. J. McConville, D.L.) proposed the adoption of the report. Mr. Bannon seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously.

At the meeting of the MEATH County Committee of Agriculture a letter was read from the Free State Department of Agriculture giving details of the conditions under which it proposes to make free grants to private owners of land and to local bodies for the purpose of planting or re-planting. The maximum grant was £4 per Statute acre, and the number of trees to the Statute acre 1,000.

A financial statement which was made at the monthly meeting of the Committee of Management of the FERMANAGH County Hospital, shows that last year the total expenditure was £5,232 0s. 6d. and the receipts £5,251 19s. 4d.; leaving a small net credit balance on the year's working, and this despite the fact that the number of patients showed an increase. The accumulated deficit of former years stood at £1,391 on April 1st, 1929, and on April 1st, 1930, the deficit was £935.

'BUS COMPANY MERGER.

The BELFAST Omnibus Company has arranged to acquire Spence's Triumph service, which operates between Belfast and Ballynahinch. The Triumph service is worked by nine omnibuses, and these are being taken over. The Spence Company operates from Belfast to Ballynahinch, Spa and Drumaness, also to Ballymachaskin, via Ballygowan and Florida. It is understood that negotiations are in progress for the acquisition of other concerns in B.O.C. territory, and that big developments are pending in Ulster transport circles.

DECISION REVERSED.

At DERRY Sessions Judge Osborne reversed the decision of Mr. R. W. Glass, R.M., at Eglinton Petty Sessions fining Captain William Millar, Farmhill, £1 and £1 costs for driving a motor car at Coolagh, Eglinton, in a manner dangerous to the public. It was alleged that the appellant, who was motoring on the occasion to Belfast, crashed into the rear of a 'bus, which had stopped in front of him to allow a restive horse to pass. Appellant's case was that the 'bus stopped without warning, and an accident was inevitable. The case was dismissed.

PROPOSED SUNSHINE HOME.

Recently the CLARE Board of Health acquired Edenvale House, near Ennis, as a county sanatorium, and the disposal of the old sanatorium at Ballymaley, Ennis, became the subject of consideration by a Special Committee. The Committee now has recommended the Board to transfer to the Dowager Lady Inchiquin and Mrs. Vere O'Brien jointly all interests in the lands and buildings which comprise the former sanatorium premises on condition that the premises shall be converted into a sunshine home for the treatment of children. The original County Clare Sanatorium was the gift of Lady Inchiquin, and was handed over by her to the County Council free of charge.

MIXED BATHING.

Strong protests having been made against the practice of mixed bathing at SALTERSTOWN, Louth Board of Health has decided to provide accommodation for women bathers if the local people help in raising the necessary money. A scheme to erect women's bathing boxes, springboards and to concrete the rocks along the beach was suggested, at a cost of £120, and the Board decided to proceed with a smaller scheme if the people of the district contributed £100. The Chairman (Mr. McGahon) stated that many years ago the Ardee Rural Council spent a lot of money on making the place suitable for bathing, but the storms had washed some of the huts away and complaints were received from the clergy and local residents about the use by women of the men's portion of the beach.

A WORTHLESS CHEQUE.

John Simms, of no fixed address, was sentenced at SWORDS to two months' imprisonment with hard labour when convicted of receiving £3 by means of a worthless cheque at Howth on October 28th, 1926. Simms, who pleaded guilty to the charge, said that he was arrested when leaving Maryborough Prison after serving a three years' sentence. The Justice—What about restitution of Mr. Bomford's £3? The Accused—I have a letter here from Fordson's of Cork offering me a job. The Justice—To impress me you will want to produce hard cash. The defendant—I suppose you would not take a cheque from me? (Laughter.)

FORFEITURE OF LICENCE.

Richard Harford, beer retailer, Malahide, was, at SWORDS District Court, fined £5 and his licence forfeited when he was convicted of a breach of the licensing laws by supplying drink for consumption on the premises. Superintendent O'Halloran, who prosecuted, said that the defendant was convicted and fined £3, £5 and £10 in similar cases before, and had his licence forfeited also; but appealed and had the Justice's decision reversed at the Circuit Court. Mr. C. McGonagle, solicitor, who defended, said that the defendant had kept a clean sheet since the last of these convictions, six years ago, and a conviction now would mean financial ruin for him. The Justice said that the defendant must have been aware of what the consequences would be, and he must fine him £5 and order the forfeiture of the licence.

DANGEROUS DRIVING.

At STRABANE Petty Sessions, before Captain Gosselin, R.M., a young man, Thomas G. Price, motor lorry driver, of Garvagh, Omagh, was charged by District Inspector Walshe with being drunk in charge of a motor lorry near Strabane, and also with reckless driving. An accident occurred to the lorry about a mile from Strabane, on the main road to Derry. The defendant was flung into a field, but got out after a few minutes' time, and the police that evening failed to trace the defendant at either Strabane or Omagh. Defendant denied that he was drunk. He also denied that he was driving recklessly. Captain Gosselin said that there was an element of doubt in regard to the first charge, and he dismissed it. With regard to the other, he had no doubt that this man was driving the lorry in a dangerous manner, and he fined him £5 on that charge, but, as he lived by what he earned from the lorry, he would not take away his licence this time.

AUCTION IN COURT.

The DERRY Recorder yesterday found himself in the position of an auctioneer at the Equity Sessions, where bidding and counter-bidding took place in connection with the disposal of a small farm, which, on the instructions of the Sheriff, had been twice put up for auction by Mr. Joseph Sherrard, Limavady, without attracting any bidders. Private offers had, however, been made, the highest being £125. Mr. W. J. G. Seeds said that he was instructed to make an offer in Court on behalf of a client for £125. Mr. Sherrard intimated that he had a client who, he thought, would go as far as £130, and he made that offer. The Recorder—This savours of an auction in Court. Mr. Seeds, will you go any higher? Mr. Seeds, having consulted his client, announced that he would raise his offer to £140. The Recorder—Now, Mr. Sherrard, what do you say? (Laughter.) Mr. Sherrard said that he thought he would be justified in pushing Mr. Seeds up to £150, and he, therefore, made an offer of £145. Mr. Seeds—Very well, £150. (Laughter.) The Recorder then figuratively let the hammer fall at this amount and confirmed the purchase.

SCENE OUTSIDE CHURCH.

At LURGAN Petty Sessions Court, before Messrs. H. D. Armstrong, J.P. (presiding), George McElroy R.M., and other Justices, District Inspector Duffy, of Lurgan, charged James McNeill (16), and William Forsythe (18), both of Mayranesty, for indulging in conduct likely to lead to a breach of the peace, and seeking to have them bound over to keep the peace. McNeill did not appear, but was represented by his father. It appeared from the evidence of Constables Allen and Clingan that they were on plain clothes duty on the evening of February 26th near the Bluestone Methodist Church, where there was a Service going on. There was a number of motor cars on the road, the occupants of which appeared to be in the church. There were nine or ten young men on the road (including the accused boys), and the police saw them examining all the cars and trying to open the doors. Two of the boys tried to break the door off one of the cars and wrench the handle off. The District Inspector said that there also was a charge against the boy McNeill, for assaulting Constable Allen by tripping him on the occasion, but, as he was under sixteen years of age, the summons would be heard in another Court. Both the defendants were bound over to keep the peace for twelve months—themselves in £5 each and one surety in £5.

Rheumatism
—now free,
thanks to Kruschen

"An excruciating pain in the left shoulder joint induced me to take Kruschen Salts, in an endeavour to obtain some rest at night. This happened in February last, and in spite of the intense cold, after taking Kruschen as directed for four days, the pain completely disappeared. The relief was wonderful. You are certainly right about 'the little daily dose.' For the first time for over ten years I have been free from skin trouble this year. Thus Kruschen kills two birds with the one stone."

G. G., Gainsborough.

It is the needle-pointed crystals of uric acid which are responsible for the agony of rheumatism. Kruschen Salts dissolve these torturing crystals and promptly expel them from the system. Moreover, Kruschen taken regularly makes it quite impossible for deadly uric acid ever to form again.

DUBLIN UNDECIDED.

COURTAULDS "SLUMP."

The uncertainties of the Stock Markets, so prominent of late, have not been relieved by the Budget proposals of the British Chancellor of the Exchequer. A great deal of extra money was wanted to bridge the deficit realised and in prospect, covering the current financial year, and the proposed extra taxation, as well as the policy outlined in connection therewith, were not generally satisfying. Irregular prices were current in Home and British Funds. Banks likewise showed fluctuations. Guinness Ord. only closed a few pence easier, despite the extra duty which brewers have to pay. British and Irish Steam remain firm. Great Southern Rail Ord. gave way, but the Pre-Ord. issues were scarce or higher, and Great Northern Guaranteed moved up one point. Dublin and Blessington Steam Tram Guaranteed were less firm. Johnston Bakery Ord. Shares fell back, but the Pref. remain bid for at an advance. Drapery Shares remain firm. Pim Brothers Debs. were nearly 4 points higher in a nominal market. Tobaccos jumped up sharply, as the Chancellor of the Exchequer passed the industry over in his hunt for the millions required. Coats were firm, but Courtaulds lost the previous day's advance on London sale pressure, though safeguarding duties were not interfered with at present. The element of uncertainty as to the future is possibly not a good point, but the fall was unexpected, when the industry escaped from legislative interference. Unilevers were banged down at the close. Nothing new developed in Trading, etc., Shares, beyond the dulness of Newspaper Shares. Leyland Motors advanced.

LONDON IRREGULAR.

FUNDS RALLY AFTER WEAKNESS.

The London Stock markets presented quite an animated appearance during the early hours of yesterday, and quotations began to be recorded at 10 o'clock, dealers arriving in the city earlier than usual in view of the Budget statement. Chief interest naturally centred around those markets affected by the Budget, and for the most part the opening levels were appreciably lower than the closing rates of Monday. British Funds were, perhaps, the heaviest sufferers owing to the lower net yields which will result from the increased income tax. Towards midday, however, a distinctly firmer tone developed, and not only were the initial losses wiped out, but the few movements scored at the close were favourable to holders. Little of interest transpired in Foreign Government Stocks, and for the most part the overnight levels were repeated. Home Rails made a satisfactory showing and Undergrounds and Metropolitans picked up the turn. Idle conditions ruled in Colonial and Foreign Rails, and the final levels for the most part were without material alteration.

There was not a great deal going on in the Industrial sections, but here and there firm features were manifest. Motors were favourably affected by the decision to retain the McKenna duties, but the best levels were not held. Breweries were depressed owing to the increased duty on beer.

INDUSTRIAL MARKET.

SOME BRIGHT SPOTS.

MOTOR SHARES SUPPORTED.

Despite Budget considerations, the near approach of the carry-over and the coming Easter vacation, a fair amount of business was transacted in the Industrial Market yesterday. Most of the changes, however, proved adverse to holders, though here and there a few bright spots were observable. While Breweries seemed uncertain, owing to the increased duty, the Tobacco leaders gathered strength in the absence of fresh taxation. Motor shares again met with good support following the retention of the McKenna duties. Rayon issues opened firm, but eased later on rumours of a further cut in yarn prices. With Wall street in uncertain mood, a further marking down of values was witnessed at first, but in the late "street" dealings a smart rally occurred.

Brazilian Tractions finished at 52, after being 50½, Nickels at 42 after 40⅞, and Hydros at 52¾ after 52, the last-named, however, showing a loss of 1½ on balance. International Holdings were offered down to 7½ at one time, steadying eventually to 7⅝. Radio Corporations dipped at one time to 59⅞, recovering at the finish to 61½.

Cables and Wireless Stocks remained on offer, the "A" at 55, the "B" around 23, and the Pref. at 96½. Canadian Marconis drooped to 32s. 6d.

The "Record" leaders ruled fairly steady, Columbia Graphophones at 6⅜ and H.M.V.'s at 4 7/16. Vocalions rallied to 12s. 4½d.

An active trading was seen among Motor Shares under the lead of Leylands, which finished 3s. 1½d. to the good at 72s. 6d. Austin Ord. were also in good request and finished 2s. higher at 32s., with the "B" Pref. 16s. 6d. buyers. Rolls-Royce improved to 45s. 6d., Morris Pref. to 22s. 4½d., Singers to 32s. 6d., Thomas Tillings to 4⅝, and Rovers to 8s. 7½d.

Good support was again forthcoming for the leading Tobacco Shares. Carreras "A" finished ½ up at 9⅝, the "B" Shares gaining 1s. 9d. at 25s. "Imps" rose 1/16 further to 4 15/16, with "Bats" also in evidence at 5 15/16.

Breweries moved irregularly. Allsopps found supporters at 25s. 6d., Meux's Ord. at 37s. 3d., Distillers at 67s. 9d., and Watney Defd. at 58s. 3d.; but Benskins were offered around 34s. 9d., Peter Walker at 16s. 6d., and South African Breweries Ord. at 61d. 3d.

After opening with a firm front at 2 11/16, Courtaulds gave way in the later dealings, the final quote of 2 19/32 leaving them 1/16 down on the day. British Celanese lost the turn at 17s., with American and Canadian Celanese unchanged. Branstons stiffened to 4s. 6d., with Snia Viscosa maintained at 13s.

Apart from Listers, which hardened a few pence to 15s., the Textile section presented a dull appearance. Bradford Dyers dwindled to 27s., "Slubbers" to 5s. 3d., and Fine Spinners to 24s. 6d., the rest closing quietly steady.

Among Food and Catering descriptions, Unilevers opened a firm spot at 3 19/32 following the publication of the report, but, although changing hands freely, sellers predominated, and they left off 1/16 lower at 3 17/32.

Among Bank issues, Bank of Montreal again found buyers and were lifted a point to 65.

In the Insurance section North British and Mercantiles attracted attention, and rose ¼ to 35¾. In the Shipping issues Cunards ruled firm around 23s., with other issues almost neglected.

British Portland Cement 5 p.c. Debenture stock gained 2 to 97½, and Associated Portland 5 p.c. Second Debenture stock closed 1 higher at 95½.

In the Miscellaneous section, Kreuger and Toll were offered, and, with support lacking, the shares gave way ½ further to 32½. Swedish Match were the turn lower at 17⅝. Imperial Chemicals remained at 26s. 6d., after a fair turnover, but Dunlops drooped to 14s. 4½d. United Molasses were scaled down 1/16 to 5⅛.

RECENT ISSUE DEALINGS.

Dealings continued on a small scale, there being no quotable variation, with the exception of a further fractional improvement in Tate and Lyle Debentures to 3⅛ premium.

LITTLE BUSINESS IN OILS.

Dealings in Oil shares were on an extremely small scale yesterday, even the recognised leaders commanding little attention. The approach of the carry-over and the Easter holidays naturally tended to restrict business. The oil industry is not directly affected by the Budget proposals, the anticipated increased taxation on petrol not having materialised. Profits of oil companies, however, will be affected, as will also dividends paid to shareholders by the higher income tax. At the close a fairly lengthy list of price movements was registered, but, while they were mainly against holders, the margins with few exceptions were narrow.

RUBBER SHARES DULL.

The volume of dealings put through in the Rubber Share market remained on an extremely small scale, while in sympathy with the further depreciation in commodity quotations share values were again marked back in a number of directions. Extremely quiet conditions ruled in the raw material market and lower values were returned. Spot and April, also May, sold from 7⅜d. to 7 5/16d. per lb., while May to June fetched only 7⅝d. per lb., and July to September closed no better than 7 13/16d., after opening at 7⅞d. per lb.

LONDON "STREET" MARKET.

There was not a great deal of business passing in the street last evening, and few shares changed hands. In the Anglo-American section the tendency was easier. Brazil Tractions and Nickels were offered at 51½ and 41¼ respectively. Columbias were also out of favour, and changed hands down to 6 5/16, while Radios were offered at 60½. Hydros were steadily maintained at 52½.

LONDON MINING MARKET IDLE.

TIN SHARES DEPRESSED.

Idle conditions characterised the Mining share market yesterday, and, in view of the further depreciation in metal values, quotations were lowered in all directions. Kaffirs were almost friendless, the absence of public interest here and at the Cape, coupled with a little offering of French favourites, causing prices to take a downward trend. There was very little real selling, and in most cases the declines were the result of the adoption of precautionary measures by dealers. Diamonds were unable to shake off their dulness, and Consolidated Diamonds lost the small improvement scored on the preceding day. The price of tin further eased to £164 17s. 6d. per ton, and the share market became rather depressed. There was very little real selling, but apparently the surrounding conditions encouraged the "bears," and thus some of the counters which have recently been on the up grade suffered. The slump in the price of copper both here and in New York—the London closing quotation of £61 17s. 6d. per ton showed a loss of £4 15s. on the day—caused all-round weakness in Copper shares. Closing prices:—

THE MONEY MARKET.

GOLD FOR GERMANY.

There were some considerable disbursements of Government and other interests yesterday, amounting to nearly £8,000,000, and this caused some movement of funds in the Money market. One of the banks was calling in for making-up purposes, and altogether credit was more usable. Old money was renewed at 2½ per cent. for either a day or a week, while most new borrowers had to pay 3 per cent., and sometimes more, for advances until to-day.

Bank Rate Discount (changed March 20, 1930)				3½%
60 days (fine)	2 5/16%

" for a week				2½%
Deposit Allowance: Banks at Call				1½%
" " Discount Houses at Call				1½%
" " at Notice				1¾%

The tone of the Discount market was firmer, the minimum rate for fine three months' bank bills being 2½ per cent. The new Treasuries were offered up to 2 15/32 per cent.

About £397,000 in Cape gold was in the market, all of which, with the exception of £59,000 allotted to India and the trade, was taken by Germany at the reduced price of 84s. 10½d. per oz. fine. Silver was unchanged for spot at 19 5/16d. per oz., but was 1/16d. easier for forward delivery at 19¼d. per oz.

Mainly owing to Budget influences, movements in the Foreign Exchange Market yesterday were for the most part adverse to sterling. The largest change was recorded by the franc rate, which, after falling late in the day to 124.05, was finally quoted at 124.05 as compared with 124.17. Belgas were ¼c. cheaper on the day at 34.83½, while Italian lire moved against London to the extent of 1c. In the Scandinavian section, Swedish kronor were at one time quoted at 18.08½, but were unchanged on balance at 18.09, while the Norwegian and Danish exchanges also closed without change. Sterling on New York was weaker, and after being quoted at 4.86¼ closed at 4.86 5/16 as compared with Monday's final quotation of a little over 4.86 5/16. Canadian dollars were 1/16 dearer at 4.86 5/16. Among the South American exchanges, Argentine dollars lacked support, the closing rate being 43 15/16d., and milreis were fractionally cheaper at 5 13/16d. In the Far Eastern section, Shanghai taels cheapened ¼d. to 23¼d., while Hong Kong dollars were finally quoted at 18 5/16d. as compared with 18⅜d.

FOREIGN INSURANCE COMPANIES IN SAORSTAT EIREANN.

Readers of the Irish Press will for some time past have noticed the protests which have been made to the Saorstat Government and to the public in regard to the extent of life assurance business conducted in this country by companies domiciled in the United Kingdom. While we sympathise with some of these protests, it is interesting to note that the largest of these companies—the Prudential—is doing all that a foreign company can to meet the views of Irish citizens.

The Prudential are now issuing in their industrial branch special Saorstat Eireann policies, the premiums and benefits being payable in our currency, and each policy being sealed with a special Saorstat Eireann seal and stamped with a Saorstat Revenue stamp. Arrangements also are being made for the purchase of Irish paper and for the printing of all policies and other documents in this country. It is also of interest to note that the business of the Prudential in Ireland is conducted by a staff of Irishmen, to whom, as in the past, the highest positions in the company's service are open.

The very valuable financial support given to hospitals by some of the big insurance offices is not generally known. The Prudential Assurance Company and the Prudential Approved Societies, for example, contribute largely each year to nearly 400 hospitals and maintain no fewer than 668 beds and cots. Last year hospitals in Saorstat Eireann received from this source not far short of £1,000.

BUYER OF THE ENO BUSINESS IN ANOTHER BIG DEAL.

Mr. Harold F. Ritchie, the Canadian millionaire and President of the International Proprietaries, Ltd., whose spectacular purchase about two years ago of the world-famous business of Eno's "Fruit Salt" will be recalled, is the central figure in another important deal. In conjunction with a group of associates, he has just bought the Pompeian Company from the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company, with the object of developing and greatly enlarging the Pompeian Beauty preparations business. These products are well known to the trade and public of this and other countries, and their distribution in future throughout the world will be handled by Mr. Ritchie's sales organisations.

WIRELESS SOCIETY OF IRELAND

A meeting of the Transmitters' Section of the Wireless Society of Ireland was held last Monday at the Society's rooms, 12 Trinity street, Dublin, when Mr. D. F. O'Dwyer occupied the chair.

Mr. J. B. Scott, B.A., gave an interesting description of his short wave Transmitting Station, F17C. He described the general lay-out of his station, and showed how, by a system of switching, transmissions could be carried out on 42, 21 or 10 metres.

A vote of thanks was proposed to Mr. Scott by Mr. H. Hodgens, and was seconded by Mr. Yarbron.

BRITISH REVENUE.

British ordinary revenue from April 1 to April 12 was £29,074,390, and expenditure £52,676,954. In the corresponding period last year the revenue was £27,109,960, and expenditure £54,542,784.

FINANCIAL PARAGRAPHS.

THE CITY AND THE BUDGET.

Less effect was produced upon Stock Exchange securities from the Chancellor's proposals than might have been expected. The increase in the income tax from 4s. to 4s. 6d. in the pound reduces the real or net yield upon all fixed interest securities, and, in the ordinary course might have been regarded as justification for a fall of a point or two in British Government stocks. At first the market was certainly easier, but the decline was by no means substantial, and afterwards the market settled down, the tone of the Gilt-edged group became quite strong, and in several cases there was a rise in price. This rather suggests that official support had been given to the market. While the increase in the income tax, as stated, is a "bear" point for the funds, operators were favourably impressed by the virtual promise that there will be no increase of taxation next year. It is also reassuring that the realised deficit of the past year is to be dealt with by placing a corresponding sum, spread over three years, to debt redemption. The suggestion of the Chancellor that any future deficits should be similarly dealt with, is considered sound finance.

DEBT CONVERSION.

One surprise of the Budget speech, beyond the unexpected increase in the income tax, is the absence of any reference to a project for dealing with at least a portion of the 5 per cent. War Loan. It had been thought that a plan would have been outlined for offering holders of this security an exchange into a definitely long-dated stock carrying a lower rate of interest, say, 4½ or 4 per cent., and it may be that the absence of any such proposal in the Budget speech contributed to yesterday's recovery in Gilt-edged securities. In other departments, Tobacco shares were favourably influenced by the fact that that industry is not called upon to bear any increase of taxation. Shares of motor companies were strong, but Courtaulds reacted after the previous day's somewhat exceptional rise. One aspect of the Budget proposals was discussed yesterday—namely, the possibility that the increase of direct taxation and the consequent reduction in the net yield from fixed interest securities will tend to encourage speculative rather than investment business on the Stock Exchange. Those who take this view do so on the ground that the provisions of the Budget are not calculated to encourage thrift, either among people with moderate incomes or those in a more fortunate category.

EASTER HOLIDAYS.

The Dublin Stock Exchange will be closed from Friday, 18th inst., to Monday, the 21st inst., inclusive.

LEGAL TENDER NOTE FUND.

The amount of legal tender notes outstanding on April 12 was £7,338,774, as compared with £7,244,325 10s. at the end of the previous week. The amount issued during the week was £246,425, and the amount redeemed £151,976 10s.

GERMAN FILM FEARS.

Of the 1,216 cinemas in the larger German towns, 420 are now equipped for tone films. Some 4,000 musicians have been affected by the transformation, and their unions are offering all possible opposition to the talking pictures. At a meeting of the central organisation of the German film industry it was declared that public interest would be concerned in any attempt to establish either home or foreign trust covering patent rights and aimed at controlling the entire German film production. This is understood to be connected with the latest news from America regarding the Tobis negotiations with Warner Brothers, it being feared that a participation of the American concern in the Tobis would adversely affect German production.

AMERICAN RUBBER CONSUMPTION.

Rubber consumption in America during March amounted to 35,914 tons, against 32,726 tons in February and 36,669 tons in January. This was rather below the majority of estimates, a total of 38,000 tons having been forecast in most quarters. The total consumption for the first quarter of the year works out at 105,309 tons, compared with 125,326 tons for the same period in 1929. Reclaimed consumption during March was 15,616 tons against 14,918 tons, and an average monthly figure of 18,638 tons during 1929.

DUBLIN CORPORATION LOAN.

Messrs. Guinness, Mahon and Company announce that letters of allotment in connection with the issue they have made on behalf of the Dublin Corporation have been posted, and are on the basis of full allotment to applicants up to £300 of Stock; above this amount the allotment is gradually scaled down.

BRITISH EMPIRE STEEL CORPORATION REORGANISATION.

A Reuter's telegram dated Montreal, Tuesday, says:—The radical reorganisation and consolidation of the capital structure of the British Empire Steel Corporation and its subsidiary companies—the Dominion Steel Company and the Dominion Iron and Steel Corporation—are announced by the directorate. Under the plan the shares and securities of these companies will be exchanged for shares and securities of a single new company called the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation. The plan involves the drastic reduction of the present capital and the substitution of new stock in one corporate entity, in an aggregate amount based on the average annual net earnings of the properties during the last three years, capitalised at 6 per cent. The total number of Common shares which it is proposed should be issued by the new company is 841,756 of par value of $25, and are on the basis of 6 per cent. earnings. A shareholders' meeting will be held in Montreal, on May 15th, to ratify this reorganisation.

BRITISH CELANESE.

A circular to shareholders of British Celanese states that for the twelve months ended February 28, 1930, the turnover was more than 50 p.c. in excess of the value of the previous year, and substantially more than that percentage in weight. The trading profit also shows an increase of over 50 p.c., and after charging the Excise duty and all expenses, but before providing for the debenture services, depreciation, research and other appropriations, the estimated profit is in excess of £1,100,000.

CAMMELL LAIRD DEBENTURES.

On July 1 next the outstanding £438,667 5 p.c. 1st Mort. Deb. Stock and the £343,662 outstanding 4½ p.c. Deb. Stock of Cammell Laird and Co. fall due for repayment. It has been decided to ask both the 5 p.c. 1st and the 4½ p.c. Deb. Stockholders to extend the date for the repayment of these stocks for a period of five years from July 1, 1930, the rate of interest in each case being increased to 5½ p.c., the company retaining its existing rights to redeem at any time during the five years, the 5 p.c. 1st Mort. Deb. Stock at 105 p.c., and the 4½ p.c. Deb. Stock at 102½ p.c. So long as any part of either of these stocks remains outstanding, no dividend will be paid to the shareholders of the company.

A TRUE SKIN REMEDY AT LAST

That Eczema, Psoriasis, and other Eczematous eruptions are difficult of treatment is frequently due to failure to attack the malady at its root. Pore-clogging ointments, whilst perhaps affording superficial relief, actually serve as a hotbed and nursery for the germs and corroding impurities ensconced in the deeper layers of the skin tissues. D.D.D. Prescription penetrates to the very source of the eruption, stops the itching within two or three seconds of applying, and in a few days the condition of the skin will be so far improved as to convince the user that here, at last, is real relief. D.D.D. Prescription can be obtained from your chemist at 1/6 per bottle. Start your cure to-day.

LICENSED GROCERS.

CONFERENCE AFTER EASTER.

Mr. Peter McGovern presided at the usual weekly meeting of the Committee of the Licensed Grocers' and Vintners' Association in Dublin yesterday.

The Secretary submitted a large volume of correspondence received since the last meeting having reference to the outline of the national and economic policy recently published, the proposed Licensing Amendment Bill, the Travelling Shop and Town Booth, and many other matters.

The Chairman, referring to the adjourned conference to give shape to the policy recently circulated, which, he said, would be held as early after Easter as may be convenient, hoped that their friends in the trade throughout the country who had given the idea their hearty approval, and the many other influential people outside the trade who had done likewise, would take the necessary steps to be represented at the gathering, due notice of which would be given them.

PURE BROCCOLI.

Writing on this subject in the Weekly Irish Times, the Garden Correspondent says:—We consider the late Sprouting Purple Broccoli the finest of all winter vegetables of the kind, and we are glad to see that it is gaining ground and favour in Irish gardens, where the only thing against it has been the name, Purple, and that does not count in the cooking. More, its prolific sprouting, suggesting pick and pick again, until picked to the bone, makes this vegetable one of the best of paying crops. We like to sow seeds during this month on a little patch of good, friable soil for future transplanting, ere the plants are put out permanently three feet apart, and at the same time sturdy old Curly Kale may not be overlooked for sowing on the same lines, and that at the moment is proving its usefulness, especially after the season's cruelty to the spring cabbage crop aided and abetted by the woodquests.

HATCHING OF TURKEYS.

Writing on this subject in the Weekly Irish Times, the Poultry Correspondent says:—Though May is the usual month for hatching turkeys, if the weather is suitable and fertile eggs can be obtained, April is not too soon. As the Christmas market is the time when most turkey-rearers sell their birds, the earlier they are hatched the larger they will be then, and we know that the large and well-fatted birds will bring the highest price. Judging from the numbers sent to market last Christmas, it seems that there are now many in this country who go in for rearing them. There used to be an idea that they were very delicate and difficult to rear. As a matter of fact, when they get beyond the age at which they "shoot the red"—that is, about eight or ten weeks—they become the hardiest of any poultry, and can be allowed to roam about in all weathers, roosting in the trees without any injury.

SHERWIN-WILLIAMS PAINTS

When neighbouring paintwork is shabb and cracked the S.W.P. that was put on at the same time stands out as a super paint—still colourful, still spruce looking, still hard and weather resisting. To excel in smartness pain with S.W.P. Decorators' Oil Paint, will be long before you have to re paint. Colour patterns free.
